BIG STRIKE NOW LIKELY TO SPREAD

Maintenance of Way Men Clamoring to Establish General Tie-up

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, July 13.—Spread of the strike of 300,000 railway shopmen to include an equal or greater number of maintenance of way employees loomed tonight.

A majority of the general chairmen of the United Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees and Railway Shop Laborers are in favor of joining the walkout, according to a report from Cincinnati, disregarding the refusal of E. F. Grable, international president of the organization to sanction a strike.

The report was contained in a statement made by T. C. Carroll, president of the General Chairmen's Association of the maintenance brotherhood. Mr. Carroll was quoted as saying he had received from a majority of the general chairmen requests that he call them together in an association meeting at which plans for calling the 400,000 maintenance men out might be made.

President Grable, en route from Kansas City to his headquarters in Detroit was in midnight conference with B. M. Jewell, head of the striking shopcrafts in the latter's office. He said he would remain firm in his refusal to authorize a walkout and that the general chairmen did not have authority to do so.

Two points were cited in some quarters as indication that the refusal of railway executives to meet Mr. Jewell did not necessarily blight peace prospects. One was the fact that the executives who signed the letter to Chairman Hooper—chairmen of four regional railway committees representing roads in all parts of the country—admitted they were not authorized to speak for individual carriers. The other was a seeming desire on the part of some roads in the Northwest to settle the strike on a give-and-take basis.

Threatening to burn the Missouri Pacific shops at Poplar Bluff, Mo., forty strikers are said to have left Hoxie, Mo., for the first named town this afternoon. Their departure reported by railway officials brought forth immediate entrainment of companies A, B, D, and K of the One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Infantry, Missouri National Guard, from St. Louis to Poplar Bluffs. At midnight no violence had occurred.

One man was perhaps fatally wounded, several were seriously injured, and numerous others beaten, bruised, stoned this afternoon, when about seventy-five strikers stormed the Western Pacific roundhouse, at Oroville, Cal.

NO TRUTH IN SECRET MARRIAGE

Marilynn Miller's Mother Denies Rumor of Wedding Having Happened

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, July 13.—Strenuous denial was made today by Mrs. A. V. Miller, mother of Marilynn, the effervescent star of "Sally," that Marilynn had been secretly married to Jack Pickford several days ago.

Mrs. John Steele Sweeney, an older sister of Marilynn, also denied there had been a secret marriage in June. She said letters from Marilynn all indicated the marriage would take place in August.

Mrs. Miller granted an interview from the depths of her bed in the Hotel Sherman, where she was convalescing from the complications of a severe cold and her distressing experiences at two other hotels.

"It is a vicious lie that I was requested to leave the Edgewater Beach Hotel. I left there because I had a quarreling couple on one side and a musician on the other. Tuesday evening a friend of Marilynn's and three young boys dropped in to visit me, but we were not noisy and were not requested to leave. Neither was I ordered from the Blackstone Hotel. They wanted to charge me $15 for a bare little room, and I decided to leave there."

GUARDSMEN ORDERED TO DUTY

FRANKFORT (Ky.) July 13.—Thirty-five Kentucky National Guardsmen were today ordered by Gov. Morrow to proceed to Packard, Ky., for guard duty at the mine of the Mashan Jellico Coal Company. The Governor's action was taken at the request of the Whitley county officials. Several weeks ago the tipple at this mine, which employs about six nonunion miners, was burned. Deputy Sheriffs have been on guard there since.

MEXICAN REBELS ARE VICTORIOUS

After the rout, the advices added, many Federal soldiers joined Carrasco, whose band now is believed to number more than 1000. The government is reported to be rushing reinforcements to the Mazatlan zone in preparation for another attack. All government troops stationed in Sonora, it is said, have been sent south to Sinaloa.

OIL MAN SAYS WIFE'S JEALOUSY MOTIVE FOR YOUNG GIRL'S MURDER

Accused of beating Mrs. Alberta Meadows, twenty-year-old widow, to death with a hammer last Wednesday because of furious jealousy, Mrs. Clara Phillips, aged 23 years, was arrested late last night in Tucson, Ariz., on telegraphic orders from Sheriff Traeger, following admissions made by her husband, A. L. Phillips, a Los Angeles oil promoter, living at 703 West Fifty-third street.

Press dispatches from Tucson early this morning said that Mrs. Phillips when arrested, persistently insisted that her name was Mrs. Clara McGuyer. On a pasteboard box in the woman's possessions, according to the police, was written the name "Clara Phillips."

Mrs. Phillips took her arrest calmly, and said she was married and 23 years old. In her berth on the train were copies of Los Angeles newspapers carrying full accounts of the murder of which she is accused. After a severe grilling by local police she was locked in a cell at the Tucson City Jail.

The arrest solves the mystery of the brutal butchery of last Wednesday afternoon, when the body of Mrs. Meadows, then unidentified, was found on a hillside, within three feet of Montecito Drive, one mile from the end of the Griffin-avenue car line, according to Sheriff Traeger.

An unwarranted jealousy, a sudden planning of the slaying, a clever decoy to get the victim to the scene of the murder, the fight between the two woman, so evenly matched in size and age; the blow with the hammer and then the stealing of the slain girl's automobile, a flight home, a confession to the husband; his frantic efforts to aid her in fleeing from the State, the disposal of the Meadows automobile and the departure on the fast Southern Pacific train early yesterday morning for El Paso.

ADMISSIONS CORROBORATED

Such are the incidents quickly sketched in the husband's story to Sheriff Traeger. The points in his story have been checked, one by one, under the direction of Undersheriff Biscailuz and Superintendent of Criminal Investigation Manning. They corroborate his story, the officers say.

The admissions by the distracted husband came late in the day after Mrs. Meadow's body had lain at the John R. Paul morgue for twenty-four hours without being identified. After wandering about the streets of Los Angeles all Wednesday night, following his wife's confession, he aided her to leave town in the morning and at last, exhausted by the terrible mental strain, confided all to his attorney. The attorney, whose name

WOMAN IS MURDERED BY THUGS

Aged Illinois Spinster Victim of Brutal Attack by Four Highwaymen

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

MACKINAW (Ill.) July 13.—Armed posses of farmers and local police officials are patrolling all roads and searching for four robbers, who late last night murdered Miss Sue Harris, aged 60, younger of two spinster sisters at the old Harris homestead, three miles from here. She and her sister Hattie, 65 years old, had lived alone in the big house for years. The surviving sister is believed to be dying of shock.

Four men, believed to have been foreigners, broke into the house after midnight and bound and gagged the two helpless women. Two hours after they had departed, Hattie managed to loosen her bonds and staggered into her sister's bedroom. Sue Harris lay across the bed, tied hand and foot, torn and disheveled as if she had fought desperately. A blow on the head, presumably with a pistol butt or short crowbar, had killed her.

Mrs. Woods, a trained nurse who had been staying with the sisters, fled for help when she heard the bandits breaking down the doors. She roused nearby farmers and posses were quickly formed, but they were too late. Four men in a large automobile carrying no lights or license number were seen speeding away shortly after the murder.

Everything in the house had been ransacked, the robbers evidently believing the sisters had a large amount of money concealed there. Citizens of Mackinaw today raised $500, to which the County Commissioners and a brother of the murdered woman added $500, as a reward for apprehension of the slayers.

ONE MAN HOLDS UP DOWNTOWN CAFES

Two downtown cafes were held up within fifteen minutes last night by the same bandit. Entering the Orpheum Grill, 329½ South Hill street, the hold-up looted the cash register of $25, while he held Louise Bourles, the manager, at the point of a gun.

Fifteen minutes later the same man stepped into the Eden Cafe, 711 South Figueroa street, and attempted to open the cash register. C. J. Somers, the proprietor, armed himself with a butcher knife and E. Rigley, the cook, grabbed a can of tomatoes. The burglar pulled his gun and backed out of the door. The cash register was locked and he obtained nothing at the latter place.

has been withheld, advised him to tell his story to Sheriff Traeger.

Aided by his account of what his wife had said and through fast work in checking his story in a dozen different points, the Sheriff's office three hours later telegraphed to Revealing what is regarded as the most amazing crime in many years, the Sheriff's office last night, co-incidently with the arrest, made public details of the murder as related by Mr. Phillips.

DECOY PLAN TOLD

Mrs. Meadows, whose husband was killed by electricity here several months ago, was a book-keeper at the First National Bank. She left the bank about 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

At a parking station, Ninth and Main strets, Mrs. Meadows kept her Ford runabout. When she reached there Wednesday afternoon she saw Mrs. Phillips. The latter had been downtown shopping. In the course of her shopping expedition she purchased a hammer.

"Are you going home?" Mrs. Phillips said.

"Yes," was the reply.

"Have you time to take me home?"

"Yes, I have nothing to do the rest of the afternoon."

"Then I wish you would take me to my sister's home," Mrs. Phillips said.

The two women knew each other and were on friendly terms, or at least so it seemed.

They got in the runabout and Mrs. Phillips directed her to the lonely road where the murder was committed. When they reached a desolate spot, Mrs. Phillips asked her to stop.

DEMANDS ACCOUNTING

"Let's get out, I want to talk something over with you," she said.

When they stepped from the automobile, Mrs. Phillips demanded, "I want to know what your relations are with my husband?"

The young widow denied any improper relations. The wife immediately told her of several asserted incidents to which she attached great importance, but which Mr. Phillips says were only idle gossip by neighbors.

The two women, quarreling about the man, grew angry. Hot words followed quickly, then Mrs. Phillips grasped her newly-purchased hammer and hit the widow.

A terrific struggle ensued. There against the skyline of the hill the two women battled for several moments. Mrs. Phillips told her husband that she struck again with the hammer when she thought Mrs. Meadows was about to jump upon her.

Again and again the hammer was driven against the young woman's head. And when all life was gone and the brown hair was matted with blood, and the head crushed in at several places, the body was left just where it had fallen, less than a yard from the roadside.

APPEALS TO HUSBAND

Mrs. Phillips is an expert driver of automobiles. She climbed again into the coupe and drove to her home on West Fifty-third street. Her clothing was blood-soaked. Her hair was dishevelled and she was on the verge of a collapse.

She rushed into the house and cried to her husband, "Don't leave, Don't leave." She became hysterical and shouted, "I've killed the one you love best. You'll never see her again. Oh, I can't live without you."

"My God, you're in a horrible condition," the husband replied. He helped her wash her clothing in the bathtub, as she sobbed out the story of the afternoon's tragedy.

Her sister and her mother, living in the same house, must not know, the couple decided, and with Mrs. Phillips afraid of detection, they left home as quickly as they could.

Mrs. Phillips registered at the Baltimore Hotel as Mrs. R. S. Johnson and spent the night here in a room at the hotel, while her husband paced the streets of the city, thinking out his problem alone.

GOADED BY TRAGEDY

Early yesterday morning he joined her and they decided that she would leave for El Paso. He borrowed $60 from a friend until the bank opened and giving her this in addition to the other money he had, they bought a ticket at the Southern Pacific station and Mrs. Phillips left on the train at 8:30 o'clock.

Mr. Phillips watched her walk toward the train, with a red cap, carrying her black handbag. For hours he debated with himself and at last sought counsel with his attorney. It was then that Sheriff Traeger was advised of the case.

Sup. Manning and Undersheriff Biscailus immediately detailed the following deputies on the case DeWar, Nolad, Bell, Bright, and Capt. A. C. Jewell of the civil department. A quick check was made at Pomona and through the officers there the coupe was found where Mr. Phillips had said it was abandoned.

FIND GIRL'S RELATIVES

Further check was made at the home of Mrs. Phillips and Mrs. Meadows. At the former's home, Miss Ola Weaver, a sister, was talked with. Her story served as corroboration, the officers said. The mother of the accused woman, Mrs. Weaver, was not told of the suspicion directed at her daughter.

Miss Genora Tremain, sister of the slain woman, who is employed at the First National Bank, had not missed Mrs. Meadows, who lived at a separate address. By a coincidence, Miss Tremain did not report for work yesterday, either, and thus did not know her sister was not at her usual place in the bank.

The slain girl's parents, Fred A. Tremain and Mrs. Anna Tremain, also talked with the officers and served to corroborate the information about the dead woman's identity.

CALL FOR ARREST SENT

Convinced by this time that the story was genuine and that Mrs. Phillips must be apprehended, Mr. Manning dispatched the following telegram to Tucson:

"Chief of Police, Tucson, Ariz. Arrest Mrs. Clara Phillips, alias Mrs. R. S. Jackson, left Los Angeles at 8:30 a.m. today for El Paso, holding lower berth. Age 25, five feet six inches, weight 127 pounds, light complexion, light brown hair, brown eyes, slender build, small feet and hands, dressed in brown sailor, brown coat suit, black handbag, wearing several diamonds on fingers. Arrive Tucson 11:30. Wanted for brutal murder. Have wired conductor. Search her thoroughly to prevent suicide. Wire when under arrest. Will send officer. (Signed) W. I. Traeger, Sheriff."

Following additional questioning last night at the Sheriff's office, Mr. Phillips was permitted to leave under custody of Deputy Frank De War. He was told that he was at liberty to transact business and was not unreasonably restricted in his movements, but that Mr. De War would remain with him.

SHERIFF LEAVES TODAY

Sheriff Traeger and Mrs. Traeger, who will act as companion to the woman, will leave for Tucson at 8:30 this morning, according to the arrangements made after the receipt of the news that the arrest was made.

The confirmation of the arrest came to the Sheriff's office a few minutes after the train arrived in Tucson. J. W. McKinley, dispatcher for the Southern Pacific Railroad, assisted the Sheriff's office in obtaining a clear line to Tucson and in keeping in touch with the conductor of the train to make the arrest and identification. In recognition of his services Sheriff Traeger made Dispatcher McKinley an honorary deputy Sheriff.

"Party taken into custody by local police.

(Signed) "CHIEF OF POLICE."

Later dispatches from Tucson said the woman taken into custody gave the name of Mrs. Clara McGuier.

"I feel certain Mrs. Phillips will not fight extradition. She will be glad to return with Sheriff Traeger. She wanted to give herself up before she left. So far as I am concerned I shall make no efforts to keep her and will place no obstacles in the way of the authorities in bringing her here," Mr. Phillips said when informed his wife had been taken into custody.

GIRL HAD NEW TRUNK

Mr. De War, who was one of the officers to visit the home of the dead girl, said a new trunk and a new suitcase were delivered to her yesterday afternoon, apparently having been ordered on the day she was killed.

The solution of Mrs. Meadow's identity ended a twenty-four-hour vigil by the police with the homicide squad, headed by Detective Sergeant Herman Cline in charge. Officers from Lincoln Heights Station aided in the careful canvass of the entire neighborhood and probably not fewer than 1000 persons viewed the body with a hope of identifying it.

Search of the scene of the crime was again made. Dozens of seeming clews were run down unsuccessfully. Among the police officers aiding in the investigation were Captain of Detectives Grant Rebarda, Sr., Detective Sergeants Longuevan, James, Trainor, Craig and Stelzreide.

JOHNSON'S CAMPAIGN LAUNCHED

Small Crowd Hears Defense of Senator at Long Beach

The campaign of Hiram Johnson for re-election to the United States Senate was opened at a sparsely-attended meeting on the pier at Long Beach last evening. A total of sixty-two persons, including the doorkeeper, heard the principal address by Attorney Milton, which consisted chiefly of a defense of Senator Johnson.

Mr. Milton admitted that Johnson accepted a fee for appearing in the New York traction cases, declaring that he did so because the city of New York was in the right in a controversy with up-State elements and because he needed the money. He declared that Senator Johnson was responsible for the Child Labor Act recently declared unconstitutional and made an appeal to union labor with a defense of the Seaman's Act. He declared that the spirit of the Bull Moose still stalks abroad and that Johnson is the legitimate heir to the mantle of Theodore Roosevelt.

Grand River Flood Stage Still Rising

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHILLICOTHE (O.) July 13. — The Grand River here has passed the 26-foot stage and is rising six inches an hour. A thirty-foot stage is predicted by the government forecaster here and thousands of acres of crops are being flooded.

At Fattonsburg, where the flood water covered the main street to a depth of two feet yesterday, the river is falling today and the streets ar free of water though a heavy deposit of mud was left behind.

MUSCLE SHOALS VOTE SLATED TOMORROW

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 13.—After a stormy session the Senate Agricultural Committee decided tonight to postpone action on the Ford and other offers for development of the government's properties at Muscle Shoals, Ala., until Saturday.

At that time the committee agreed to vote without further debate on the question of reporting one of the proposals to the Senate for final consideration there.

SENDS LONG MISSIVE TO HIS SPOUSE

Husband of Jailed Woman Weites Letter Explaining Why he Told Secret

Immediately after receiving the message that his wife had been arrested for the brutal hammer murder of Alberta Meadows by the Tucson Chief of Police, A. L. Phillips spent twenty minutes in writing a long letter to her.

The letter, which was intrusted to Sheriff Traeger to be delivered to Mrs. Phillips, was the husband's confession to his wife that he had betrayed her confidence and had informed the Sheriff's office of her asserted murderous deed. He also wrote many paragraphs telling her to forgive him, that he had done his duty as he saw it, and condoling with her for the plight into which she had precipitated herself.

Mr. Phillips also instructed her to tell her story to no persons but the law authorities and to refuse to receive any other persons.

Throughout the evening Mr. Phillips waited in Undersheriff Biscailus' office, waiting through the long hours to learn of her arrest. Following the receipt of the news he voluntarily remained in the custody of the Sheriff and accompanied Deputy Sheriff Frank DeWar to a downtown hotel to spend the night.

During Mr. Phillips's stay at the Sheriff's office Fred Tremaine, father of the murdered girl, sat impatiently in the adjoining room, but a meeting between the two men was cautiously prevented.

ADOPT SIGNS FOR SAFETY OF MINERS

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

CHICAGO, July 13.-A standardized warning sign for use in mines was adopted today by the Mine Inspectors' Institute of America, in convention here.

The sign, made of metal, will be posted at all danger points inscribed variously to denote the danger as "gas" if there is explosive gas near; "roof" if there is danger of falling slate; "wires" if the electric wires are low; and "black damp" where bad air pockets exist.

It was also decided that the open torch carried on miners' caps in mines supposed to be free from gas must be replaced by safety lights.

EYEWITNESS TELLS TALE OF MURDER

Volunteers Story About Killing; Will be State's Star Witness

A third woman, who was present at the time of the hammer murder, appeared at the Central Police Station late last night and volunteered an eyewitness story of the killing to Detective Sergeant Herman Cline, head of the homicide squad.

She told of accompanying Mrs. Meadows and Mrs. Phillips up the hill in the automobile and of the quarrel which started. When the latter began to beat Mrs. Meadows with the hammer, she says, she jumped into the car and drove down the hill. There she waited, too terrified to go farther.

Finally Mrs. Phillips, running down the road, joined this third woman, according to the story the detectives gave out.

"I'll kill you if you say anything about this," was her threat as she jumped into the machine.

The police refused to disclose the nature of the quarrel which led to the murder, nor would they give the eyewitness' name. She will be the State's star witness in the trial of Mrs. Phillips, and as such she is being carefully watched.

MANILA, July 13.—Five representatives, elected to the Philippine Assembly on other tickets, have switched their support to Manuel Quezon, whose party requires only five more votes to control the Legislature.

Latest reports involve Aguinaldo, who accepted $25,000 out of the $500,000 "independence fund" to pay for a propaganda trip throughout the United States. Gen. and Mrs. Aguinaldo will leave Manila aboard the President Jackson on the 23rd inst., visiting Los Angeles at the time of the Spanish War Veterans' reunion.

FIFTEENTH DEATH DUE TO MERCURY

New York Officials Want Explanations on String of Poisonings

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, July 13.—Alarmed at the increase in deaths from bichloride of mercury in New York, inspectors of the department of health are making a sweeping investigation of the report that many drug stores are violating the city code in selling the poison without prescriptions from physicians.

The number of suicides from mercurial poisoning so far this year has already reached the total for the entire twelve months of 1921. The death in Bellevue Hospital Sunday of Miss Margaret Bulkley, 24 years of age, an actress, made the fifteenth suicide during 1922 from swallowing the poison.

Miss Bulkley's death was the third from the poisoning in as many successive days at Bellevue Hospital. Anna Duane, 19, a vaudeville actress, died Saturday from the effect of tablets she took July 3 in the Pennsylvania Terminal. On Friday Mrs. Rhea Richards died from the same poisoning.

This flurry of deaths has attracted the attention of health officials to the manner in which the poison is being procured from drug stores. A section of the sanitary code provides that no person shall sell or offer for sale at retail bichloride of mercury in the dry form except upon the written prescription of a duly authorized physician or veterinary surgeon.

Violation of this statute is considered a misdemeanor and is punishable with a fine of $500, or one year's imprisonment, or both.

With one or two exceptions, all of the nineteen deaths during 1922 —fifteen listed as suicidal and four as accidental—have been women.

HUSBAND SAYS WIFE DERANGED

Mate of Accused Murderess Defends Her

Mind Poisoned by Gossip, He Says

Declares He Will Stand by His Wife

"My grief is for my wife. I love her."

A. L. Phillips, the husband of the woman accused of one of the most fiendish murders in the history of California, last night thus epitomized his emotions as he sat in Sheriff Traeger's office and listened to the clicking of the typewriter that was ordering the arrest of the woman on the charge of murder.

Hollow-eyed, but otherwise cool and collected, with only an occasional sign to indicate the terrific emotions that have been seething within him the past two days, Phillips told how he had to decide between his love for his wife, his feelings for the dead woman and his duty to the law.

"I'm going to stand by my wife, you bet I will," he declared. "The poor woman's mind was poisoned. She was insane. She did what she thought was right. I know that. She said so to me. She wanted to give herself up to the Sheriff. She wanted to make a clean breast of the whole business. I would not let her do that. I wanted to protect her. I wanted to save her. I love her," he said, speaking slowly and in a detached manner.

HUSBAND CONTAINED

Phillips is a thin man, with deepset eyes, angular face and an air of self-assurance and domination. He is quiet and well-poised. He told of his sleepless night, of walking the streets and trying to decide what to do, and of his parting from the woman he says he loves, who only a short time before confessed to him one of the most horrible murders ever recorded.

"I have not the slightest doubt my wife thought she was justified. Her mind was torturing her. Poisoned by gossip, she brooded. I don't like the world jealousy. Call it insanity," he said when asked what he thought was the motive for the crime.

Phillips is from the South.

"I have a reason for not telling you exactly where I was born," he said, when asked his place of birth. His mind wandered back to his terrible problem.

"I don't think any person can pull off a stunt like that and be rational."

Phillips refused to talk about Mrs. Meadows. His words were few when she was mentioned. Outside the room where Phillips talked was F. A. Tremaine, father of the murdered girl-widow.

"There is more sorrow in his home. His is death. I have mine," was the laconic reply of the accused woman's husband.

HUSBAND TELLS OF PARTING

The husband's description of his parting with his wife yesterday morning was dramatic. Mrs. Phillips spent the night in the Baltimore Hotel. Early in the morning Phillips, and a man whose name he did not disclose, began a search for cash. They sought to cash small checks, being unable to get to the bank before the departure of the train.

"We cashed small checks in barber shops and small stores, enough to get up the price of the ticket. Then we walked up to the door. She kissed me good bye. I saw her go through the gate, her handbag in the hands of the red cap. I waved at her. She was gone."

As he talked Phillips played with four silver dollars. A thin wisp of smoke curled up from his cigarette. In the lapel of his neatly fitting brown suit was a red carnation.

"My wife has proved her love for me many times before. I did not love Mrs. Meadows." I loved and do now love my wife. I wanted to protect her and I will fight for her to the last."

Phillips married his wife in Houston, Tex. nine years ago. He was in the oil business then. Here he gave his occupation as a promoter. His mother is now living in Texas.

JEALOUSY NOT MURDER CAUSE

Father of Dead Woman Says Daughter Was Good

Husband of Mrs. Phillips Met Her Thrice

She Worked Hard at Bank as Tabulator Expert

"Mrs. Phillips had no cause to be jealous of my daughter. Her husband saw Alberta only three times, and always when she was in company of others."

Fred Tremaine, father of the dead girl, was speaking. He had just come from the morgue, where he went with Dep. Sheriffs Nolan, Stensland and DeWar to identify the bruised, discolored woman that was his daughter.

A large crowd jammed the street in front of the undertaking parlors when the little party approached. All day long the curious had been thronging through the room to view the body. And still they came, while hundreds waited in North Broadway.

"I WANT TO GO"

"I want to go in alone," spoke the father—tremulous.

The room was cleared, the doors closed and locked. Fred Tremaine hesitated and then advanced slowly to the slab where the dead girl lay.

A look. A nod.

"That's her," he gasped, and collapsed weakly against the wall. As he stumbled the detectives heard him curse the murderess under his breath.

Then back to the Sheriff's office, where Tremaine, slightly recovered from his shock, spoke more calmly.

"Alberta was a good girl," he said. "She and her younger sister, Genora, were inseparable companions. Every night they were together, and during the day they were working at the bank."

LOST HER HUSBAND

It was the First National Bank where Alberta had been employed for three years as an expert tabulator. About the time that she started there she was married to Jesse Meadows, a young steel worker. Then, eleven months ago, she lost him when he was electrocuted while employed on a job in East Seventh street.

Tremaine continued his story.

"I never saw this Mrs. Phillips, and I saw her husband only once. That was when he called at the house while my daughters were entertaining the McElroy boys—twin brothers—whose first names I don't know. I talked with him a little while, and he seemed to be a nice fellow.

"Genora tells me that Alberta saw Phillips just three times," the father went on. "The [illegible] times was at Big Bear, where the girls had gone with the McElroy boys and their wives.

"But that was all. Jealousy? None at all. Phillips had no cause to be jealous of my daughter."

CLOSE CHECK ON ARIZONA FUNDS

All Disbursements Must be Made by Auditor

New Federal Building for Phoenix is Asked

Electric Service Will be Extended to Florence

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) July 13.—State Auditor Fairfield and State Treasurer Earhart are holding open the books for the last fiscal year, engaged in a "round up" of funds of a dozen State departments that heretofore have been operating independently, which is now forbidden by an act of the late legislative special session. Outside of the university and highway department, all departments must deposit all funds received on the 15th and the last day of each month, and all disbursements must be made through the auditor's office. For the last year, by direction of Gov. Campbell, rigid economy has been practiced in all administrative offices at the Capitol and most of them are turning unexpended balances back to the general fund. The auditor himself is turning back about $25,000.

In all, several hundred thousand dollars will be turned into the State, lightening the taxpayers' burden to that extent. There is to be close check hereafter of all expenditures, with each quarter year constituting a period for accounting, within which only the quarter's income may be spent.

FEDERAL PLANT TOO SMALL

The Phoenix Federal Building, erected ten years ago, has been outgrown, and more room must be had if service is to be maintained. It is suggested that the postoffice be moved to a special building of its own, preferably near the new union depot or within the depot, but preference is expressed for an enlargement of the present building to accommodate all departments. The treasury department offices, administered by Internal Revenue Collector Frank R. Stewart, have had to rent large quarters on Monroe street, while a half dozen other governmental agencies are scattered in downtown office buildings.

Mr. Stewart has submitted figures showing that the government is paying more rental for these outside offices than would be the interest on a costly building. Senator Cameron has written that he will offer a bill, possibly as a rider, at the present term of Congress, that construction may be hurried. About $150,000 will be needed.

TO EXTEND POWER LINES

Plans are being made for early extension of the electric service of the local Water Users' Association to Florence and the State penitentiary, beyond that city. The service now extends to the Pima Indian agency at Sacaton, near which point a large acreage of cotton land is irrigated by pumping with electric power. Extension of the lines is planned to Casa Grande, which wants the service for municipal lighting and power and for irrigation pumping, replacing the present expensive gas engine power. It is understood that Tucson will seek to secure power. That city and its agricultural district are within the radius of economic transmission and can be supplied at little larger cost than is Phoenix. As soon as the new hydroelectric plans of the association are completed, power will be available from the local project to move most of the machinery of Central Arizona and to light all its towns, including Bisbee, Nogales, Tucson, Casa Grande, Florence, Superior, Miami, Globe and Ray. The service already includes Phoenix, Glendale, Peoria, Tempe, Mesa, Scottsdale, Chandler, Gilbert, Marinette, Litchfield and Goodyear.

BABY HEIRESS CHARITY WARD

Court Orders Search for Mother, Daughter of Millionaire

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, July 13. — While Anna Louisa Beers, 2-year-old heir to the $3,500,000 estate of Capt. Edward Morrison, is being cared for in a charity ward at the County Hospital, renewed search for her mother was ordered by the Juvenile Court. The child has been a charity patient for more than three months, since the mother, Mrs. Margaret Morrison Beers, adopted daughter of Capt. Morrison, who acquired a large sum of money from the Morrison estate, disappeared while touring the country.

Capt. Morrison was known for several years as the "millionless millionaire." He recovered his property through the aid of the courts.

BOARD CHARGES "GAS" MONOPOLY

Says Standard Dominates Gasoline Situation

Interlocking Ownerships of Stock Blamed

Federal Trade Commission Recommends New Law

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 13. — Asserting that a "monopolistic situation" with respect to gasoline prevailed over the entire country, due to the fact that interlocking stock ownerships in the several Standard Oil companies "have perpetuated the very monopolistic control which the courts sought to terminate," the Federal Trade Commission recommended in a report to Congress today the enactment of legislation prohibiting "common stock ownership in corporations which have been members of a combination dissolved under the Sherman law."

Dealing specifically in the report with conditions in the gasoline trade in Montana and adjacent States where the commission declared the crude petroleum producer and the gasoline consumer were "both at the mercy of the Standard through a monopolistic position perfected in 1920 and 1921," by acquirements of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, the commission reported the conclusion that "conditions in other sections of the country are not radically different."

ASKS NEW LAW

"Today the entire country," the report asserted, "is divided into eleven Standard gasoline marketing territories in which a Standard marketing company is the dominating factor and in which there is no real competition between the various Standard units. This monopolistic system is possible under the terms of the Standard Oil dissolution decree by which the different Standard companies are for legal purposes supposed to be strangers to each other, but there is, as generally known, an interlocking stock ownership in the different organizations which has perpetuated the very monopolistic control which the courts ought to terminate.

"The commission is of the opinion that this situation cannot be effectually remedied by existing law and that adequate relief can be obtained only through additional legislation. It recommends, therefore, that Congress pass a law prohibiting common stock ownership in corporations which have been members of a combination dissolved under the Sherman law."

MONOPOLY CHARGED

Giving the results of an inquiry made on the complaint of the Montana State Railway Commission regarding gasoline prices, the commission reported that although the prices of high-grade crude petroleum were lower in Montana and Wyoming than in any other crude producing States the refinery prices of gasoline and kerosene were "much higher than at midcontinent refineries."

More than 90 per cent of the gasoline and kerosene refined in the entire Rocky Mountain territory, the report said, is produced by the Mid-West Refining Company, which, it was said, is owned by the Standard Oil Company of Indiana.

"The unsatisfactory situation in Montana and adjacent Rocky Mountain States," the report said, "is evidently due to the fact that the oil trade in this region is practically monopolized by Standard Oil interests. This monopolistic position was perfected in 1920 and 1921 when the Standard Oil Company of Indiana obtained control of the Mid-West Refining Company and acquired a one-half interest in the Sinclair Pipe Line Company and the Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing Company."

HASKELL TO REPORT FEEDING OF RUSSIA

AIDE TO HOOVER COMPLETES RECORD RELIEF PROGRAM

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

MOSCOW, July 13.—Col. William N. Haskell leaves Moscow today after successfully putting through the greatest relief program in history.

More than 9,000,000 people are now receiving American food who would otherwise have died of starvation. In a country two-thirds the size of the United States, with inadequate and deteriorated transportation, the American Relief Administration is feeding nearly five times as many as were in the American Army in France at the close of the great World War.

When he sees Herbert Hoover in Washington, Col. Haskell can report that 120,000 tons of food for children, over 200,000 tons of food for adults, the whole seed grain appropriation and $7,000,000 worth of medical stores have been distributed in Russia without serious hitch or delay. He can testify also to the co-operation of the soviet government, which carried out nearly according to schedule the internal transportation of the cargoes of the 262 ships that bore the American supplies to Russian ports.

It is proof of Col. Haskell's tact that he was able to obtain such co-operation from people who frankly declared through their mouthpiece, Litvinoff, a year ago at Riga, their initial attitude as one of acute suspicion. Col. Haskell handled them with scrupulous fairness and broad tolerance. He never asked for more than it was in their power to accomplish, but never failed to make it clear that he expected them to live up to their promises.

In return the soviet leaders found that they could trust him and the American Relief Administration as a whole. Difficulties, errors, even abuses, there were bound to be on both sides, but Col. Haskell was no less prompt in dealing with those under his control than in demanding redress from the government. The result is that he and the Relief Administration have won Russian respect and admiration to a degree that has notably enhanced American prestige.

GOTHAM MILLINER'S WIFE ALSO ACCUSES GIRL IN FOLLIES

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, July 13.—Samuel A. Leschin, a wholesale milliner, living at the Hotel Embassy, is being sued by Mrs. Bernice Leschin for separation, according to papers filed today in the Supreme Court.

ELKS' PARADE IS GORGEOUS

Atlantic City Witnesses Seven-Mile Parade

Roosevelt and Congressmen Participate in March

Memories of Last Year Are Expressed to Local Men

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

ATLANTIC CITY (N. J.) July 13. Elk delegations representing every State in the Union and the Canal Zone today participated in the "Grand National Prosperity Pageant" of the order, which marked the ending of the fifty-eighth annual reunion.

It was the big stellar spot in the convention at the shore. As to the harmony, it was 100 per cent, for it was typified in music, color and goodfellowship. The latter was an emphatic element, for the whole United States was there to extend a hearty handshake to the marching "Hello, Bills."

DECORATIONS EVERYWHERE

The resort was bathed in purple, and the color ran out over the water to scores of yachts, which sported clean colors. Even nature was in sympathy, for the sky showed patches of purple and white, while the sun brought out picturesque contrast in a background of gold.

Seventeen thousand men, fifty odd bands, scores of patrols and drill teams tell the story of the great army of purple and white. Gorgeous varicolored costumes were worn by the many organizations, and the seven miles of marchers was a moving, colorful panorama that would make the average rainbow ashamed of itself. Surprises and thrills came at quick intervals. The procession was led by Col. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., Assistant Secretary of the Navy, as honorary grand marshal. A warlike touch was given the parade by the patrols of a dozen places. Their attire ran to the zouave scheme, with purple and white trimmings. That industry was not forgotten was shown by a number of floats depicting the enterprise of States represented. In this connection, Oklahoma provided the biggest novelty. The men from the oil belt had an oil well working in full blast, and judging from the hint given by this exhibit, there is still plenty of oil out there waiting to be dug up.

CALIFORNIA CONTINGENT

The "Hello Bills" from California, although conservative in attire, received a very warm reception. Memories of the good times furnished the Elks last year in Los Angeles were still fresh in the minds of the eastern members, and so the Pacific Coast men had reason to feel gratified. They had 200 men in line. They were nattily dressed in blue serge coats, white trousers and neat straw hats encircled by purple bands.

For a few minutes it looked as though this city might be the nation's capital. This impression was given by the presence of nearly fifty members of Congress, who rode in automobiles. Small boys were used to supply water to the marching Elks today, and to show that this was the beverage dispensed, several water wagons were driven along the line of march. Several of the boys were on the verge of collapse, but they trudged along bravely to the finish. That the Elks give attention to details was shown by the fact that even the small water carriers were in purple and white.

TYPHOON ISOLATES CITY

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

CANTON, Via steamer to Hongkong) July 14.—A typhoon has cut off Canton from telegraphic communication with the outside world, demoralized river traffic and done other damage. The lines of the railway between Canton and Hongkong are blocked because of damage to bridges.

Advices from Hongkong filed at the same hour as the foregoing make no mention of loss of life due to the typhoon, which apparently struck Canton yesterday.

WAR LORDS OF CHINA REFUSE CONCILIATION

BITTER FIGHTING CONTINUES WITH BOTH CLAIMING VICTORY

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

CANTON (via steamer to Hongkong) July 13.—Neutral leaders are continuing their efforts to effect a composition of the differences between Dr. Sun Yat Sen, President of the overthrown Canton government of China, and Gen. Chen Chiung-Ming, who ousted him from control of Canton.

Dr. Sun maintains his original position that he be reinstated in his Presidency and that Chen apologise for his actions before he will consent to negotiations with him.

Chen remains at Waichow, eighty miles from here, leaving his subordinate Yip Kue, who had actual charge of the coup whereby Chen was ousted from Canton, in charge in that city. Chen's position remains as at first—that he will not apologise for Sun's ousting because Yip Kue was responsible directly therefore, and that China ought to be united rather than have two governments with Sun at the head of one.

Considerable fighting has occurred at Shiukwan, 120 miles north of Canton, between forces of Chen Chiung-Ming and Dr. Sun. Reports of the outcome are conflicting.

Sun still asserts that his northern troops, returning from their expedition in Kiangsi Province, soon will reach Canton and align themselves in his behalf, but Yip Kue contends that these forces will have to fight every mile of the distance.

SLAYER OF FATHER'S MURDERER LAUDED

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

MEXICO CITY, July 13.—Crowds which gathered around the court building showered little Maria Morena, the 15-year-old girl who slew Deputy Llorca in revenge for the latter having murdered her father, with flowers when she appeared yesterday.

The case overshadows all other questions in the capital, where there is intense public feeling against the acts of lawless Deputies going unpunished.

A high official said that wherever justice fails vengeance flourishes.

"The tragedy of this little girl will not be that of herself, but will be that of the unpunishable members of Congress."

Maria repeated her declaration that she was driven to desperation when she learned that Senor Llorca had been elected Senator for Vera Cruz, thus placing him outside the law for another four years.

FUNNY THOUGHT BY ZION CHIEF

William Jennings Bryan for President and Voliva as Team-mate

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

ZION CITY (Ill.) July 13. William Jennings Bryan for President and Wilbur Glenn Voliva for Vice-President would look well on campaign posters, the overseer of Zion announced today.

Likewise, if Mr. Bryan were to accept the principles of Zion, a lecture tour that "would make the fur fly" might be engineered, in the opinion of Mr. Voliva.

"Believe me," said Mr. Voliva, "we would give them a hot time. There would be no evolution taught and no modern astronomy."

GIRLS' FINGER NAILS SCRATCH UP POLICE

HUNDRED INMATES OF DETROIT HOME RIOT AND ROUT RESERVES

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT, July 13.—More than 100 girls in the House of the Good Shepherd rioted today, overcame and put to flight two detectives who tried to quell them and battled two patrol wagons full of police sent in an answer to a hurry up call for help.

The riot started about noon and did not subside for two hours. The girls broke windows and doors and pulled water faucets from the wall, flooding the two lower floors of the institution. Eight girls escaped, going over the wall. One escaped in an automobile and the others ran into alleys and lost the pursuing officers.

Amateurs Qualify in Last Day of Grace

Jones Makes Hole in One on Difficult Thirteenth

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

HOMEWOOD COUNTRY CLUB, CHICAGO (Ill.) July 13.—The thirty-eighth annual golf tournament ended today, and tomorrow seventy-nine players, many of them champions of all survivors of a field representing every golfing nation in the world, will start the 72-hole grind for the American open championship.

Finally the winner will be champion of the United States, but in the minds of many he will be crowned holder of the world's title, for victory will be obtained only through defeat of the foreign club swingers from all the leading sections of the universe.

Seventy-four men won their way into the finals in today's qualifying round. Robert MacDonald, the foremost Chicago professional, led the field with a score of 144, the score necessary to qualify being 152. All the well known stars qualified except Tom Armour, Scottish amateur champion, and Freddie McLeod, Washington (D. C.) pro, who failed to hold the open championship. Armour could not get his putts to the green, taking 41 shots, while McLeod couldn't get his mashie to the cup and ended with a score of 154, two strokes too much to get in.

AMATEURS SPARKLE

The amateurs were in the list of today's successes. Willie Hunter, the British champion, leading the pack among the nonprofessionals with a score of 75-70-145. Harrison R. (Jimmy) Johnston, St. Paul's brilliant young star, took three strokes more. Chick Weber of Chicago, also 145, and Ekmi Rautenbusch, another amateur, were the other amateurs to qualify, making the total of the three days, thirteen. Johnston had a chance to beat MacDonald's low total when he turned in the first 71, but he could not keep his wrists working properly and the work with the mashie cost him a 76, one stroke better than MacDonald's 77. He made up for this by a 69 in the afternoon round, but it was not enough to overcome MacDonald's lead.

Willie Hunter, the British champion, was the only one of the seventeen men under par to break 150 mark where there were thirty-seven Monday and four-fifths Tuesday. Willie Hunter had the hopes of the players high at 151 and 154, when he shot his afternoon around in par 70, his total being all that was necessary to push those beyond 152. But MacDonald, in leading the field, played an exceptionally good game, at times being on the verge of brilliance, but at others failing to get opportunities to break a total. The big fellow's driving was the best seen here in many a day, not even barring Abe Mitchell. Time after time he sent the ball sailing down the fairways for a 240-yard carry, and but for the soft fairways which held up his drives he would have made many record-breaking tee shots. The best part of Bob's driving was that he sent them absolutely straight.

POOR PUTTING

It was on the greens that MacDonald got into most of his trouble. On many holes he made pars by luck, and would have had birdies but for a few long putts gone in instead of rimming the cups. These missed bad breaks seemed to irritate him, for near the end of the round he was missing short putts with regularity. One under par for seventy-two holes of the afternoon round, and one over on the twenty-sixth hole on the twenty-eighth had given work, and took a 6 on the thirty-sixth, where he usually takes 4, although generally getting him through the woods, generally getting him out of trouble.

MacDonald, paired with Pat Doyle of Richmond county, New York, drew the biggest gallery of the day, and their playing deserved it. Others, after some very bad holes in the morning and early afternoon, pulled themselves together and showed great putting—putting that has been his weakness at times—and ended with 147. Four of the qualifiers turned in par 70s in the afternoon rounds, the quartet being Ted McKenna of Rochester, Willie Hunter, George Kerr of Marietta, O., and Bert Hartsock of Chicago. Hartsock's work in the afternoon was the most remarkable of the day, for he had taken 82—twelve over par—in the morning—and had hopelessly out of the running. In the first afternoon nine holes he had taken a six on a five hole and a seven on a four hole.

SPEEDBOAT RACE IN NORTH

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

...(Or.) July ...Portland Motor ...Club is preparing for ...annual boat regatta ...to be held July 29, as a ...part of the Oregon State ...swimming and div-...championship meet on ...five on a four hole, which, with other bad luck, gave him 37 against par 34. Then, knowing he must shoot super golf to get in, he settled down and made the last nine in 32, three strokes less than perfect figures, totaling 70 for the eighteen, and 152 for the thirty-six—exactly few enough to qualify.

A perusal of his afternoon card showed he played six of the holes in seventeen strokes, an average of less than three to the hole, while fifteen holes were made in fifty-three club swings, an average of a fraction more than four.

Charles Rowe, the Pittsburg player, also made a nice comeback when he played the last afternoon nine in 33 after a 39 going out. He had threes on the thirty-second, thirty-third, thirty-fourth and thirty-fifth, a five on the twenty-ninth and the rest were fours.

Another player who had a good day was Eddie Towns of Shannopin, Pa., who brought in a 71 in the morning and handed the card in to the score keeper without telling anyone he had made the 130-yard thirteenth hole in 1. It was only when the card was copied on the bulletin board that it became known, and those around the course learned that the ball had gone into the cup on the fly, lodging between the cup side and the pin.

This is the first time a hole has been made in one in an American open tournament, although Jock Hutchison did it in the British open tournament a year ago, and followed with a two on a par four hole.

Willie Hunter was one of the surprises of the day. In the practice rounds the little Briton has had very bad luck, most of his cards totaling around 77 and 78. When he went out in 75 this morning there were many who wondered if he would get through, but the player from across the seas gave a wonderful exhibition in the afternoon, scoring a par 70 for a 146 total, which threw him into a tie for second place today with Towns, McKenna and William Melhorn, Shreveport, La., professional.

TEX WILL PROBABLY GET BOUT

Rickard Granted à License in Jersey City to Conduct Boxing Matches

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, July 13.—The New Jersey State Boxing Commission granted Tex Rickard a license today to conduct boxing matches for another year at the famous Boyle's thirty acres in Jersey City. This would indicate that everything is moving along quietly toward the completion of arrangements for conducting the proposed bout between Dempsey and Harry Wills in the same arena some time between now and next July. Incidentally the license granted today to Rickard includes permission for holding the bout between Benny Leonard and Lew Tendler on July 27, over which there had been some opposition by one of the societies opposed to boxing in New Jersey.

KRAMER AND BROWN TO MEET AT VERNON

Danny Kramer and Young Brown is Matchmaker Wad Wadham's choice for the main event at the Vernon arena next Tuesday night. Both men have been stepping some of late and should make it a real fight all the way. Goat Lavin has been lined up with Sailor Larry for the semi-wind-up. Young Ketchell and Monk Fowler will box in the feature preliminary.

ANGELS SEEK TALENT

Wires were sent to something like ten major league clubs yesterday in quest for new Angel talent. It was stated by Business Manager Lockhart. Joe Patrick says he is particularly anxious to secure two good right-handed pitchers.

GIRLS' TENNIS EVENT DEFERRED

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 13.—The national hard court junior girls' tennis championship, which was to have been held at the Berkeley Tennis Club August 5, will be held on the same courts September 2, it was announced today by Mrs. Margery Wales Kress, chairman of the tournament committee.

The national championship will be held at the same time as the State championship tournament. Play in the national championship will begin at 9 o'clock in the morning.

Rudy Breaks Course Record on Omaha Links

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

OMAHA (Neb.) July 13.—It was a great day for the favorites in today's elimination contests in the trans-Mississippi golf tournament at the Omaha Country Club.

Rudolf Knepper, the crack player from Sioux City, Iowa, smashed the course record in eliminating Bob McKee, Des Moines golfer, 9 and 8, doing the first 18 holes in 66, four under par.

George Von Elm, of Salt Lake City, present champion, had things all his own way in his match with Wallace Shepard of Omaha, who was eliminated 10 and 8.

W. J. Foye, one of the oldest entrants in the tournament equalled the birdie record of Graham when he made the "cow pasture," a severely trapped addition of four holes, by taking birdies on the fourth, sixth and seventh holes in the morning round.

Afternoon cards for the Foye-Hughes match were:

Foye—
Out	6	4	4	4	4	3	5	4	4	38
In	4	5	3	5	4	4	4	4	4	37—75
Hughes—
Out	6	5	5	3	4	5	5	4	5	40
In	5	4	4	4	5	4	5	4	6	41—81

Knepper, in the first eighteen holes, was never a stroke over par. His only variation from perfect figures came on holes where he made birdies. Besides his 66 on the first eighteent holes, Knepper also made a new low for the inside nine holes, playing them in 32. Neither record is official, however, as the Sioux City amateur was playing match instead of medal play.

The Alex Graham-Jesse Stuttle, and Jack Hughes-W. J. Foye matches attracted almost as much attention as did these in which the two favorites, Knepper and Von Elm played. Graham, Kansas State champion, defeated the Kansas City player, 2 and 1, while Foye eliminated Hughes, 3 and 1, after a gruelling match in which both Omaha golfers used every club in their bags to advantage.

As a result of today's match results Von Elm tomorrow will meet Foye in the semifinals, while Knepper plays Graham.

MARCUS TO MEET GOB IN MAIN GO

Sailor Vincent Up Against Tough Fighter at Hollywood Tonight

Tonight's main event at the American Legion Hollywood arena will bring together two of the most rugged fighters ever assembled. Jimmy Marcus and Sailor Vincent are the 145-pounders who will hook up. Both battlers reported that they were in excellent shape for the test, and since both are of the aggressive type of fighters, the affair should be hard fought while it lasts. The advance sale of tickets assures a banner crowd. Manager Roy Marshall yesterday said that it had exceeded expectations.

The George Lavigne versus Eddie Roberts bout in the semi-wind-up has attracted unusual interest because of the caliber of the men. Both men are well matched and are expected to uncover another of those torrid mills for which the Legion stadium is noted.

Charlie Sullivan asked Matchmaker Frank Crowley for a tough opponent. He got it. Young Hoppe is the gentleman selected to give him a tussle tonight.

Battling Larsen, San Francisco 142-pounder, will make his bow to the local fistic colony tonight against Mike O'Leary, the fighting law student.

Mickey Dempsey and Jimmy Hackley, a duo of 130-pound bruisers, are hooked up. Ad Remy is to clash with Jack Burns, at 118 pounds. Joe Thomas and Sailor Dempsey, 130-pounders will supply the curtain raiser. Popular George Blake will referee.

San Francisco Men on Top in Tennis Singles

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PORTLAND (Or.) July 13.—Two San Francisco players were winners in the men's singles of the Oregon State tennis championship matches played at the Irvington Club courts early this afternoon. Herbert Suhr defeated H. T. Dickinson, and Elmer Griffin won from Catlin Wolfard.

Results of afternoon matches follows:

Men's singles: Elmer Griffin, San Francisco, defeated Catlin Wolfard, 7-5, 6-2; Herbert Suhr, San Francisco, defeated H. T. Dickinson, Princeton University, 6-1, 8-6.

Mixed doubles: Miss Stella Fording and Ed Murphy defeated Miss Irene Campbell and Henry Stevens, 6-0, 6-4.

Women's doubles: Miss Cora Hjertaas and Mrs. George Mays defeated Mrs. John Morton, Hood River, and Mrs. J. T. Mulder, 6-3, 7-5, 6-4.

HELEN WILLS IN FINALS

Sixteen-Year-Old San Francisco Girl Reaches Deciding Round of Rhode Island Championships

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PROVIDENCE (R. I.) July 13.—Playing spectacular tennis, Miss Helen Wills of California, the 16-year-old national junior champion, defeated Mrs. Frank Godfrey of Boston in the semifinal round of the Rhode Island State championships here today in a rapid match which went to three sets, 4-6, 6-2, 6-1. Miss Wills will meet Miss Leslie Bancroft of Boston tomorrow for the title.

A Pair of Bona-Fide Champs

Miss Helen Wills of San Francisco, shown above with her choicest racket and company smile, holds more titles than she can remember, chief among which is the national junior championship. She stands an excellent chance of adding another star to her crown today when she meets Miss Leslie Bancroft in the finals of the Rhode Island championships. Vincent Richards of Yonkers, N. Y., exhibited below in violent action, has held the national junior title for boys three times, but will be unable to defend his laurels this season, having passed his eighteenth birthday. Miss Wills will attempt to retain her title, however.

Miss Bancroft reached the finals by eliminating Miss Martha Bayard in straight sets, 6-0, 6-3. From the flashy brand of tennis Miss Bancroft displayed today it looks as though the California youngster is in for a hard tussle tomorrow. Miss Bayard, who is recognized as a player of unusual ability, was swept completely off her feet by the determined attack of her opponent, failing to win a game in the first set, and only taking three games on her own service in the second. The service of Miss Bancroft is puzzling, and may be a source of trouble to the Californian tomorrow.

The back-court game of driving again marked Miss Wills's match today. She returned practically every ball, after a bad start, and had Mrs. Godfrey chasing frantically after ungettable balls. Although Miss Wills lost the first three games, she came back with a vengence, pushing the opening set to 6-4, and taking the last two with apparent ease, 6-2 and 6-1.

SEALS ARE SET BACK BY SEATTLE INDIANS

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 13.—San Francisco had a setback today after seven straight victories, Seattle defeating the locals 4 to 2. Lane's doubles in the first two innings largely contributed to Seattle's success, the one in the second inning bringing in two runs. The Seals filled the bases in the sixth inning, but O'Connell, with two men out, let two strikes go over the plate and then scratched out an easy fly to the pitcher. Umpire Carroll put Eldred out of the game in the sixth inning for disputing a decision.

BEAVERS EASY FOR SERAPHS

Angels Perk Up and Grab Double-Header

Middleton Leaned on Hard in First Contest

Lefty Dumovich Heaves Rare Ball in Second

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS

Los Angeles gathered enough fur yesterday for a pair of muffs, one for each hand.

Meaning that the Angels skinned the Portland Beavers twice, 3-2 and 4-0, leaving them stark and naked and stripped of bacon. Two games for one admission brought out surprising support. All the best seats were filled, and there was a large squad of bargain-hunters in the bleachers. After thinking it over for fourteen weeks, the Angels seem to have started. They played better ball than on Wednesday, and displayed superior mound work. George Lyons and Nick Dumovich were the winning twirlers. Nick let the visitors down with two hits, one of the infield variety.

Batting exploits of Dick Cox make an interesting chapter in our Coast League drammer for the past couple of days. Dick hit perfectly in the opener yesterday, obtaining two singles and a double in four trips. On the day previous his last three times up he smote a triple and two doubles, making an overlapping record for the two days of seven straight smashes, five of them for extra bases. Cox didn't run down until the start of the second game, when he popped to the second baseman his first time up.

Contrary to a recent remark, Manager Tom Turner does not keep his pinch-hitters on ice in order to preserve them. The idea was generated on Wednesday when it was necessary to halt the game while Suds Sutherland was brought in from the clubhouse to pinch-hit. Mr. Sutherland bitterly resents the implication that he was out there indulging in a siesta. Suds wants it understood that he is an industrious guy.

Says he was out there helping Sam Hale, who had cracked a shoulder, crawl out of his shirt. This one act alone stamps Suds as a good Samaritan. Billie Burke is the club trainer and official shirt-remover. But to drag Hale's shirt off seems to have been a two-man job. Hence Mr. Sutherland is vindicated and his apology accepted.

There seems to be no real rest for Jimmy Poole's sore hoof. Daily this hoof is aroused from its afternoon reverie, and compelled by force of circumstances to go forth and accumulate a fresh stone bruise. Poole played some at the start of Wednesday's game, and yesterday played some at the finish of the first game. Joe Sargent's artistic temperament was responsible for this.

Joe disliked the first strike called on him in the sixth. So he took his bat and drew a diagram on the ground of where he thought the ball had passed, which was well on the outside of the plate. The technique of this diagram was perfect, and the execution flawless. But Umpire McGrew has no appreciation of art. So he sentenced Joe to go out and draw pictures on the side of the clubhouse for the remainder of the afternoon, where there would be nobody to look at them except himself. It was then that the daily readjustment of the Portland club took place, old cogs shifting and new ones dropping silently into place.

Angels selected the sixth for their large inning in the curtain-raiser, when they came from behind and went ahead. At the time they came along and wrecked things for the visitors, Portland was leading, 2 to 1, and running on the bit behind the pitching of Jimmy Middleton. It was a homer by Charley Deal, which caused Middleton to crack in the first syllable of his name, reducing him to a mere ton. Takes more weight than that to stop our freshly fattened Angels.

Carroll opened the sixth with an infield hit, and McAuley sacrificed, the idea being at that time merely to tie the score. But Deal changed and enlarged the specifications of the campaign by knocking a homer over left field fence. Sandow Griggs was spared at first on an error by Brasil, but forced by Twombly, who swiped second. McCabe walked, and both runners advanced on a passed ball. Lindimore larruped to center for

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DEL MONTE, July 13. — The qualifying round of the California junior golf championship was played this morning over eighteen holes, Del Monte course. The conditions were ideal for good scores. James Wade of the California Golf Club of Los Angeles, turning in the lowest gross, 82, and Don Davin of San Diego, was second with an 85. George McDaniel of the Olympic Club, San Francisco, got the low net with a 72.

A nice represedtation of junior golfers from various parts of the State came to participate in the tournament. But it was disappointing that quite a few were just over the 16-year age limit.

The following scores were turned in:

BONIFACE WINS HANDICAP RACE

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WINDSOR (Ont.) July 13. Boniface, carrying top weight of 127 pounds, won the $10,000 Frontier Handicap, feature event of the opening today of the Windsor Jockey Club season. Register, carrying 107 pounds, was second, and Planet was third. The time for the mile and one-eighth was 1:52.

KLEPPER SETS PRICE ON CLUB

Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars cash is the price set on the Portland club by William Klepper, its president and chief owner.

Klepper recently was ordered by Commissioner Landis to sel lthe club, but there have been no takers as yet. President Johnson of the American League, when he desires to oust a club owner, finds a buyer for it at a figure advantageous to the retiring owner.

While refusing to comment on the Commissioner's action, Klepper did declare that he did not "knowingly or willfully violate any of the rules of baseball."

Report that Rube Ellis was to displace Tom Turner as manager of the Beavers proved one of the season's biggest busts. Apparently all that president Klepper knew about it was what he had read in the papers.

Duke is Off Competitive Sport Forever

"I am through with competitive swimming forever," and, for that matter, have been for a year," said Duke Kahanamoku, wonderful Hawaiian swimmer, yesterday. "All talk of a meeting between Johnny Weismuller and myself to settle the matter of supremacy is foolish. He is the greatest swimmer the world has ever seen."

Once and for all the dusky paddler, who stepped out of nowhere in 1912 to capture the greatest honors in the swimming world in the Olympic Games at Stockholm, yesterday settled the question of a possible "comeback." With his manager, Oscar Henning, the Duke emphatically put the quietus on the talk of a match race between the two.

"Duke himself has timed Weismuller in 53 1-5s for the 100 yards and knows just what he can do" said Henning. "Duke will always be able to do what he is doing now, swim 50 yards or 100 yards faster than anybody except a world's champion and without a day of training, but he has no intention of attempting to compete with Weismuller, who is fifteen years his junior and who he achnowledges as the finest swimmer he has ever seen."

AMATEUR MITTS WILL FLUTTER

A.A.U. Titles at Stake Next Week at L.A.A.C.

Accomplished Set of Leather Pushers Entered

La Barba Doped to Grab Skeeterweight Honors

The hardest working athletes located in this part of the State are without a doubt the amateur boxers. These boys who battle solely for glory are prepping themselves for the coming Southern California amateur boxing tournament, which is scheduled to take place next Wednesday and Thursday evenings in the gymnasium of the Los Angeles Athletic Club.

There will be more slinging executed on Wednesday and Thursday evening of next week than has been seen here in considerable time. George Blake, boxing instructor of the L.A.A.C., and Charley Keppen, are handling the details of the tourney. Both agree that the entry list thus far is the most attractive line-up of boxers that have registered here for a tournament.

Blake expects to reach the semi-finals in some of the classes the first evening, and this must be accomplished in order to wind up the tourney on Thursday night.

Considerable interest is being manifested in the tourney not only by ambitious ringsters but by the fans. Reservations for seats are coming in every day, stated Keppen, and large houses are expected when the boys of local fistiana set to work.

The 112-pound class has already drawn six entrants. Numbered among these entries are some of the best boys on the Coast. Fidel La Barba heads the list, and the crack little L.A.A.C. scrapper will have to uncork everything he possesses to come in first. The entries for the 112-pound class are: Jack Fields, unattached; Fidel La Barba, L.A.A.C.; Dominick Urgo, unattached; Mike Marujo, unattached; Rudie Reco, unattached; Benny Marks, unattached.

SCHMIDT COMES TO TERMS WITH PIRATES

SAN FRANCISCO, July 13.—Special dispatches from Yosemite Valley received here today say that Walter Schmidt, star catcher of the Pittsburg National League baseball team, has come to terms with the team management and will leave for the East next week to join the club. Schmidt, a resident of Modesto, Cal., is on a vacation trip to Yosemite. Schmidt has been a holdout since last year, his demand for $10,000 a year having been refused.

REPUBLICANS IN SENATE SCRAP

Ranks of Party Senators Are Badly Split

Cotton Schedule in Tariff Causes Break

Twelve G.O.P. Solons Join in Insurrection

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 13. — The first real split in Republican Senate ranks over the administration tariff bill came today during consideration of the cotton schedule with the result that ten committee amendments proposing increased rates on various kinds of yarns and on sliver and roving were rejected one after another as fast as they were reached. The majority opposition was led by Senator Lenroot, Wisconsin, and reached its maximum strength on the first roll call, twelve Republicans opposing the committee rate on a roll call by which the amendment was rejected 32 to 24.

The twelve Republicans were Borah, Capper, Cummins, Jones of Washington, Lenroot, McCormick, Nelson, New, Norbeck, Sterling, Townsend and Willis. The lowest Republican vote against any amendment was nine, with the average running at ten. With a single exception on each roll call, the Democrats voted solidly against the proposed increases.

DUTY IS REDUCED

With the basic duties on yarns reduced it was predicted that cuts on the rates on at least the lower grade cotton cloth of even greater proportions than recommended yesterday by the Finance Committee majority would be made as the Senate proceeded with the schedule. That probably will be some time next week, as the schedule is to be laid aside tomorrow in favor of the dye embargo provision of the bill. A vigorous fight over it is forecast, with Senator Moses of New Hampshire leading the Republican proponents and Senator King of Utah, making the principal argument for the Democrats in opposition.

Several members of the Rpublican agricultural-tariff bloc joined today in the opposition to the committee increases in the cotton rate, but a majority of the bloc voted to sustain the committee.

Senator Lenroot argued against increases in rates on yarns and on cloth not coming into competition with American produced yarns and cloth. He declared that on the cheaper grades the United States was shipping to all the world. He contended also that the compensatory duties on fine yarns made from long-staple cotton were too high, considering that the duty on the long staple cotton itself was only 7 cents a pound.

Senator Smoot, Utah, on behalf of the committee majority supported the increases, declaring them to be necessary to protect the industry, particularly that the East was producing now high grade cotton cloth almost exclusively, the cheaper grades being turned out in Southern mills. He called attention that high-grade cloth came in from England in large quantities.

PLAN PAY STANDARD FOR STATE COLLEGES

EXPERTS RECOMMEND LIST OF SALARIES TO BE PAID TEACHERS

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SACRAMENTO, July 13.—The committee appointed sixteen months ago to work out a standard system of salaries for the teachers of the seven State teachers' colleges in California has completed its work and filed its recommendations with Will C. Wood, director of the State Department of Education, it was announced today.

Adoption of the following schedule of salaries, to be made effective Jan. 14, 1923, is recommended by the committee:

Assistants, from $1800 to $2040 per year.

Instructors, from $2040 to $3000.

Assistant professors, $2250 to $3420 per year.

Associate professors, $2400 to $3900 per year.

Professors, $2700 to $4350 per year.

Deans of women, $2700 to $3600 per year.

Librarians, $1800 to $2700 per year.

Assistant librarians, $1200 to $1800 per year.

The committee found that the lowest salaries paid in the California State teachers' colleges are 60 per cent lower than the lower salaries paid in the same group of eastern institutions and 19 per cent lower than the lowest salaries paid in the Southern Branch of the University of California.

CHICAGO MURDER TOLL ON INCREASE

EIGHTY-THREE KILLINGS RECORDED IN LAST SIX MONTHS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, July 13.—Murderers in Chicago destroyed eighty-three lives during the first six months of 1922. This is an increase of 26.5 per cent over the same period in 1921, and 30.16 over the first six months of 1920.

May of 1922 shattered recent murder records with twenty-one such crimes. It stands out as the most sanguinary month since the race riots of July, 1919. The Black Hand was the cause of half of the murders in May. The others were due to jealousy, four; robbery, three; vengeance, two; domestic discord, two, and unknown, one.

Manslaughter, loosely defined in police circles as "murder committed in fights," also are soaring. They numbered forty-one, the first six months of this year, as compared with thirty-two in 1921.

Justifiable homicides dropped from fifty-one during the first half of 1921 to forty-seven in the first six months of this year. The tendency indicates a return to the days of 1916-17, when the murders averaged one each day.

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA BOOSTS ATTRACTIONS

SAN FRANCISCO WILL BEAR FINANCIAL BURDEN IN STARTING MOVEMENT

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 13.—The communities of Northern and Central California outside of San Francisco will not be asked "at this time" to contribute financially to a campaign to project the attractions and resources of these regions before the world, K. R. Kingsbury, president of the Standard Oil Company in California, and chairman of the campaign committee told a meeting in the interests of the movement today.

"We do not expect any contributions from these communities yet," Kingsbury said. "If San Francisco is to lead in this movement, the leaders in San Francisco must join in by giving of their time, effort and money."

Kingsbury said he hoped that the campaign would have developed sufficiently a year from now to command a total of $1,000,000 from the communities north of the Tehachapi Mountains.

PERMISSION GRANTED TO ARM RAIL GUARDS

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

RENO, July 13.—President C. M. Levy of the Western Pacific Railroad appealed this morning to Gov. Boyle for permission to arm guards at shops and stations along the Western Pacific.

He said Elko authorities had forbidden guards to carry weapons in Nevada. The Governor received a written opinion from Deputy Atty.-Gen. Robert Richards that it was the constitutional right of citizens to protect their property, and that the arming of guards on railroad property was not illegal.

VICTIM'S SISTER SWOONS

Youthful Genora Tremaine Collapses When Sheriff Tells Family of Tragedy

A pretty little freckled-faced girl with bobbed hair—Miss Genora Tremaine, 18 years of age, who lives at 121 West Thirty-third street—was powdering her nose and combing her fluffy brown hair early last night. She was getting ready to go to see her sister, Mrs. Alberta Tremaine Meadows of the Arvilla Apartments, 815 West Thirty-seventh street when. . . .

Sheriff Traeger knocked at the door and told the little sister her bigger sister had been identified as the victim of the brutal hammer murder on Montecito Drive.

It was an awful blow. Genora fell into a faint in her grandmother's arms, Mrs. A. G. Tremaine, who is 75 years old. The little girl had spent the night with her sister the night before the murder. They had had breakfast together and dinner together and they had been together all day Wednesday, as they both work in the First National Bank. That very afternoon Alberta had told her good-by, saying that she would see her that night . . . maybe. And now the Sheriff, in a sympathetic voice, was trying to tell her as easily as possible that her sister had been beaten to death with a hammer and rock.

CONSCIOUSNESS RETURNS

Later the little freckle-faced girl came to. She knew . . . she knew. . . .

"And yet we were all so happy tonight," Genora told a Times reporter. "We were expecting sis to call. She always did every night. When she failed to call why we just thought she was busy, that's all. I was going over to spend the night with her, as I stayed with her nearly every night. Just as I was ready to leave the Sheriff came. Oh, my God! I can hardly believe it." Great big tears came in the little sister's eyes as she lay on the couch in the parlor of their little, unpretentious home and told of her sister.

The old grandmother sat beside the girl trying to comfort her. Then there was Mrs. Mary Mitchell, kindly neighbor, who lives next door, attempting to offer consolation to the heart-broken people.

"Just think I've lived to be 75 years old and had to see such a pretty girl beaten to death with a rock," the elderly woman said. "How horrible it all is. Just this afternoon Mrs. J. C. Mount, who lives in the house with us, was reading me an account of the murder. My eyes are a little weak and she was reading it to me, you see. When she finished I said what an awful thing that the little girl had been killed in such a manner. Then to think it was my own grand-daughter."

GRANDMOTHER MOTHER, TOO

The old grandmother had cared for the two sisters since the death of their mother twelve years ago in Dell Rosa. The father of Genora and the murdered girl had gone to the Sheriff's office. Alberta Tremaine, the murdered girl, was married to Jesse Meadows, former engineer of the Southern Pacific lines, in February, 1921, at Santa Ana. On Jan. 10, 1922, her husband was accidentally electrocuted when he touched a live wire.

After the death of her husband the girl came home to live for a month. Then she moved to the Arvilla Apartments, and shared a room with Miss Lillian Meadows, a sister of her dead husband. Her roommate left a few weeks ago to visit her relatives in Montana. She told Alberta when she left she would be back to live with her in a few weeks. Now . . . well, you know the story.

The younger sister said she and Alberta had met Mr. and Mrs. Phillips about a month ago at the home of their friends, the McElroys.

"We only saw them two or three times," Genora stated. "No, I know my sister never went with Mr. Phillips. I would certainly know, because I was always with her. No, absolutely no, she didn't go with him at all."

MOTHER NOT TOLD NEWS

Sister of Accused Woman Holds Virgil on Front Porch to Keep Tragedy from Aged Parent

"When I heard the hurried departure of my poor sister and her husband last night I felt that something was wrong and this morning when the papers told of the murder I—Oh, I don't want to talk, but I was—I felt that Clara had done it. But I can't believe it. She was such a sweet girl. Only 23 years old," Ola Weaver, sister of Mrs. Clara Phillips, accused of the slaying of the young woman of whom she was said to be jealous, said last night as she kept a midnight vigil on the porch of her home at 703 West Fifty-third street to keep the reports from the mother, 69 years old.

"Clara ran away from her home in Houston, Tex., when she was only 14 years old with Phillips, who was then only a boy of 17. She always loved him—too much, I guess, but I never knew that he didn't love her. I never heard of Alberta Meadows and I can't believe that Phillips was untrue to my sister, my poor sister," sobbed Ola.

Mother does not know, and I am afraid that if she heard it would kill her. She would never believe that Clara did it," she continued.

Mrs. Phillips and her husband have only lived in Los Angeles a year. He has been employed by the Sun Oil Company, and the young couple, he is 25 years old, lived with her mother, Mrs. A. L. Weaver, in a little white house.

Miss Weaver declared that she found no traces of blood in the bathroom nor heard any conversation between the young woman and her husband on her arrival Wednesday evening that caused her to be suspicious. She said that she was in her room when Mrs. Phillips came in, but did not come out.

CADDIE REVEALS MURDER

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

BALTIMORE, July 13.—When Bobbie Hall, a caddie at the Rolling Road Golf Club chased a ball into some bushes near the tenth hole early this morning, he leaped back in horror when in reaching in the brush for the ball he touched the cold, nude body of a murdered woman.

He quickly alarmed early players at the clubhouse. Officials in turn notified the police and a dozen detectives were soon busy trying to solve the mystery.

Every vestige of her clothing, which might have borne some marks of identification, had been taken awey, but along a road near by were found torn bits of feminine apparel.

BRUTALLY STRANGLED

Postmortem disclosed that the woman had not been criminally assaulted, but she had been strangled, black-jacked, shot two or three times and stabbed, her jugular vein being severed. Her throat had been cut with a sharp instrument, evidently a dirk or a dagger, from ear to ear. Over her right eye and in her right arm were bullet wounds.

Her skull was fractured over the right temple.

In the wound in her throat a piece of her underclothing had been stuffed. About her neck and one arm were two small blue ribbons fastened with safety pins.

The woman was about 25 years old, five feet six and a quarter inches tall and weighed 140 pounds. She had straight black hair bobbed. Her complexion was fair. Her eyes were brown. She appeared of Jewish type.

On Rolling Road, about a mile away, were found a woman's summer hat and a man's cap. The cap had blood stains on it. In the woman's hat were pieces of a Fairmont (W. Va.) newspaper of recent date.

On the edge of the road, alongside the blood were the tracks of a motor vehicle. The tracks indicated that the woman had been taken to the spot in the side car of a motorcycle.

An old copy of a Washington newspaper was found lying in the grass a few feet from the blood spot by the road. There was a considerable quantity of blood upon it.

The condition of the ground and cuts and bruises on the woman's body indicate that she made a desperate struggle against her assailant.

MORATORIUM IN BALANCE

Reparations Commission Tells Germany Respite Reply Will Follow Report on Teutonic Financial Status

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

PARIS, July 13.—The Reparations Commission today notified the German government in reply to the demand for a moratorium for reparations payments, that it would give a definite answer only when it has in hand the full report of the committee on guarantees which went to Berlin a short time ago to supervise reforms to which the German government gave its assent.

Germany's attitude on the reparations matter "has brought into question the entire peace of Europe," says the Times today in commenting on the latest developments. It demands that the French government inform the British government that France can pay nothing on her war debts, either interest or principal, so long as the French treasury has not received the amounts due her for reparations.

The French delegate on the Reparations Commission, the newspaper thinks, should oppose any discussion of a moratorium until France is assured she will receive the sums she needs for reconstruction.

"And if there is an attempt to over-ride France," the newspaper adds, "the French government can do nothing else than recover its liberty of action—as our British friends say, 'upset the apple cart,' as she has the means to do so."

La Liberte says a moratorium for Germany will in no wise solve the question, "as payments in kind will necessitate the same debauch in paper money."

The Journal Des Debats takes the view that Germany will never have a government disposed to comply with the Versailles treaty until she has compliance forced upon her.

MAY FINANCE GERMANY

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

PARIS, July 13. — Henry Gorgenthau, former American Ambassador to Turkey, announces today that he was arranging to form an international corporation, to be capitalized at from $50,000,000 to $60,000,000, for the purpose of reorganizing Austria's industry and to show the world that it is possible to prevent the bankruptcy of European states. Mr. Morgenthau, who has just returned to Paris from Vienna, where he was assured of the co-operation of the Austrian government, is now discussing his project with various financiers.

suggested to help Austria and other broken-down countries," he said, "until Americans concluded that it was impossible. On the contrary, I know it is possible, and I am willing to invest a considerable sum of my own capital and give my time as a member of the executive committee.

"What I want to see is a model state made of Austria outside capital," Mr. Morgenthau continued. "Then it will be apparent that the other states of Europe may be reorganized in the same manner."

British Navy Asks Greater Force in Air

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONDON, July 13.—The British Admiralty is demanding that the British navy be permitted to organize an aviation force as a result of the United States Navy's ambitious program, according to the naval correspondent of the Evening News, who pointed out that America intends to spend $10,000,000 on building 213 machines, including a super-Zeppelin.

He states that the Hendon Airdrome is to be converted soon into a civilian airship station for services between London and Berlin in which will be used the latest type of German dirigibles, including two Parsevals under construction as a part of reparations.

The British airships R-36 and R-37 when completed may be taken over by a French syndicate operating a London, Paris, Madrid and Morocco service.

Germany Can't Pay, Says Head of Reichsbank

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

BERLIN, July 13. — Discussing Germany's financial situation Herr Von Glasenapp, acting president of the Reichsbank, stated that a temporary improvement of the mark, such as yesterday's 20 per cent appreciation on the dollar, was no real relief for Germany.

"The strong, constantly progressing depreciation of the mark," said the banker, "with its consequences, is grinding deep into the nation's economics and has affected world economics, and it is a fundamental cause for the terrible state of the German budget. Germany is utterly unable to pay, even approximately, the enormous bill imposed by the peace treaty. With exportation not big enough to cover the necessary importation we must continue to sell marks and at market values."

MILLIONS PAID NATION FOR WARTIME WORK

BRITISH SHIPPING BOARD PAYS BALANCE OF CLAIMS LONG STANDING

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Counter claims between the British Ministry of Shipping and the United States Shipping Board, resulting from wartime shipping transactions between the two nations have been settled with payment to the Shipping Board of $12,000,000 by the British, Chairman Lasked announced today.

Negotiations have been in progress for a year between the two governments and involved claims each made against the other in connection with shipment of supplies and other cargo during and after the war. The claims have been pending since shortly after the armistice. The Shipping Board first presented a claim of $21,000,000 and then the British set up a contention that their records showed that instead of owing the United States that amount, the United States owed Great Britain $5,000,000.

A big trust company that gives personal, individual service

In considering the trust company as executor, many persons imagine that such relationship precludes the personal touch so likely to be desired by relatives and other beneficiaries. This is far from true.

On assuming the duties of executor, this company at once establishes the closest possible relationship with those interested through an executive officer, who makes it his business to acquaint himself as fully as consistent with the many and varied details involved.

His services are thenceforth highly individual and personal. He is responsible to this company, which in turn is responsible to the estate and to the court.

Title Insurance and Trust Company executorship costs no more than individual. Let us explain some of the many advantages.

The Times—KHJ—on the air today from 1 to 1:45 p.m. Harry F. Atwood, speaker, will give a talk under the auspices of Better America Federation, on "Constitution of the United States." Carolyn Keller Carpenter, dramatic soprano, accompanied by Caroline Beall McCormick, will sing "Mornin' on the Ze Bayou," by Strickland, and "Danny Boy," by Weatherby. News items.

Program from 7:15 to 8 p.m. The musical part of tonight's program, which is "all grand opera," is arranged through the courtesy of Gloria Mayne, dramatic soprano, who, accompanied by Mrs. Guy Bush, will sing "The Jewel Song," from "Faust," by Gounod, and "Queen's Aria," from "The Magic Flute," by Mozart. Jerome Uhl, baritone, also accompanied by Mrs. Bush, will sing "The Evening Star," by Wagner, from the opera "Tannhauser," and "The Serenade," from Act IV of "Faust," by Gounod. Gloria Mayne and Jerome Uhl will sing a duet, "The Church Scene," from "Faust." Bedtime story. S. M. Vauclain, president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, will speak on "Pioneers of Transportation." Wallace B. Blood, head of America's first cross-country automobile radio tour, will tell of experiences on his trip. News items.

The song of the nightingale, which lovers of the open so frequently hear at eventide, found counterpart in the charming lyric-soprano interpretation of Sanderson's "Nightingale in June," sung last night by Florence Thomas, artist pupil of Elizabeth Newkirk. The clear and charming quality of the singer's voice put a mantle of glory over radioland and clothed the evening twilight with polychromatic raiment. Her other two numbers—"A Wedding in June," also by Sanderson, and "The Little Damosel," by Novello—gave Miss Thomas rare opportunity to show her vocal achievements in vocal coloring. She was accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Hennion Robinson, who also played the accompadiments for Harold Stanton.

Harold Stanton, whose tenor voice has been heard before from KHJ, returned last night, through the courtesy of France Goldwater, giving listeners-in a real treat. It is seldom that one finds a tenor voice of the strength and quality of Mr. Stanton's. When he sings, the microphone, which for some singers is almost against the lips, would pick up Mr. Stanton's voice from almost any point in the broadcast room. He sang three numbers—"Your Eyes Have Told Me So," by Kahn-Blaufuss; "Christ in Flanders," by Johnstone-Ward-Stevers, and "Lullaby," from "Jocelyn," by Godard.

Leslie McCormick, who was heard from Radio KHJ last Sunday morning in sacred numbers, again was heard last night in bass solos which permitted of greater expression and technique than previously. Accompanied by his wife, Caroline Beall McCormick, he sang that old familiar song which comes to mind whenever bass singing is mentioned—"Big Bass Viol," by Bohanon—O'Hara's prize French-Canadian dialect song, "Wreck of the Julie Plant," and "Trade Winds," by Keel.

An interesting experiment was made by KHJ during the afternoon program yesterday, in that one of F. E. Geiger's bass solos—"O, Golden Sun," by Grace Freeby—was sung in the open air from the roof of The Times Building, then reaing in the radio room, half without piano accompaniment and the remainder with the piano. Mr. Geiger's deep and resonant voice is admirably adapted to radio and although scheduled to sing but two numbers, the one mentioned and "Sweet Little Woman of Mine," by Bartlett, he graciously consented to sing two additional numbers to make up for the time allotted to Mary Newkerk Bower, who was present, but unable to sing by reason of a cold contracted the day before. Mrs. Bower has been heard several times from KHJ and will sing again on Sunday, July 23.

Mr. Geiger's two additional solos were "Duna," by McGill and "Elegie," by Massenet. He was accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Charles F. Reiche.

Dorothea Crist, 11-year-old whistler, artist pupil of Mrs. Woodward of the Southern California School of Artistic Whistling, gave two excelling solos—"In Springtime," by Homer Grunn, and "Chinese Lullaby," by Bowers. She was accompanied by Ella MacClashan.

The City Council of San Jose has authorized the erection of a municipal broadcast station to cost approximately $6000.

F. W. Thomas, 1305 West Villa street, Pasadena, takes his radio-frequency amplifier set nearly every place he goes. Already, he asserts, he has given exhibitions in over 100 different places, including the Pasadena Elks' Club.

They can't tune in properly when there's jazz in the air at Santa Susana. At least, such is the predicament of Dr. A. Hirschl, an ardent radioist, who is disturbed over the fact that he always thinks he has the wrong combination whenever syncopated music is being sent out. The Santa Susana school radio set, recently installed by the community players, is working satisfactorily after nightfall, although fading of signals is at times pronounced, according to R. M. Wright, Jr.

James Osborne, juvenile tenor, who has been hegrd favorably from The Times station on several occasions, is booked to sing at the Kinema Theater all of next week.

A variable condenser in a crystal set is more or less of a nuisance, for tuning can be accomplished satisfactorily with variable inductances. The ideal crystal detector receiver consists of a vario-coupler tapped in both primary and secondary, a small, fixed condenser bridged around the headphones, and a so-called permanent crystal detector. With such an outfit, radiophone music may be picked up comfortably a distance of twenty miles or perhaps slightly farther, providing a suitable antenna is employed. This antenna should be as high as possible, and at least eighty or 100 feet long. Four wires spaced three feet apart will give good results, and are superior to one wire. A crystal set may be guaranteed to work 150 miles. Probably it will—at night. Twenty miles, however, is about the maximum dependable distance that can be expected of the best crystal detector set for receiving 360 meter broadcast signals under ordinary conditions.

August 1 is probably the date on which the New York City municipal $50,000 broadcast station will begin operating.

A sermon of unusual interest will be given next Sunday morning from KHJ by the Rev. W. K. Dysinger, pastor of the First English Lutheran Church. Dr. Dysinger is a leader in the Lutheran denomination, and was formerly president of the Church Federation.

WYCB, operated by the Signal Corps, Bedloe's Island, New York Harbor, broadcasts every evening from to 9:55 on 1400 meters using three kilowatts of power.

It may interest listeners-in, who heard Marguerita Sylva from KHJ last Wednesday night, to know that Mme. Sylva's claim to the title of "the greatest living 'Carmen'," comes through her having sung the role 366 times, the performance at Hollywood Bowl bringing the total to that number. This is by far more times than any singer of this generation has done since Calve.

Two radio sets donated by Los Angeles newspapers, one of them by The Times, the other by the Express, will be given as prizes at the Ebell Club, 1719 South Figueroa street Tuesday evening July 18, at a card party and dance given for the benefit of the Out-patient Department of the Orthopedic Hospital school for crippled children.

Buttonlath

Where Better Walls Are Required

THE reason so many architects, contractors and builders insist on Buttonlath is because it removes all doubt as to the quality of the finished wall. The use of millions of square yards of Buttonlath over a period of years reflects the confidence that builders place in this fine material.

Buttonlath is a plastic composition compressed between layers of heavy waterproof paper. It is made in large uniform sheets that are easily and quickly erected. Thousands of plastic buttons protrude from the surface, giving a positive and everlasting key to applied mortar. The plaster flows over and around the buttons and is there to stay. The use of all wood and metal lath is eliminated.

GIRL TELLS OF ATTACK BY FIEND

Bound, Gagged and Left All Night in Deserted Building, Police Told

Brutally attacked by a man, believed by the police to be a degenerate, as she was on her way home from work late Wednesday night, Marian Woodworth, 18 years of age, was prostrated from a nervous shock yesterday at her home, 1304 West Twelfth street.

Descroptions of her assailant were sent to every police officer in the city and county, while Detectives Sergeants Rossell and Varey conducted a search of the haunts of criminals in the underworld of the city.

Miss Woodworth told the police that a few minutes after she had left a restaurant at 320 West Ninth street, where she is employed, she was accosted by a stranger who walked up behind her and asked if "he could see her home." Frightened, Miss Woodworth said she ran as hard as she could toward her home. At Pico and Sentous her assailant caught up with her and grabbed her around the neck. She struggled fiercely, she said, but was unable to shake the man off. Enraged, he then struck her on the chin, knocking her unconscious.

When she regained consciousness Miss Woodworth declared she found herself bound and gagged with pieces of rags on the floor of the annex to the Sentous Junior High School which is now under construction. Her assailant had vanished. Unable to free herself from her bounds she was forced to remain in the building all night while her mother, Mrs. Elsie Wernher was frantic at home. Leroy Horn of 1015 West Tenth street, a laborer working on the annex, found Miss Woodworth early this morning. He at once untied the bonds that held her and notified the police. Miss Woodworth was taken to the Receiving Hospital where she was treated for painful bruises of the face. She was then sent home.

BOY HANGS HIMSELF FROM BARN RAFTER

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN MATEO, July 13. — The body of Arthur Hancock, 14-year-old schoolboy, was found hanging from a rafter in a barn near here today by his 17-year-old brother Clifford, who has been seeking him since yesterday. A twisted sheet had been used for a rope. A high chair lay near by, indicating that the boy had kicked it from under him after using it to tie the sheet to the rafter.

Inquiry at the Hancock home developed that the boy apparently had always been in good spirits. He left no farewell note as far as could be learned.

TROOPS READY FOR STRIKERS

Texas Strike Riots Growing More Lawless

Regulars May be Rushed to Railroad Center

Mails Must be Protected at All Costs

of our guards have been taken off trains and beaten up. Sixty-four cars of live stock and meat in interstate commerce are being detained on account of interference by strikers. United States marshals so far have been unable to cope with situation. We have just now reported situation by telephone to the commanding general of the Eighth Corps area at San Antonio. We have also reported it to the Governor of Texas. I respectfully request aid and urge that you send a detachment of United States troops to Denison today to prevent riot and bloodshed or loss of lives and property, and to assure movement of interstate commerce on Missouri, Kansas and Texas lines, which have heretofore been designated by the War Department as Class A, military lines, to be maintained and operated in event of major emergency. Please telegraph your decision and greatly oblige."

The Secretary of War sent the following message to Mr. Schaff:

ASK STATE FIRST

"I have your report. You should make demand on Governor of Texas first to protect lives and property, including requisite protection from lawlessness and violence to permit the operation of trains. The State is charged with responsibility in such matters, but in case the State authorities are unable or unwilling to maintain law and order, the Federal government is ready to afford protection and will take action if necessary as soon as you have reply from Governor."

Reports have reached Washington that Gov. Neff of Texas has failed to employ his resources to the full for the suppression of lawlessness and the protection of the men who have taken the strikers' places.

The situation with respect to the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railway was extraordinary, for two reasons, Secretary Weeks said. In the first place, Mr. Schaff, the receiver, is a government agent, having been employed under the rulings of the Federal court and the acts complained of are acts against the orders of a Federal court. But more important than this is the second consideration, namely, that interstate commerce is being impeded and persons apparently are being killed.

The National Guard of the State of Texas is in fairly good condition, according to War Department reports. These records show that it contains 126 officers and 5581 men, a force which authorities here regard as ample to cope with almost any situation which might arise if the forces were efficiently used.

Gen. Hines, the Regular Army officer commanding the Eighth Corps Area, and the man under whose direction any Federal troops that might be employed would operate, has more than 16,000 men at his disposal. This includes the famous Second Division, which is the only full division in the American Army today.

Information here indicates that the adjutant-general of the National Guard of Texas is Tom Barton of Amarillo, Tex. Barton served as a major in a fighting division during the World War, and has an excellent record. He was wounded in action and also was cited for gallant service.

Atty.-Gen. Daugherty said that he would continue to appoint special deputy marshals whenever requested to do so by courts or district attorneys. He added that no deputies would be appointed who are affiliated in any way with the railroads, and that the deputies appointed must be responsible citizens capable of carrying out orders. They will be paid by the government, not by the railroads.

All automobile owners in the country will be forced into a gigantic reserve to help carry the mails, in case railroad strikers should seriously interfere with their transportation, according to plans being considered today by the Postoffice Department. Each would make a ten-mile haul.

Formation of such a nation-wide organization of patriotic automobile owners would be in addition to the use of postal and army trucks and airplanes to carry the United States mails should emergency arise.

Replying to the proffer of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of the United States, represented in the larger cities to assist in the transportation of the mails with 1000 commercial airplanes, carrying 8,000,000 letters daily, the Postmaster-General sent the following telegram this afternoon:

"Good! Fine! More evidence if any were needed that the one big union we hear about is the United States and its emblem is the Stars and Stripes."

REQUEST TROOPS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT, July 13.—Frank T. Newton, United States Marshal for the eastern district of Michigan, today sent a telegram to the United States Attorney-General's department in Washington asking that 500 Federal troops be sent into Saginaw for duty at the Pere Marquette Railroad shops where 1200 men are on strike and where serious disturbances occurred Wednesday night. Mr. Newton returned from Saginaw this morning after witnessing a riot at the railroad yard last night when strike-breakers were escorted out of the city by strikers. He said he was convinced that the local authorities at Saginaw could not get enough deputies to handle the situation.

Newton talked with Gov. Groesbeck at Lansing over the telephone regarding the possibility of State troops being sent to Saginaw. The Governor was to confer with Saginaw officials regarding the need for troops.

Immediately upon his return this morning Mr. Newton went into conference with Earl J. Davis, United States District Attorney here and officials of the Pere Marquette Railroad. The officials asked that steps be taken immediately to protect the shops at Saginaw, which they say the strikers have openly threatened to destroy, and for protecting workmen.

GROWERS FEAR LOSS OF CROP

Will Appeal to Governor for State Aid

San Joaquin Shippers Unite in Strike Crisis

Railroads Accept Shipments at Consigner's Risk

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

FRESNO, July 13.—Fruit growers and shippers of this district, civil organizations throughout the San Joaquin Valley today took steps to enlist State aid in the battle to save crops from waste and destruction by preparing an appeal to Gov. Stephens.

The appeal will be sent from Fresno by the Valley Industrial Association, composed of 400 members and backed by 52 valley Chambers of Commerce and hundreds of growers and shippers.

In a telegram the shippers assured the Governor that the entire valley is behind him in his fight to enforce law and order in the rail strike crisis.

The San Joaquin Valley faces a grave problem in the shipment of its crops which, according to growers and shippers, will spoil unless immediate transportation is assured.

Representatives of the San Joaquin Valley communities, growers and shippers and railroad officials will meet this afternoon to decide upon some precautionary methods that can be taken to prevent the impending losses.

In the telegram the Valley Industrial Association will assure the Governor that the San Joaquin Valley will lend its support in any move that will insure movement of millions of dollars worth of crops in the San Joaquin Valley and urge that he take immediate action in the crisis now facing the growers and shippers of that district.

Both the Santa Fe and Southern Pacific Railroads, through their officials here, declare that the forces employed to take the place of the striking shopmen are rapidly assuming normal strength but they fear that when the full brunt of the fruit shipments strikes them, the force must be increased to an even greater number than before the strike went into effect.

Fruit shipments during the strike will only be accepted by the railroads with the understanding that all risk rests on the shoulders of the shippers, the roads declare.

Just what state aid is wanted by the local shippers was not stated today but it is thought they desire to place the problem up to the Governor.

SHOPS HAVE HALF CREWS AT PRESENT

Railroad Executives Say Fifty Per Cent of Normal Number is Working

More than 50 per cent of the normal number of workers are on the job in local railroad shops, according to reports given out yesterday by officials of the Southern Pacific, Santa Fe and Union Pacific, and the rest of the places made vacant by the strikers are being slowly filled by new men.

"We have 60 per cent of our usual number in the Vernon shops now," was the declaration in the office of the Santa Fe's general manager. "Moreover, everything is quiet."

With police details on hand to inforce Chief Oaks's order against intimidating tactics on the part of strike pickets, it is expected that more men will answer the call for shopmen. The police head warned the unions that he would deputize 4000 citizens to maintain peace if the strikers attempted to keep the loyal workers from exercising their right of earning an honest living.

Pickets Attack News Writer in Worker's Garb

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

TULSA (Okla.) July 13.—Pickets doing duty about the shops of the St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad in West Tulsa last night attacked a reporter for the Tulsa World, who, disguised as a laborer, sought to enter the shops with the avowed intention of seeking a job.

The reporter got past the first group of pickets encountered, after being threatened and warned that "rough guys" were between him and the shops, according to his story. He had gone but a few steps when he again was stopped and this time one of the pickets, without warning, struck him a blow on the jaw that knocked him down. He then was taken aboard an interurban car and "escorted" to Tulsa.

The reporter said he did not reveal his identity to the pickets.

STRIKERS HAVE NOT HURT "KATY" LINES

LOCAL OFFICIALS ADVISED THAT TRAINS ARE BEING RUN ON SCHEDULE

Isolated cases of disorder on the part of strikers at points on the Missouri, Kansas and Texas lines have had practically no ill effect on the operation of the M. K. and T. system, generally, according to a statement made yesterday by A. W. Bonnycastle, local District Freight and Passenger agent for that system of railways.

The following telegrams were received yesterday and last Wednesday by Mr. Bonnycastle from W. W. Miller, general freight agent of the M. K. and T. system, with headquarters at St. Louis:

"A. W. Bonnycastle, 810 Central Building, Los Angeles. Strike situation business moving normally on all districts except Hannibal to New Franklin. Will send daily advice. W. W. MILLER."

The message received yesterday was as follows: "Condition on line practically unchanged. Trains moving practically on time. Advise all interested.

"W. W. MILLER."

Three Strikers are Arrested on Suspicion

Asserted to have been loitering near the Southern Pacific shops, and suspected by the police that they intended to start trouble, three strikers were arrested last night for violation of the city's anti-picketing law, passed by the City Council in 1910.

Steve Gsieo, aged 27, a car builder.

Mike Wukich, aged 26, also a car builder.

Steve Gisko, aged 29, laborer.

The strikers were arrested at Leroy and North Main streets by Sergt. Pfhalar. They were later confined in the Lincoln Heights Jail.

ORDER RESTRAINING UNIONS IS ISSUED

SOUTHERN PACIFIC OBTAINS RELIEF FROM STRIKER INTERFERENCE

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 13.—On petition of the Southern Pacific Company, a temporary restraining order was issued here today by Judge Maurice T. Dooling in the United States District Court against seven railroad shop craft unions, forty-nine individuals, including twenty-five John Does and three associations whose names were said to be unknown. The order was made returnable at Sacramento July 20. It was filed in the office of the District Court there earlier in the day today, and forbids the individuals and organizations from interfering with the operation of trains or the progress of other railroad work.

The Southern Pacific Company charges in the complaint that the defendants or others under their direction are responsible for:

The shooting at Gerber, July 10, when a bystander was wounded.

The shooting at Roseville, July 10, when a guard was wounded.

The damage to the water tank at Newcastle, July 10.

Continued intimidation of employees so that the railroad cannot conduct its business and operate its trains without suffering irreparable injury.

The defendants named are:

International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths, Drop Forgers and Helpers.

International Association of Machinists.

Amalgamated Sheet Metal Workers' International Alliance.

International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

Brotherhood of Railway Carmen.

All officers, agents and members of these organizations.

Then follows the list of individuals named as defendants.

SAN BERNARDINO STRIKERS QUIET

LOS ANGELES BLACKSMITH IS BEATEN BY STRIKERS AT YERMO

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN BERNARDINO, July 13.—With the injunction issued by Federal Judge Bledsoe in effect, San Bernardino was quiet today. Federal pickets were on the lines in the vicinity of the Santa Fe shops, particularly where rioting broke out Wednesday night in which C. R. Flint, a machinist, and Charles D. Baker, maintenance of way worker, were beaten by a mob of 250 people.

Clashes between strikers and Santa Fe guards at Needles, where two men were wounded in a gun battle late Wednesday afternoon subsided with the arrival of Sheriff Shay and deputies in the desert city. George Moreno, striker, shot by E. L. Zinn, a guard, was said today to be mortally wounded.

W. H. Comstock, general manager of the Union Pacific lines in California, today telegraphed Sheriff Shay that "A formal demand is hereby made upon you for protection of employees at Yermo and other points in Southern California," after F. O. Pearcall, a blacksmith, hired in Los Angeles, was taken from a train at Yermo by four strikers, driven twenty miles into the desert, severely beaten and ordered not to return under pain of death.

Pearcall was picked up by a passing motorist and taken to Barstow, from where he returned to Los Angeles by train. He is under the care of physicians.

STRIKERS OPPOSE SENDING OF TROOPS

TEXAS UNIONISTS DEMAND GOVERNMENT INQUIRY INTO CONDITIONS

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

DENISON (Tex.) July 13.—Telegrams were sent tonight to United States Senators Morris Sheppard and Charles Culberson from Texas, in Washington, by O. J. Shoemaker, general chairman of union car men here, urging a complete investigation of the strike situation in Denison by the government before Federal troops are sent here. This action followed the joint conference of the "big four" brotherhoods this afternoon.

Officials of local labor unions tonight expressed themselves as vigorously opposed to the sending of Federal troops here, and expressed fear of grave trouble if such action is taken.

U. S. Dist.-Atty. Bryan reviewed the situation here today, and said he found no need for troops at this time.

Action of the joint conference of Denison members of the "Big Four" brotherhoods, held this afternoon on the question of stopping work on crippled trains, was not made public.

CASH SHORTAGE GROWS BIGGER

Venice Official Finds $17,000 in City Funds Gone

Former Treasurer Awaiting Hearing in Court

Friends Abandon Effort to Raise Money

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

VENICE, July 13.—The shortage of J. T. Peasegood, Jr., former City Treasurer of Venice, will approximate $17,000, according to Treasurer P. G. Knickerbocker, who is now beginning a third month in an endeavor to ascertain the exact amount of the late treasurer's shortage.

Mr. Knickerbocker said today that in view of the jumbled condition of the accounts, he believes that the exact amount Peasegood appropriated to his own use will never be made known. The shortages, he said, date from the latter part of 1917.

Peasegood, who is now in Los Angeles awaiting trial, returned voluntarily while a search was in progress for him. He has not yet entered a plea.

Soon after he returned to Los Angeles a movement was started among his friends to make good his shortage. At that time it was believed that the amount would not exceed $10,000. About $4500 was pledged, it is said, when it was learned that the shortage would be considerably more. When this was learned, the movement to make good his shortage became only lukewarm and as far as can be learned today nothing is being done.

Peasegood was under a bond of $15,000. The bonding company intends to prosecute, but some friends here believe they will agree to granting the former treasurer probation, providing they are reimbursed to the amount of the bond.

As a result of Peasegood's shortage, the city faces a peculiar situation. About $11,000 of the money he is asserted to have appropriated came out of the street fund, of which he was trustee.

Hundreds of citizens sent in the money to take up the coupons on the bonds. Peasegood is asserted to have appropriated most of this money to his own use, will the result that the city does not know who has paid up on the street bonds and who has not. The payers have no receipt, other than canceled checks, as in ordinary cases the canceled bond was sufficient receipt.

Paige, Pomona; first-vice president, R. B. Kennedy, Whittier; second vice-president, R. H. Neely, West Covina; treasurer, George E. Cross, Puente; secretary, Charles P. Bayer, Pomona.

Among the important standing committees named was a new one under the title of the committee on greater service, with Dean W. C. Ebaugh of Sierra Madre, chairman. This committee will include George W. Dake, of San Gabriel, W. G. Fields, of San Dimas; C. J. O'Connor of Monrovia and George D. Wimp of Glendora.

During today's session Monrovia invited the twenty municipalities of the associated chambers to a picnic to be held in Monrovia Canyon Park. The invitation was accepted and the date tentatively fixed for some time during August.

MAKE ATTEMPT TO RECALL MANAGER

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONG BEACH, July 13.—Sponsors of a movement to oust City Manager C. S. Hughes from office here declared today that they will take the matter direct to the City Council at a forthcoming meeting. Petitions, calling for the City Manager's recall on the grounds of inefficient administration of the city's affairs have been placed in circulation by a group who would have a different form of administrative government in Long Beach.

Appeals to voters to support the city administration by refusing to sign the petitions, were issued today by the Chamber of Commerce following the adoption of a resolution by the organization condemning the attempted recall movement as "unwarranted and unjustified."

PUSSY'S DEMISE STARTS TROUBLE

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SOUTH PASADENA, July 13.—A grave legal question arose when a dead cat was found lying in one of the more dignified residential streets. Neighbors thereabouts called every city department asking that the animal be taken away and buried.

Some one suggested that the easiest solution would be for one of the parties concerned to do the burying and end the matter.

But alas, there is an ordinance prohibiting private individuals from burying animals within the city.

Pasadena's New Park Officially Deeded to City

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PASADENA, July 13.—Carmelita Gardens, thirteen-acre park at the corner of Colorado street and Orange Grove avenue, formally became the property of the city of Pasadena today, with the filing of a deed of gift from the syndicate of wealthy residents who purchased it after the voters had rejected a proposition to use city money for the purpose. The donors, headed by Dr. John Willis Baer, subscribed $210,000 for the property.

Carmelita Gardens has been practically a private park for many years and is covered with rare trees and shrubbery. Jacob Albrecht, park superintendent, has placed Charles Kettle, a landscape gardener, in charge of the property, and announced today that it is open to the public. It is probable that eventually an art gallery will be erected on the property.

BOY SCOUTS PREVENT BIG MOUNTAIN FIRE

YOUTHFUL HEROES BATTLE BLAZE IN NATIONAL FOREST

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

MONROVIA, July 13. — How two Boy Scouts, out on an overnight "test" hike from their camp in Bear Canyon, a branch of the San Gabriel, discovered and extinguished a forest fire of considerable proportions, near Crystal Lake, and thereby prevented what might have been a devastating mountain blaze, is told today by Rev. George W. Thomas, Scout Master, on his return from the Scout camp.

The two Scout heroes are Adrian Winkler of the Arcadia Eagle Patrol, and Gordon Porter of the Monrovia Bear Patrol. They were homeward bound to camp from their overnight hike to Crystal Lake, when they discovered the fire, already covering 1600 feet of territory and spreading in the direction of a fence piled with dead brush and directly toward a cabin.

The Scouts went into action, dragged away all the brush, made a firebreak and after two hours put out the fire. They then hiked all the way to Camp Rincon and reported the fire to the ranger before returning to their camp.

Had the flames gone undiscovered a few hours longer, the fire would probably has been beyond control and would have burned over a large area of tinder dry mountainside. At camp, their forty companies voted Winkler and Porter each 200 merits.

Children Made Orphans by Fatal Accident Ask Damages

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

ONTARIO, July 13.—Just one year after an accident at the Hellman-avenue crossing in the Alta Loma section to the northeast of Ontario, in which their father, Arthur D. Allen, was instantly killed and their mother, Mrs. Lucy E. Allen was fatally injured, their three orphaned children today filed suit in the Superior Court against the Pacific Electric Railway Company asking $10,000 for the loss of their mother.

The complaint sets forth that the railway was operating the train unlawfully, traveling at a high rate of speed while approaching the crossing on which their parents were added to the the death toll in traffic accidents. The children say the trainmen approached the crossing without sounding signals and that their mother was given no warning of the speeding train.

The boys' father was killed instantly, and Mrs. Allen was so severely injured that she died two days later at the San Antonio Hospital here, where she was taken following the crash.

Adding a touch of pathos to the suit of the orphans is their plea to the courts to order the railway company to pay the physicians' and hospital bill and for the plot in Bellevue Cemetery, where the body of their mother was interred.

The offer was par, accrued interest and a premium of $35. On advice of former City Attorney Haslett, who pointed to the unsettled and downward tendency of the bond market, the bid was accepted.

WORK ON MURDER MYSTERY

Officers at Fresno Follow Every Clew in Effort to Clear Up Killing

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

FRESNO, July 13.—A mystery woman believed to have knowledge of the murderer of 16-year-old Pauline Grass and Alex Winter, is being sought by Sheriff Jones today as the latest development in the double murder mystery.

The woman is reported to have attended the double funeral here Tuesday of the murdered couple. She told mourners that she knew the identity, but feared to reveal it, because she herself would be murdered in retaliation. Several mourners overheard her. Among them was Alexander Flack, local farmer, and Mrs. G. Steinert.

Sheriff Jones discovered this latest clew this morning and immediately started his search. Other than this, there were no new developments in the efforts to solve the mystery in the past twenty-four hours. Systematic quizzing of youths of neighboring towns has revealed scores who knew the murdered couple, but has thrown no light on the double tragedy of Sunday night.

Al Sanger is talking about the Grass-Winter double murder. During the daytime, women and children congregate at the various homes and talk over the affair. At evening time, men and boys are to be seen standing around the business section of the village in small groups endeavoring by exchange of opinions to solve the mystery.

Because of this very fact rumors run rampant and the country is full of fantastic theories as to how the crime was committed and who may or may not have been connected with it. All of these rumors must be investigated, some of them leading to new developments, while others prove to be falsehoods.

SCHOOL EXPANSION

Patrons Provide Extra Room For Students at Yucaipa

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

REDLANDS, July 13.—Relief from the overcrowded conditions in the Yucaipa schools, where it was necessary during the last year to work on part time so that all the children could be accommodated, will be secured the coming year. The people of the valley have voted bonds in the sum of $4500 to add two new rooms to the big grammar school building that serves the Whole Valley.

A purchaser for the bonds was found in advance so it is said and the plans are to rush construction so that it can be completed by the opening of the fall term. It is only temporary relief, it is said, as all of the additional space will be needed this year and something more must be done in another year.

Tax Roll Shows Big Increase in Crown City

Funeral of Pioneer is to be Held This Afternoon

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PASADENA, July 13.—Recommendations that Pasadena establish a twenty-four-hour school for delinquents are made in the annual report of E. R. Smith, school attendance officer, filed with the Board of Edcation today. By means of such a school, Mr. Smith said "boys can be saved from an environment that is sending them to ruin and receive adequate care and supervision both night and day." Mr. Smith blames parents for truancy of children.

The principal truancy months are March and October, the report shows. Reaction from the first month of school attendance in the case of the latter month, and the attractions of early spring in the case of the former, increase the truancy record then, according to the report.

Hereafter, instead of holding the child wholly responsible for truancy, parents will be haled into court and asked to explain nonattendance at school, the officer says. The only excuse acceptable will be that the child cannot be controlled, and in this case it will be made a ward of the court if the procedure favored by Mr. Smith is followed.

TAX ROLL GROWS

The tentative assessment roll of Pasadena for 1922-1923, completed today, shows an increase of $6,992,893 over last year's figures. The new total, subject to action by the Board of Equalization, is $87,527,733. This is exclusive of unsecured personal property. The increase is 7.22 per cent for the entire city.

Increases for the annexed districts run higher, the north annex showing a rise of $918,462, or 9.76 per cent; San Rafael Heights, Linda Vista, Pasadena Heights and Lamanda Park, together have a gain of $501,130, or 9.15 per cent, and the East Pasadena annex has $1,181,766 more than last year's total, or 7.71 per cent. In the original city the net valuation is $54,415,510, an increase of 6.40 per cent or $3,291,540.

The Board of Equalization will be in session till the end of next week, when the exact assessment will be made known.

NAVAL SHIP BACK AFTER LONG JAUNT

Beaver to Convoy Twelve Obsolete Submarines to Decommissioning Point

Absent from the Pacific Coast for nearly a year, the submarine tender Beaver will reach the Los Angeles Harbor Submarine Base at daylight tomorrow. The Beaver, August last, convoyed a division of S-type submarines from the local base to Pearl Harbor, Hawaii. Since then she has been to practically every Asiatic base of the United States Navy and comes direct to Los Angeles Harbor from Guam.

About the 25th inst., she is scheduled to sail for Hampton Roads with eight H-type and four L-type submarines from here in convoy, the obsolete underwater craft being sent to the east coast for decommissioning. When she returns here late in September she will bring from New London, Ct., nine huge submarines of the new S-type for station at this base.

Capt. W. S. Miller announced yesterday that ten days will be required to load enough stores aboard the Beaver to supply her flock of twelve submarines on the 5000-mile run to Hampton Roads. The Canal Zone will be the only stop en route.

Several other additions will be made soon to the force now at the Los Angeles Harbor base. The minesweeper Tern will return from Mare Island on the 19th inst., while shortly after that date the minesweeper Ortolan will arrive from the same base to become the new tender for the submarines stationed here. The new steamer Procyon is now en route to Los Angeles Harbor from Hampton Roads to relieve the battleship Connecticut as flagship of the Pacific Fleet base force, while tomorrow the transport Sirius will also leave there for this port.

NEW LINER TO ARRIVE TOMORROW

City of Los Angeles Will be Reconditioned Here for Honolulu Service

The City of Los Angeles, new 22,000-ton passenger liner to be operated in the Los Angeles-Honolulu service of the Los Angeles Steamship Company, will reach this port from New York late tomorrow, it was announced last night by Capt. N. H. Anderson, port captain of the concern.

The City of Los Angeles left New York on June 29 and upon her arrival here will proceed directly to the yards of the Los Angeles Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Corporation for reconditioning. Work of fitting the huge craft for the new service will require six weeks and will give employment to several hundred skilled workmen, officials of the company said last night. The City of Honolulu, sister ship of the City of Los Angeles, left New York for this port on the 12th inst.

September 9 was announced yesterday as the tentative date for the City of Los Angeles' departure on her maiden trip to Honolulu. Thereafter, the two liners will sail from this port for Honolulu every second Saturday and eastbound from Honolulu every third Saturday.

PORT NOTES

Completing her last trip in the oriental freight service of Struthers & Barry, Inc., the Admiral Schley steamer West Point arrived at Los Angeles Harbor last night from Yokohama and Singapore with 2000 tons of cargo for this port. The 12,000-ton freighter, built for the Los Angeles shipbuilding and Dry Dock Corporation, is the first of four sister ships purchased by the Shipping Board from the Emergency Fleet Corporation, to be turned over to her new owners.

Replacing the West Point on the Struthers & Barry service will be the freighter Admiral Rodgers, which has been laid up at Seattle since March, 1921. She is expected to arrive here from Seattle yesterday afternoon and will undergo general overhauling before entering her new service.

Several other changes in shipping interests operating out of this port were announced last night by H. E. Barry, agent for Struthers & Barry at Los Angeles Harbor.

The steamer Monmouth, an 8500-ton Shipping Board craft, has been taken from the Pacific Mail and will be transferred to the Atlantic for the freighter-Derbisy in the South American service of the General Petroleum Corporation. She will sail from this port next week on the schedule of the Derbisy, still the largest craft to transit the canal by way of Panama. She will be replaced on the South American run by one of the General liners.

The 12,000-ton freighter West Hemdon, sister ship of the West Compton, which returned here from Australia June 30, has also been laid up on the Pacific side.

Harry Scott and Drew Chidester, officials of the new Trans-Oceanic and General Steamship Company, arrived at Los Angeles Harbor yesterday from San Francisco. They are here conferring with shipping men on the local activities of the company.

Word has been received here by E. M. Bamberger, local Shipping Board agent, that the Pacific Mail and Panama Steamship companies have submitted

BUSINESS NEWS OF BUSY MARTS

Two Per Cent Loan Companies Go Way of Threes

Light and Power Utilities Are Bond Favorites

Oil Production in Decline Here and in Mexico

Well laid plans for he newly organized 3 per cent loan companies, carefully designed by their promoters to evade the State supervision which recently proved the undoing of the 3 per cent loan concerns, were given a rude upset yesterday when summary orders to suspend operations were issued by Commissioner of Corporations Edwin M. Daugherty to the United Kealty and Mortgage Company and the National Service Company, both located in the Merritt Building.

These companies, according to Mr. Daugherty, were operating on substantially the same basis as the 3 per cent loan organizations, which, after they were placed under the supervision of the corporation department, either went out of business or were turned into 4 per cent companies. The only difference between the wo lies in the fact that the 3 per cent loans were made on a contract issued by the company, while the 3 per cent transactions were based on an application coming from the borrower.

On the grounds that the 3 per cent loan contracts were the issuances of an individual borrower and not of a company or corporation, the promoters expected to evade the jurisdiction of the corporation department. The matter was placed before Atty.-Gen. Webb and upon the receipt of a ruling from him to the effect that the 3 per cent concerns were within the department's official province, yesterday's suspension order was issued. Mr. Daugherty's letter to the companies follows in part:

"This will serve as notice to you to cease all operations in the soliciting and receiving of applications for so-called 3 per cent loans.

"We are advised by the Attorney-General of this State that your operations are subject to the jurisdiction of this department. The continuance of operations by you will lay you and your salesmen further subject to the penalties imposed by the Corporate Securities Act, and will result in summary action being taken."

Officials of the United Realty and Mortgage Company are James Arnold, president; John O'Flynn, vice-president and Byron R. Marsh, secretary. The National Service Company was organized by C. A. Copien and C. Ince Toppin. Burrel D. Neighbors and F. A. Jeffers are acting as counsel for both concerns.

IN THE BOND MARKET

Increasing popularity of power and light utility issues is a factor in the present bond market that is being commented on by local investment bankers. The demand from individual investors has been unusually keen and it is said that the large eastern houses are having difficulty in securing large enough blocks of first-grade issues to meet the demand from institutions.

Of course, the chief cause for the present favor being shown hydroelectric bonds is the higher yield that they give as compared to municipals and the higher grade rail issues. However, investors are switching to these securities for other reasons. A cut in corporation income tax rates, which is a possibility, would improve the earnings of the utilities.

There is another factor controlling the value of light and power securities. Estimates as to how long the world's coal and oil supply will last are futile, because long before the exhaustion of that supply need worry us, power generated from waterways will be turning the wheels of industry. This problem is being worked out

DAILY TRADE TALK

Glimpse into the Future; the Day in Review; Tires and Cotton; Whose Meteor?

BY CHAPIN HALL

Every now and then a professional purveyor of publicity strikes a note of interest and recalls to public attention financial history of importance. There comes to Trade Talk such a document which has for its primary purpose stimulation of enthusiasm for the recent loan floated by the Kingdom of The Netherlands, amounting to 150,000,000 guilders, which may be purchased at $960 per bond, to yield 6.10 per cent to maturity, or 6.20 per cent if called in 1942.

The California Company which is offering the bonds on the local market recalls that the independence of the United States is in a large measure due to the assistance of Holland. Due to her sympathy with the American colonies, with a foresight that independence would mean the growth of a large commercial nation, in which Holland would share and be a factor in its commerce, the Dutch government in 1782, while we were still fighting for independence, loaned the colonies $720,000 through the negotiations of John Adams. In 1783 they advanced $354,000 more. This was the first real evidence of our national credit position in the Old World. These two loans were further supplemented over the years from 1784 to 1788, the period of greatest financial uncertainty for the newly established republic. These loans finally aggregated $3,296,000, the only foreign loans received by our government during that period.

The attitude of the Dutch government regarding the United States inspired the confidence of Europe, which was of inestimable assistance. As early as 1825 the Dutch had invested substantially in the securities of American undertakings, among the first of which were the shares and then the bonds of the Philadelphia Bank, the American States and Canal companies, the New Jersey Central Railway Company, and in 1856 the bonds of the State of Louisiana. In 1873 the Dutch had invested extensively in sixty American companies, and such railway shares as the Erie, Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific, Union Pacific, Central Pacific and Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe. This inflow of Dutch capital was instrumental in giving impetus to the development of our railway systems and to the development of the West.

The scope of Dutch investments in this country has been enlarged during the present century, so that all our American industrial corporations now have substantial Dutch interests among their stockholders. Among these corporations are the United Stathes Steel Corporation, American Car and Foundry Company, American Smelting and Refining Company, and American Telephone and Telegraph Company. It is estimated that The Netherlands Mortgage Banks have advanced money on land and buildings in the United States in an amount exceeding $50,000,000.

Following the Napoleonic wars, England, Holland and other European countries took a keen interest in the development of foreign resources. Now, after the World War, the United States is in a position which enables her to give substantial impetus to the development of other growing countries possessing large potential resources.

Trade follows capital. As this nation develops more and more industrially it will be increasingly necessary to seek new and outside sources of raw materials. This implies the investment of capital abroad in order to secure, or at least pay for, these materials. A beginning has already been made by the United States in acquiring large foreign holdings, and this movement is bound to continue.

RENO MADE EASY

Pickwick Stages, Inc., have applied to the Railroad Commission for permission to establish passenger and express stage service between Los Angeles and the California-Nevada line, north of Colevile. The company states that this is part of a route to be operated between Los Angeles and Reno, and is intended primarily to serve tourists, vacationists and sightseers.

SUGAR ADVANCE

The Mercantile Trust Company of San Francisco says that the most recent encouraging business development in the Hawaiian Islands was the advance in the price of sugar, which will probably mean a small profit on the year's operations, instead of a loss. During the month raw sugar advanced from 4.38 cents a pound to 4.86 cents, and present indications are that the plantations will show a profit for 1922 of about $3,000,000 as against a loss of many millions last year.

In the islands the opinion prevails that the price of sugar will remain near the present figure. This is based on the feeling that the demand is rapidly approaching the point at which it will exceed the supply. Sugar men are confident of the future, in view of the fact that world production this year will be somewhat under the prewar production, and a quick return to normal in the industry may reasonably be expected.

Widespread belief that next year's price will be upward of 5 cents a pound has encouraged all business in the islands. At the expected price and with normal crops and normal labor supply, many of the plantations will be in a position to pay dividends out of earnings.

THE SILVER LINING

Henry Clews, in his current review, enters into accord with other economic reviewers in agreement that the silver lining in the cloud of business is turned outward, and that despite deplorable conditions abroad, unemployment in Great Britain, financial disorder in Germany, political intrigue in France, ruin in Russia, and derangement of international trade everywhere; despite these extraordinary drawbacks, the prevailing spirit in the United States is one of growing optimism, based partly on the well-founded belief that conditions are in reality improving, and that reconstruction in the war-torn nations of Europe is slowly and surely progressing and must continue to progress.

At home the symptoms are much more encouraging. Labor is less intransient, trade is expanding in volume, railroad traffic shows considerable improvement, standard industries are increasing their outputs, values are rising, money is easy, the crop outlook good and the banking situation exceptionally strong.

Perhaps the most unsatisfactory feature is the outlook for the cotton crop, but this difficulty has its offset in the fact that the South will get about double last year's prices for their crop; also that the left-over supply from last season will materially alleviate any serious shortage.

The one great danger in the business situation is general inflation and too rapid a rise in values; a hazard that is well understood in banking circles and will be guarded against by all prudent business men.

VICTORY NOTES

The Treasury calls attention to the fact that although all 3 3-4 per cent Victory notes were called for redemption on June 15, there were two weeks later over $30,111,000 of such notes still outstanding which had not yet been presented for redemption. Interest on all 3 3-4 per cent Victory notes ceased on June 15, pursuant to the call for redemption. There were outstanding on June 15 about $240,-

First Mortgage Hydro-Electric Bond

CONSERVATIVE minded investors who require besides unquestioned safety a large degree of stable marketability will find such qualities in the First Mortgage 5% Bonds of the Sierra & San Francisco Power Company.

This underlying seasoned California hydro-electric security is fortified by every provision to make the issue attractive. If you purchase these bonds you would have as security for your money a first mortgage on all properties of this company.

The chief properties are two valuable hydro-electric generating plants on the Stanislaus River, steel tower transmission lines to San Francisco 137 miles away, and a modern auxiliary steam electric generating station in San Francisco.

The company's system is leased until 1934 by the Pacific Gas & Electric Company under favorable contract for operation. All the details attendant on this lease have been approved by the California Railroad Commission with respect to rentals, maintenance, depreciation and the position of the company when the lease expires.

For the five years ending Dec. 31, 1919, the net earnings applicable to bond interest averaged more than 2.2 times annual charges on outstanding first mortgage bonds. According to the terms of the lease, the Pacific Gas & Electric Company has paid bond interest since that date.

Besides these advantages, if you hold this bond you will have a utility first mortgage due in 15 years—exempt from Personal Property Taxes in California—listed on the New York Stock Exchange—and callable at 110.

These bonds are priced at 87 and accrued interest to yield over 6.10%. A note from you asking for further information about the Sierra & San Francisco Power Company bonds will bring full details from us.

Cuyamaca Building Company

First Mortgage 7% Sinking Fund Gold Bonds

Security for these bonds will be a closed first mortgage on the valuable business corner owned in fee simple located at Fifth and "B" streets, San Diego, California, together with the six-story Class "A" reinforced concrete and steel office store and theater building now in process of construction thereon, completion of which is fully guaranteed. The combined value of land and building will be approximately $1,250,000.

A fifty-year lease on the theater portion has been executed by Alexander Pantages at an annual rental of $36,000, while applications covering a large proportion of the remaining space are on file. On the basis of these facts, it is conservatively estimated net income available for interest charges, after full deductions for vacancies, taxes, insurance, expense, etc., will be in excess of 2.7 times requirements.

These Bonds are exempt from personal property taxes in this State and they are sold subject to being certified as a legal investment for California Savings Banks. They will mature July 1, 1937.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, July 13.—The stock market was irregular and unsettled in spots today, despite new factors of an encouraging character, among which was the lowest quotation on call loans since the latter part of June.

Cumulative evidence of world-wide monetary ease was found in another reduction of the Bank of England rediscount rate to 3 per cent. This is the lowest figure for this form of accommodation at the British metropolis since January, 1914.

Advice from Washington attributed to treasury officials promptly dispelled the idea of any further out in Federal Reserve rediscounts and advances. Secretary Mellon was quoted in opposition to such action on the ground that it might "stimulate speculation."

Oils were the vulnerable feature of the day's moderate and professional operations, shorts evidently taking a hand in the depreciation of these issues. Mexican Petroleum sustained an extreme reaction of 8 points to a level 60 points under its high of June, and closed at a net loss of 6¼ points.

Pan-Americans, Mexican seaboard, newly listed on the exchange, and most other foreign and domestic oils, were lower by 1 to 3 points, but made up part of their reversals in the final dealings. About the only stocks to show consistent strength were Consolidated Gas at a net gain of 3½ points to the year's high, and Western Union, which added 3½ points to yesterday's substantial gains. Sales amounted to 800,000 shares.

The open rate for call money was 3¼ per cent, until the final half-hour, when plenty of money was offered at 3 per cent. Time funds were quoted unaltered, but private loans for thirty and sixty days were reported at 4 per cent.

Business in foreign exchange was light, except for sterling and French francs, the former being in demand at the week's best quotations, while francs were under speculative pressure. The German mark also yielded with variable changes for other remittances.

WHAT'S BEHIND ACTIVE STOCKS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

Illinois Central—106¼

NEW YORK, July 13.—An idea of the Illinois Central Railroad's credit position is conveyed in the fact that the system is able at this time to finance itself through the sale of preferred stock. Incorporated in 1851, the Illinois Central has grown into a system operating 4800 miles of road through a prosperous territory.

Dividends have been paid on the common stock since 1852, the present rate of 7 per cent dating back to 1917. Earnings during ten years ended Dec. 31, 1921, averaged 10.31 per cent on the common stock. Government compensation being included for 1918, 1919 and eight months of 1920. At the end of 1921 there was a corporate surplus of $28,417,000. The $109,296,000 common stock is preceded by $10,924,600 of 6 per cent noncumulative preferred and a funded debt of $264,962,000.

Road and equipment and other investments are carried at $420,082,000. Net operating income after taxes during the first five months of 1922 was $9,172,000 as compared with $7,087,000 in the corresponding period of 1921.

Range of common stock for the last two decades: High 184½ in 1906; low 80¾ in 1920, yesterday's close 106¼.

ENGLAND BANK RATE DECLINES

Easing in World Money Marts May be Cumulative

Foreign Exchange Raects, but Without Weakness

Mexican Petroleum Off Many Points; New Marks

BY FRANKLIN K. SPRAGUE
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, July 13. — Outstanding in importance today was the reduction in the Bank of England discount rate from 3½ per cent to 3 per cent, the latter figure having been established on June 15. This further evidence of easing in world money markets did not come entirely in the nature of a surprise. When the last reduction in the discount rate at the Federal Reserve Bank of New York was announced it was expected that there would be a further lowering in the English rate. Possibly this might have developed earlier had it not been for the critical situation which came to light in Central Europe. Also heavy borrowing by the government from the Bank of England militated against a reduction. Apparently the change to a lower rate now is a reflection of a better sentiment prevailing as to affairs in Europe and furthermore the government has repaid practically all of its indebtedness to the bank. This latest reduction in the Bank of England rate brings the discount a full 1 per cent under that of New York.

The interesting question now relates to the action of the New York bank. A downward revision may not come for some time, but eventually, it seems, the New York rate will have to follow London.

The foreign exchange market was reactionary today, but without developing any pronounced weakness. Sterling lost 1-4 of a cent and exchange on Paris, Rome and Berlin showed losses. For the time being the foreign exchanges are under the influence of the reparations situation and probably until there has been some definite turn one way or the other with relation to a moratorium for Germany, the movement of rates will show no great degree of stability.

MARKET REACTIONARY

In the stock market today prices were reactionary throughout the list, with fairly heavy declines in some of the speculative issues, as, for instance, Mexican Petroleum, which lost 6 1-4 points. Several factors contributed to this display, but not the least of them a revision of opinion with relation to the railroad strike. The news of the day with relation to this labor situation was hardly so favorable as had been anticipated. On the other hand, it appeared that the way was being paved for a termination of the coal strike.

The market is somewhat in the position of awaiting developments as to both situations since each is bound up so closely with the industrial affairs of the country. A protraction of either difficulty could not, of course, be construed as other than unfavorable. In the light of more important events, the stock market quite ignored the easing of call money to a 3 per cent level, which has not obtained since June 23. The bond market in contradistinction to stocks, was firm with a fair degree of activity centered in the corporation issues.

The statement of the Reichsbank showed a further increase in note circulation amounting to about 3,500,000,000 marks. This is a small increase as compared with that of last week, which reached some 11,000,000,000 marks. Still note circulation is now 172,736,000,000 marks, a new high level. The statement of the Bank of France, on the other hand, showed a decline in circulation of some 297,000,000 francs.

DAILY TALK ON TRADE, FINANCE

000,000 face amount of 3 3-4 per cent Victory notes, but according to reports on June 29 only about $220,000,000 face amount of these notes had up to then been presented for redemption.

NEW OIL COMPANIES

Sixty-one oil companies were organized in June with aggregate capital of $53,250,000, compared with seventy-three new companies with $105,595,000 in May.

EXPENSIVE DOLLARS

The dollar is now worth 2,300,000 rubles and the supply of ciphers may give out if Russia does not soon curtain her tremendous output of scraps of paper. There are 250,000,000,000,000 rubles in circulation of which 65,000,000,000,000 were issued in May and 35,000,000,000,000 in June. It's said that the present issues will have to be more than doubled to pay the expenses of government for the coming year.

AUTO TIRES AND COTTON

Manufacturers of automobile tires are the heaviest users of cotton and the operation of the big producers this year has nearly consumer the heavy surplus of tire fabric accumulated theretofore. Goodyear, and some of the larger companies are understood to have purchased at an advantageous price and higher cost of cotton is not likely to affect tire prices in the near future. In circles where experts talk of tires it is conceded that the day of the fabric tire is almost numbered, and that they will in time be entirely displaced by the cord.

WHOSE METEOR?

Efforts are being made to mine a meteorite, 3800 feet in diameter, which fell in Arizona in prehistoric times. It has been gravely decided that the owner of the land on which it fell owns the meteorite. Self evident? Not a bit. It took the Winchell case, in 1892, to elicit a decision that a meteorite belongs to the man on whose property it falls. The argument in opposition was an analogy with the old English common law covering game, which held that a hunter can claim shot game which flees and drops on the property of another. From the Winchell case arose the precedent which lets an oil driller draw all the oil he can get from beneath land of adjoining owners, provided he drills only on his own property.—[Wall Street Journal.

BOND QUOTATIONS

COTTONSEED PRICES
[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, July 13.—Liberties were the prominent features of today's bond market, coming forward almost to the year's best prices in the later dealings after showing some hesitation.

Most foreign war loans, especially French municipals, were moderately better but changes in the international group were trivial at best. Rail gains of almost 2 points accompanied the trend of Pennsylvania general 4½s and 5s and New York, Ontario and Western 4s. New York Central refunding 4s, Northern Pacific 4s and Missouri, Kansas and Texas 5s with fractional advances for Rock Island refunding 4s and Atchison general 4s.

New Haven 6s were heavy with seaboard adjustment 5s, St. Paul refunding 4½s and several of the prominent industrials, including United States Steel 5s. Total sales (par value) aggregated $14,780,000.

Of the day's new offerings the most noteworthy was the Philippine Government $2,750,000 4½ per cent bond issue for which a ready market was available.

School Records Established by Imperial Board

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

EL CENTRO, July 13.—Close of the fiscal year in Imperial county today finds each of forty-eight elementary and six high school districts with a cash balance to its credit and all bills paid up in full, the first time a perfect showing has been made in school finance in the county's history. School budgets on this basis were completed today for submission to the Board of County Supervisors.

H. C. Coe, county superintendent, gives the credit for this result of close and constant co-operation of all the district boards with the county office in a systematic effort to enforce economy in school administration without sacrifice of efficiency.

OROVILLE IS QUIET AFTER STRIKE RIOT

UNIONISTS HEAD ATTACK ON LOYAL WORKERS WITH GUNS; ARE DRIVEN OFF

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SACRAMENTO, July 13.—No one was seriously injured during the early morning riot in Oroville between strikers and loyal workmen in the Western Pacific shops, according to reports received here by the Sheriff's office and the police. At noon today the Oroville authorities stated over the telephone that the situation was in hand and no more trouble was expected.

Here and in Roseville everything remains quiet and no violence of any kind was reported during the night or early morning. More workmen arrived in Roseville today and went to work in the Southern Pacific shops and the Pacific Fruit Express.

In Oroville, officials declare that the riot in the yards resulted when about 100 strikers rushed the yards and fought with about sixty-five strike breakers and loyal workers. Some shots were fired, but no one was injured by the bullets. Some of the workers were struck with clubs and rocks. None of them was seriously injured, although T. A. Wilkinson, yardmaster, was knocked unconscious.

Oroville authorities stated this morning that they do not need any assistance. Guards, armed with shotguns, have been placed around the yards. No trace of any of the rioters has been discovered. Police say that they all escaped in autos.

The SHEIK

By Edith M. Hull

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS INSTALLMENTS.

Diana Mayo, wealthy, beautiful but headstrong English girl, ignoring the protests of her older brother and sole relative, Sir Aubrey Mayo, starts alone, except for native guides, for a trip into the Arabian desert. An Arab horseman close in on her caravan and the leader captures her and carries her to his camp. A striking figure, with the handsomest and cruellest face she has ever seen, he tells her that he is Sheik Ahmed ben Hassan. Powerfully built in his eyes, he carries her, struggling desperately, into a luxurious room in the main tent of the camp. The next morning Diana awakes crushed in spirit and filled with a burning shame. An Arab girl, Zilah, comes to wait on her, and she is also served by Gaston, French valet of the Sheik, whose past Diana is treated like a captive queen in the barbaric splendor of the camp. The Sheik's moods vary from courtly gentleness to stormy, brutal passion. He sets out to break the girl to his will. Finally overawed, she promises to behave and is allowed after this to go for a daily ride with Gaston. On one of these jaunts a plan of escape comes to her. She tells Gaston she is terrified, and when Gaston dismounts to get it, she lashes his horse, which runs away. She then gallops off. However, she happens to go directly into the path of the Sheik, returning from an expedition on the desert. He recaptures her. Awaking from the semi-stupor in the close embrace of his arms, Diana suddenly realizes that her hate for the Arab chief has turned to overwhelming, passionate love. Back in camp she learns that Ahmed, having caught Gaston afoot on the desert, Sheik Ibrahim Omair, deadly rival of Ahmed, has been lurking in the neighborhood. Gaston, nervous, relates that the Sheik's anger dies down. He tells Diana that Vicomte Raoul de Saint Hubert, an author and friend, is coming to pay him a visit. Diana hides her feelings. She promises not to run away again, and he agrees to allow her to go riding again, giving her a revolver for her protection.

She looked at it blankly.

"But——" she stammered.

He knew what was in her mind, and he stooped and kissed her lightly. "I trust you," he said quietly, and went out.

She followed him to the door, the revolver dangling from her hand, and watched him mount and ride away. His horsemanship was superb and her eyes glowed as they followed him. She went back into the tent and slipped the revolver into the holster he had left lying on a stool, and, tucking it and Saint Hubert's novel, which she took from the bookcase, under her arm, went into the bedroom and, calling to Zilah to pull off her riding boots, threw herself on the bed to laze away the morning, and to try and picture the author from the book he had written.

She hated him in advance; she was jealous of him and of his coming. She hurled St. Hubert's book across the room in a fit of girlish rage and buried her head in her arms. He would be odious—a smirking, conceited egotist! His novel revealed a passionate, emotional temperament that promised to complicate the situation if he should be pleased to cast an eye of favor on her. She writhed at the very thought. And that he was to see her was evident; the Sheik had left no orders to the contrary.

The emotions of the morning and the disappointment of the intended ride, together with the dismay produced by the unexpected visitor, all combined to agitate her powerfully, and she worked herself up into a fever of self-torture and unhappiness. She ended by falling asleep and slept heavily for some hours. Zilah waked her with a shy hand on her arm and a soft announcement of lunch, and Diana sat up, rubbing her eyes, flushed and drowsy. She stared uncomprehendingly for a moment at the Arab girl, and then waved her away imperiously and buried her head in the pillows again. Lunch, when her heart was breaking!

Mindful of her lord's deputy, who was waiting in the next room, and whom she regarded with awe, Zilah held her ground with a timid insistence until Diana started up wrathfully and bade her go in tones that she had never used before to the little waiting girl. Zilah fled precipitately, and, thoroughly awakened, Diana swung her heels to the ground and with her elbows on her knees rested her hot head in her hands. She felt giddy, her head ached and her mouth was parched and dry. She got up languidly, and going to the table studied her face in the mirror intently.

"Are you going to have fever or are you merely bad tempered?" she asked out loud, and the sound of her own voice made her laugh in spite of her heavy heart. She went into the bathroom and soused her head in cold water. When she came back a frightened Zilah was putting a small tray on the brass-topped table by the bed.

"M'seiur Gaston," she stammered, almost crying.

Diana looked at the tray, arranged with all the dainty neatness dear to the valet's heart, and then at the travelling clock on the table beside it, and realized that it was an hour past her usual lunch time and that she was extremely hungry, after all. A little piece of paper on the tray caught her eye, and, picking it up, she read in Gaston's clear though minute handwriting, "At what hour does madame desire to ride?"

The servant clearly had no intention of giving up the program for the afternoon without a struggle. She smiled as she added a figure to the end of the note, and went to the curtains that divided the rooms. "Gaston!"

"Madame!"

She passed the paper silently through the curtains and went back to her lunch. When she sent Zilah away with the empty tray she rescued the Vicomte de Saint Hubert's book from the floor where she had thrown it and tried to read it dispassionately. She turned to the title page and studied the pencilled scrawl "Souvenir de Raoul" closely. It did not look like the handwriting of a small-minded man, but handwriting was nothing to go by, she argued obstinately. Aubrey, who was the essence of selfishness, wrote beautifully, and had once been told by an expert that his writing denoted a generous love of his fellow-men, which deduction had aroused no enthusiasm in the baronet, and had given his sister over to helpless mirth. She turned the pages, dipping here and there, finally forgetting the author altogether in the book. It was a wonderful story of a man's love and faithfulness, and Diana pushed it aside at last with a very bitter sigh. Things happened so in books. In real life they happened very differently. She looked round the room with pain-filled eyes, at the medley of her own and the Sheik's belongings, her ivory toilet appointments jostling indiscriminately among his brushes and his razors on the dressing-table, and then at the pillow beside her where his head rested every night. She stooped and kissed it with a little quivering breath. "Ahmed, Oh, Monseigneur!" she murmured longingly. Then, with an impatient jerk of the head, she sprang up and dragged on her boots. She pulled a soft felt hat down over her eyes and picked up the revolver the Sheik had given her. She paused a moment, looking at it with an odd smile before buckling it round her slim waist. Gaston's face lit up with genuine pleasure when she came out to the horses.

The horse that she rode always now was pure white, not so fast as Silver Star and very tricky, called The Dancer, from a nervous habit of dancing on his hind legs at starting and stopping, like a circus horse. He was difficult to mount, and edged away shyly as Diana tried to get her foot into the stirrup. But she swung up at last, and by the time The Dancer had finished his display of haute ecole Gaston was mounted. "After riding The Dancer I feel confident to enter for the Concours Hippique," she laughed over her shoulder, and touched the horse with her heel.

After a while she reined in her horse and waved to Gaston to come alongside. "Tell me of this Vicomte de Saint Hubert who is coming! You know him, I suppose, as you have been so long with Monseigneur?"

Gaston smiled. "I knew him before Monseigneur did. I was born on the estate of Monsieur le Comte de Saint Hubert, the father of Monsieur le Vicomte. I and my twin brother Henri. We both went into Monsieur le Comte's training stables, and then after our time in the Cavalry Henri became valet to Monsieur le Vicomte, and I came to Monseigneur."

Diana took off her hat and rubbed her forehead thoughtfully. Fifteen years ago Ahmed must have been about 20.

She turned to Gaston with the intention of asking further of the coming visitor, and, keeping The Dancer as still as she could, sat looking at the valet with great, questioning eyes, fanning her hot face with her hat. Gaston, whose own horse stood like a rock, was frankly mopping his forehead. Diana decided against any more questions. Gaston would naturally be hopelessly biased, having been born and brought up in the shadow of the family, and after all she would rather judge for herself. One inquiry only she permitted herself: "The family of Saint Hubert, are they of the old or the new noblesse?"

"Of the old, madame," replied Gaston quickly.

Diana coaxed her nervous mount close beside his steadier companion, and, thrusting his bridle and her hat into Gaston's hands, slipped to the ground and walked away a little distance to the top of a small mound. She sat down on the summit with her back to the horses and her arms clasped round her knees. All that the coming of this strange man meant to her rushed suddenly over her. He was a man, obviously, who moved in the world, her world, since he apparently traveled extensively and his father was wealthy enough to run a racing stable as a hobby and was a member of the dwindling class of ancienne noblesse. It was characteristic of her that she put first what she did. How could she bear to meet one of her own order in the position in which she was? She sat very still for a while with her face hidden, until a discreet cough from Gaston warned her that time was flying. She went back to the horses slowly with white face and compressed lips. There was the usual trouble in mounting, and her strained nerves made her impatient of The Dancer's idiosyncrasies, and she checked him sharply, making him rear dangerously.

"Carefully, Madame," cried Gaston warningly.

"For whom—me or Monseigneur's horse?" she retorted bitterly, and ignoring her hat, which Gaston held out to her with reproachful eyes, she spurred the horse viciously, making him break into a headlong gallop. It had got to be gone through, so get it over as soon as possible. And behind her, Gaston, for the first time in all his long service, cursed the master he would cheerfully have died for.

The horse's nerves, like her own, were on edge, and he pulled badly, his smooth satiny neck growing dark and seamed with sweat. Diana needed all her knowledge to control him, and she began to wonder if when they came to the camp she would be able to stop him. She topped an undulation that was some little distance from the tents with misgivings, and wrapped the reins round her hands to prevent them slipping through her fingers. As they neared she saw the Sheik standing outside his tent, with a tall, thin man beside him. She had only a glimpse of dark, unruly hair and a close-cut beard as she shot past, unable to pull up The Dancer. But just beyond the tent, with the reins cutting into her hands, she managed to haul him round and bring him back. In the hands of the men he sidled and snorted, and, dropping the reins, Diana pulled off her gloves and sat for a moment rubbing her sore hands. Then the Sheik came forward and she slid down. Before looking at him she turned and, catching at The Dancer's head, struck him angrily over the nose with her thick, riding gloves and watched him led away, plunging and protesting, pulling the gloves through her fingers nervously, until Ahmed Ben Hassan's voice made her turn.

"Diana, the Vicomte de Saint Hubert waits to be presented to you."

MAY BUILD BREWERY

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CALEXICO, July 13.—Erection of a brewery in Mexicali is indicated in an investigation being made here by J. Baumgardtner, formerly of the Bakersfield Brewing Company, who is understood to be working in conjunction with the ownership of the Owl resort. Under the order prohibiting shipments of beer into United States territory, Mexicali has had the problem of bringing the beverage across the mountains from Ensenada or Labomba on the Gulf, a process so inconvenient that is believed the brewing industry for the boundary line trade will center in Mexicali.

IN-LAWS SCARE ROMANCE AWAY

'Too Many,' Says Judge When Husband Sees, Telling of Supporting.

Lee Roy Pennington received the sympathy of Judge Summerfield yesterday in divorce court when he declared that on a salary of $55 a month he had been forced by his wife, Ethel Hazel Pennington, to support his mother-in-law, sister-in-law, brother-in-law and an orphan nephew of hers.

LEAPS INTO SEA; SAVES SHIPMATE

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONG BEACH, July 13.—The loyalty of friendship was again demonstrated in Long Beach Harbor today when Spot, a pet dog owned by William Rigby, chef on the steamer Bergen, jumped overboard to rescue his old pal and shipmate, Tiger, the ship's cat.

Unlike the cat and dog of popular conception, the steamer pets have lived aboard the Bergen in perfect harmony for many months, and genuine companionship has developed between them, Rigby said. This morning, while running along the ship's rail, Tiger lost his footing and went overboard. In a flash Spot was over the side and into the water.

Seizing the frightened and clawing cat by the nape of his neck, Spot held him on the surface until Rigby and City Wharfinger A. E. Gannon could rescue both animals.

CALLS JOHNSON HEARST'S TOOL

Ralph Arnold Denounces Present Senator

Former Progressive Explains Allegiance to Moore

Analyzes Incumbent's Career in Letter to Alumni

Swelling the tide of California Progressives' repudiation of Senator Johnson, an excoriating denunciation of Johnson as a selfish, insincere, Hearst-controlled "disciple of discontent" is contained in a letter sent to 10,000 alumni of Stanford University by Ralph Arnold, consulting geologist and petroleum engineer of Los Angeles, a former Progressive, and at one time one of Johnson's campaign leaders.

In a thoughtful analysis of the political career of Johnson, Mr. Arnold, who is supporting the candidacy of Charles C. Moore for United States Senator, explains why he and thousands of other former Progressives have completely changed their attitude toward their one-time political leader.

HEARST'S SERVANT

Mr. Arnold's letter follows, in part:

"I voted for, and was an ardent advocate of Johnson when he first ran for Governor. He made a good Governor at that particular time, because his dominant personal characteristic of destructive combativeness was essential to the accomplishment of the task before him. Johnson's record as a Senator, however, is another story, and has led me, together with thousands of others of his Progressive followers, to turn away from him. Among the things which have caused this change of sentiment among his former supporters are:

"First, he has lost his political sincerity; has discarded his high Progressive ideals for individual and personal gain, and has bent his energies to building up a personal political machine to serve

CLEARS GLORIA IN BURNS CASE

Court Rules Film Star and Mother Not Guilty

Dismisses Charge That They Vamped Shoe Man

Screen Beauty to Testify on Merchant's Sanity

Gloria Swanson, film star and beauty, and her mother, Mrs. Adeline Burns won a decided victory in Judge Rives's probate court yesterday when Judge Rives granted nonsuits on the charges that Gloria and her mother had conspired to marry Burns and that he had been unduly influenced in the making of his will.

With the dismissal of these charges by the judge of the probate court, counsel for the relatives, who are contesting the probate of the will, which left the bulk of a $100,000 estate to Gloria's mother, will have to prove Burns was insane on Nov. 24, 1919, the date of making the will.

If they fail to convince the ten women and two men who are sitting as jurors in the case that Burns was insane on this day, Mrs. Burns will become the sole beneficiary of the entire estate with the exception of $2500 which goes to a sister, Mrs. Margaret A. Graham, two brothers, Thomas and John, and a nephew, John Burns Graham.

STAR FIRST WITNESS

Although Gloria is free from the charges of having sat on Burns's lap—"hugged him and then asked for a check"—wined him on two occasions for money, given parties and sent the bills to the late shoe man, receiving $2000 worth of clothes from him, and having called Mr. Burns "daddy," she will be the first witness called by the defense for her mother some time this morning, according to Attorney James Pope. Gloria was scheduled to have been a witness yesterday.

Gloria will be a witness to help her mamma in her battle for her husband's estate. That's all, the lawyers say. She won't be called upon to tell if she did all the naughty things she were accused of by her recently-acquired kinfolk. So those who will help crowd the courtroom this morning will probably go away disappointed when sweet morsels of gossip fail to creep out.

The defense counsel called T. C. Ridgeway, attorney, who drew up the last will of Mr. Burns, as their first witness yesterday afternood.

DECLARED RATIONAL

Mr. Ridgeway declared Burns was "absolutely rational" on the day he made his will, Nov. 26, 1919. He told of Burns bringing another will to him which had been previously drawn up by him which bequeathed everything to his wife, with the exception of $2000 which was to go to his private secretary. The peroration of the original will

ASK DANCE PRIVILEGES ON SUNDAY

Anti-Blue Law Forces Petition for Repeal of Prohibiting Ordinance

Asking for the repeal of an ordinance which prohibits the holding of public dances in Los Angeles on Sunday, the National Anti-Blue Law Association yesterday filed a petition with the City Council declaring that the law was unjust and discriminatory. This is the only Sunday closing law in the city, the petition points out, and states further that the association is of the opinion that the majority of people in Los Angeles are opposed to Sunday closing, as shown by the fact that several years ago the people, under a referendum, voted down an ordinance which had been enacted by the Council closing barber shops and retail grocery stores on Sundays.

Mrs. M. H. Marks is president of the National Anti-Blue Law Association, and on the advisory board of the organization are Rabbi D. S. Mecht, Councilman Mushet, Police Judge Richardson, and Dr. L. C. Mace, Past Exalted Ruler of the local lodge of Elks.

The petition was referred to the Council's Public Welfare Committee which meets next Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock.

Says Husband Planned Career as Bootlegger

When Mrs. Clara Diskin called the police after her husband announced that he was to join the bootleggers' union, Max Diskin threw a glass jar at her, according to the statement of the wife in Judge McLucas's court yesterday. The police arrived, but Mr. Diskin had fled, she stated.

According to the story of the wife, who is seeking a divorce, Mr. Diskin brought home a demijohn of booze and announced that he was going to deal in liquor in the future. The wife called the officers, who confiscated the drink. Judge McLucas continued the case to hear the husband's side of the affair.

FUNERAL OF OIL MAN CONDUCTED THURSDAY

Funeral services for W. T. Carter, who died last Monday night at his late home on East Fifth street, were conducted in the chapel at Forest Lawn Cemetery yesterday afternoon, Rev. J. G. Thompson, pastor of the Central Christian Church, officiating. Mr. Carter, who was a well-known oil and mining man and who was also a newspaper writer of ability, was 62 years old and had lived in Los Angeles for the last twenty years. He leaves a daughter, Frances Carter, and one son, William Carter, both of Glendale.

Breaks Ground for Fine Home in "Times" Contest

Will be Ready When Winner is Announced

Orphan Children Greet Great Boy Film Star

Jackie Coogan proved himself a good friend of The Times yesterday when after having worked like a Trojan for many hours at the United Studios, he appeared at Wilshire Crest at 3 p.m. to turn the first shovelful of earth for the ground-breaking ceremonies for the $16,500 prize home offered by this newspaper to the chief winner in the subscription contest.

JACKIE WIELDS PICK

After an address by Burton L. Smith, State editor of The Times, thanking the many attendants for their presence and interest, Mr. Smith, in the name of The Times, presented Jackie with a bright new, beribboned shovel and bade him start to work on the foundation in his own sweet way.

"Thanks for the shovel, but what we need first is a good pick," replied the little film star. A "regular" pick was brought to Jackie, who, after breaking the hard crust of ground, grabbed his shovel and proceeded to work like a good son of toil. Having finished his arduous task, which lasted for five minutes, Jackie breathed a sigh of relief, wiped the perspiration from his brow and remarked:

"Now, if I had a good drink of water, a shower bath and a soft bed, everything would be all hunkie."

THROWS KISSES TO CROWD

"Good-by, Jackie!" sang out scores of his friends, young and old, as the 7-year-old star was carried off on the shoulders of his manager, Arthur Bernstein, and the little actor threw kisses at the crowd as he departed.

More than 100 boys and girls from the Los Angeles Orphans' Asylum attended the ceremonies as guests of The Times. They were taken to Wilshire Crest in the twenty prize automobiles which are included in The Times $70,000 campaign gifts. The youngsters had their picture taken with Jackie

NAVAL BASE UP TO CITY

Establishment of the new $5,000,000 submarine base at Los Angeles Harbor depends on the action of local civic organizations. That was the statement made yesterday by officials of the port Submarine Base following an inspection of the proposed site by Rear Admiral Luther E. Gregory, Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks.

Admiral Gregory was taken on a trip about the Outer Harbor and Naval Base by Capt. William S. Miller, commander of the Submarine Base, the needs and possibilities of the present base also being explained to the construction chief.

"Admiral Gregory was fully aware of the local situation before he came here," said Capt. Miller. "He expressed himself as being well pleased with the proposed site for the new base. Our cramped quarters and facilities here were explained to him and recommendations will be made upon his return to Washington in September.

"The Navy Department is strongly in favor of establishing the new base at Los Angeles, where climatic and water conditions are ideal for submarine activities. But all we can do is spend the money when Congress appropriates it.

"Just how soon that will be depends on Los Angeles," he declared. "San Diego, through its Congressman, has obtained every project asked for in the past year."

Capt. Miller pointed out that although the Navy bill had been cut $483,000,000, San Diego will get by its provisions a naval hospital costing $500,000; marine base, $483,000; training school, $125,000, and several other important projects.

SAWTELLE IS ANNEXED OFFICIALLY

Sawtelle became a part of Los Angeles, legally and officially, at 9 a.m. yesterday when there was filed with Secretary of State Jordan at Sacramento the required certificate setting forth the results of the consolidation election and the ordinance subsequently adopted by the City Council validating the election. City Attorney Stephens was notified by telegraph yesterday by Mr. Jordan that the Sawtelle consolidation certificate had been received and filed. Mr. Stephens at once informed City Clerk Dominguez, who in turn notified the police, fire, engineering and other city departments, as well as the county registrar of voters and the Board of Education. Capt. W. L. Spellman at once took charge of the police in the Sawtelle division, which includes the Palms and Westgate district, and other city officers took possession of their offices in Sawtelle.

The official consolidation celebration will be held in Sawtelle on Monday evening and Mayor Cryer and members of the City Council will be present to welcome Sawtelle back into the fold.

CROOL, CROOL BOREAS!

Wails of City Guardians Resound as Make-believe Snowstorm Strikes Make-believe Terror

There was a snowstorm last night at the corner of New High and Court streets. The white flakes slithered down the neck of Sheriff Traeger and whirled about the stern person of Chief Oaks.

"Dear me, Oaks, this is too bad," he cried. "Los Angeles is ruined. Here we go and spend thousands of dollars advertising California sunshine, and then she up and snows little hells right plumb in the middle of July. When this gets out in the eastern press we won't get no more Madalynne Obenchains or other tourists—and then we'll have to shut down the jail and junk the rubberneck autos and send the real estate cutthroats to the poor farm. Catalina and the tuna fish'll be forced outta business, and—"

ADJECTI ES TO RESCUE

A frenzied shriek from Chief Oaks interrupted him.

"The worst ain't yet told, Sheriff," he blubbered. "We'll have to buy woolen union suits for all my coppers, and by the time the City Council takes action they'll all be friz to death."

In the midst of this threnody a hurry call was sent out for Frank Wiggins, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce. He took one look at the situation and began dictating orders.

"Cancel all sunkist-climate advertisements," he spat, "and draw up a descriptive circular called 'Los Angeles—the Switzerland of the World.' Show beautiful exbathing girls skiing down Olive street and write a bunch of drool

DEMANDS PRIVATE PHONE

Fair Long Beach Auditor Doesn't Intend That Her Conversation Shall be Overheard

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONG BEACH, July 13.—Miss Myrtelle D. Gunsul, City Auditor of Long Beach, who in controversies with other city officials regarding municipal affairs, has proved herself a worthy opponent, has taken on another fight.

This time it is with City Manager C. E. Hewes and although the latter has the backing of the city fathers in his stand against the city auditor, there are few takers of bets that Hewes will win the controversy.

It all hinges on whether, in the face of orders issued by Hewes and the City Council, Miss Gunsul will succeed in having a private telephone line installed in her offices in the new City Hall when that building is completed. It has been directed by the city fathers that the new structure will be equipped with a private branch exchange, through which all telephone calls in and out of the building shall be handled.

Miss Gunsul has declared emphatically that she does not want any "listening-in" in her conversations, be they about business affairs or private affairs, and that she will insist that her office be equipped with a direct telephone line to the outside world.

City Manager Hewes has delivered a most brutal and manlike "No," but Miss Gunsul refuses to be frightened. She has gone serenely about the task of ordering the telephone company to transfer her present telephone equipment into the new building when the office of City Auditor is established there.

The betting is all in favor of Miss Gunsul.

COUNCIL SCANS TAX PROPOSALS

Amendment Raising Limit Being Considered

Plan to Make Clerk Civil Service is Offered

District Representation Also Suggested

The City Council's committee on charter amendments yesterday afternoon agreed to recommend that a proposition be placed before the voters at the State election next November, placing the office of City Clerk, now held by Robert Dominguez, under civil service. The committee disapproved a proposal that an amendment be submitted placing the Chief of Police and the position of secretary to the Chief under civil service.

Proposed amendments increasing the tax limit of the city for governmental purposes from $1 for each $100 of assessed property valuation in the city to $1.25 or $1.30 and an amendment providing for proportional representation for the City Council were taken under advisement by the committee.

The placing of the office of City Clerk under civil service, has been recommended by the Municipal League and Mayor Cryer concurred in the league's recommendation.

FIND REVENUE SCANTY

The Council has agreed that in the near future an amendment should be submitted increasing the tax limit from $1 for each $100 valuation, but the time that this should be presented and the amount of the increase has not been agreed upon. The councilmen are convinced that under the $1 tax limit, which was established years ago, when Los Angeles was a small city, the revenues are wholly insufficient to conduct the government of the present-day Los Angeles, and because of the deficit resulting, the Council was forced to burden the business men of the city with the admittedly unjust occupational tax.

If the District Court of Appeal upholds the contention of the firemen and policemen, then the Council will submit at the August 29 State-county primaries a charter amendment changing the firemen's and policemen's pension provisions, and will submit at the same time an enabling act under which the Council can establish a modern, scientific pension system for all city employees.

AWAIT COURT RULING

If the city's position is sustained by the Court of Appeal, then both the policemen's and firemen's pension provisions will be submitted at the November election. This also applies to the district representation charter amendment, which has been petitioned for. If the courts rule that it be placed before the voters at the August election, this will be done. If the courts sustain the city, the charter amendment providing for the election of one councilman from each of fifteen districts of the city, instead of the present plan of electing nine councilmen at large, will be submitted at the November election.

Under the Council's present plans, which will go through unless a court decision adverse to the city is rendered, the only municipal proposition on the August 29 ballot will be a proposed bond issue of $12,500,000 for additional sewers and treatment plants.

Councilmen Mushet and Wheeler attended yesterday's meeting of the committee on charter amendments, Councilman Millard, the third member of the committee, is on vacation.

Griffith Park is Largest in United States

Griffith Park becomes the largest city park in the United States under an ordinance passed by the City Council yesterday formally approving of the transfer to the park department 246 acres of land which has heretofore been held by the Board of Public Service Commissioners. Under the ordinance, which becomes effective August 13, the area of Griffith Park will be 3751 acres, or 322 acres larger than Fairmount Park, Philadelphia, which has up to this time been the largest city park in America. Griffith Park will be more than twice the size of Golden Gate Park, San Francisco. The transfer of the land to the park department, which the Council approved yesterday, has been urged and worked for during the past three years by Park Commissioner Griffith, son of Col. Griffith J. Griffith, donor of the park.

WOMEN ACTIVE AGAINST HIRAM

Supporters Flocking to the Moore Standard

Feminine Leaders Take Field to Beat Johnson

Former Congressman Indorses Candidate

"The women of Southern California are almost solidly opposed to Hiram Johnson, and their leaders have taken the field and are actively campaigning for Charles C. Moore for the Republican nomination for United States Senator."

This was the statement issued by Maj. O. C. Wyman, campaign manager for Charles C. Moore in the South, at the Moore-for-Senator headquarters.

"It is generally acknowledged that the women of California will be the deciding factor in the coming election and for this reason I feel no hesitancy in predicting that Hiram will be handed the surprise of his life when the votes are counted at the August primaries."

"The woman will hold him answerable for his stand against the Four Power Pact and for his failure to stand up like a man and vote in the Newberry case, a fight against corruption in Washington. These and many other acts of a similar nature, one of them being his failure to register on the Esch-Cummins Bill, his alliance with William Randolph Hearst and his private law practice as a Hearst hireling while representing California in Washington, are things he will have to answer for when he faces the voters of this State at the coming election.

HIRAM REPUDIATED

"And not only is it the woman, but men from all walks of life, men who at one time were Johnson's ardent supporters, men who backed him with their voice and money when they looked upon him as the champion of the people, who have turned on Hiram and are working tirelessly for the election of Charles C. Moore.

"Among these men is William Kent, who served the people of California for eight years continuously in Washington, six years as Congressman and two years as a member of the Federal Tariff Commission. Always a leader in progressive, forward-looking issues, a man of national repute as a conservationist and welfare worker, a man who once was a staunch backer of Hiram—has repudiated this false leader of the people and is urging the election of Mr. Moore."

In a warm endorsement of Moore's candidacy Kent says:

"I have known Mr. C. C. Moore ever since his splendid administration of the Panama-Pacific Exposition. He is a man of fine capacity, cool and careful judgment, and is respected and honored by all who know him. He possesses the supreme quality of unselfishness. He believes and practices the ideals that go with the policy of living and letting live. He is independent of all entanglements, and will do nothing to forfeit that independence. He can be relied upon to work for the real interest of California, as he has done in the past, as well as for the particular welfare of all our people.

"We Californians have the opportunity to select a real public servant, who will devote his fine efficiency to their service with steady loyalty. He will not involve himself in discreditable alliances for the purposes of self-advertising. He can be relied upon to apply himself to the heavy but unostentatious committee work of the Senate, and will not cast his shadow upon the screen occupied by whoever happens to be President.

MOORE, IDEAL SENATOR

"He will help and not hinder great plans for a more peaceful and better world. His nature precludes him from stirring international hatred and distrust. Out of knowledge of the men and the duties of the Senate, I feel free to assure those who will attend the Republican primaries that in choosing a man of his character and ability they will contribute worthy service to the nation and honor and benefit to our State."

FORM CLUB TO BOOST FOR MOORE

San Bernardino County is Ready to Back Campaign in Their District

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN BERNARDINO, July 13.—A San Bernardino county Moore-for-Senator Club was organized here today and officers elected from among the most prominent citizens of San Bernardino, Redlands and Highland.

George W. Beattie of Highland, foreman of the San Bernardino county grand jury, was elected president of the club. He announced that the following resolution was indorsed by every member of the club:

"Impressed with the personality and principles of Charles C. Moore and believing that he expresses the best ideals of the Republican party and that he would most effectively represent California in the Senate of the United States, we hereby enroll in the Moore-for-Senator Club of San Bernardino county.

Other officers elected include A. M. Pratt, Redlands, first vice-president; Jonas S. Swood, San Bernardino, second vice-president; C. B. Hansen, San Bernardino, secretary; A. E. Grow, Redlands, and Walter J. Hartsell, Redlands, committee chairmen.

Mr. Moore will speak in Pioneer Park at a mass meeting here July 19. Several thousand people are expected to hear Mr. Moore open his campaign in San Bernardino county.

MILO TELLS OF COOLED AFFECTION

Saw Mrs. Wilson With Another Man and "Fell Out of Love," Says Actor

Cross-examination of George Milo, motion-picture actor who Wednesday admitted having registered with Mrs. Meryl Wilson several times at a beach hotel, was opened yesterday by George Greer, attorney for Mrs. Wilson, whose suit for divorce has been contested by her husband on grounds of infidelity.

Milo declared he "fell out of love" with Mrs. Wilson when he saw her going out with another man. Despite this, he said he took the young wife out for several automobile rides afterward during which they always stopped under a certain pepper tree on Crestmont Drive.

The telephone operator in the apartment-house in which Mrs. Wilson resided after her separation from her husband testified concerning instances when Milo came and inquired if Mrs. Wilson was in. On being told that she was he always went upstairs, presumably to Mrs. Wilson's room, the witness asserted.

Comedy entered the trial when Mr. Wilson told Judge McLucas of a quarrel with his wife in a Vancouver cafe.

"My wife started by sneering at the evening's program, a picture show and dinner, and then declared that my eyes were too close together, showing I was of low intelligence," he said.

"I retaliated and told her that her eyes were crossed," he replied.

Mr. Wilson testified that his wife was cold to him after her meeting with Milo, and stated that he kept her in Vancouver on his vacation, she turned her face from him when he attempted to kiss her.

Mrs. Wilson told the court that Milo had offered to go to France and not appear in her divorce suit and if she would pay his traveling expenses.

She also testified that the actor threatened to come out to her house and "clean up" the place after she had given the police information during the Taylor investigation that led to his arrest.

The case was continued until today.

his will and ambitions rather than the people of California. He has proven himself to be the 'rule or ruin' type of leader. Nothing more fittingly describes his object in life than the slogan on his campaign buttons, 'I'm for Hiram.'

"Second, he has been the paid attorney of, and is the willing servant of William Randolph Hearst. Are you one who believes Hiram Johnson can represent the people of California and Hearst at the same time, or do you believe that a vote for Johnson is a vote for Hearst?

FALSE CLAIM TO CREDIT

"Third, he was the paid advocate of the notorious Hylan-Tammany-Democratic machine in its fight against Gov. Miller, one of the best Republican governors New York ever had. In this fight he spent much of the time for which he was being paid by the people of California as their representative in opposing exactly the same measures of State transportation corporation control as he espoused in his former days of political sincerity.

"Fourth, he opposed the Four-Power Pact, the one great outstanding influence for world peace. In this Johnson is consistent, for he has always been the disciple of discontent. He has inflamed passions, appealed to prejudice and aroused class hatred. President Harding, in his Fourth of July speech, this year, said: 'My one outstanding conviction, after sixteen months in the Presidency, is that the greatest traitor to his country is he who appeals to prejudice and inflames passion, when sober judgment and honest speech are so necessary to firmly establish tranquillity and serenity.'

"Fifth, he claims all of the credit for the schedules in the present tariff law, protecting lemons, citrus bipreducts, walnuts, almonds and other California produce, when in reality, such credit belongs largely to the late G. Harold Powell, former head of the orange growers' association, to Senator Shortridge, Representative Kahn, and our eight other Representatives in Congress. Do you believe that a man like Johnson, who has persistently fought the administration, whose party loyalty is always in question, and who is at outs with most of his Congressional associates, can really accomplish much in an atmosphere where cooperation and conciliation are the prime essentials of success.

FLOCKING TO MOORE

"Sixth, he failed to vote on the Esch-Cumming's bill, and the Newberry matter in the face of his avowed abhorrence of side-steppers and political cowards.

"The people of California are flocking to the standard of Charles C. Moore, because they are tired of destructive talk and want constructive action. Moore, being an engineer, is, above all things, constructive, both in thought and action. He is a thorough Californian, having been educated in its public schools and the Episcopal College of St. Augustine; he is self-made in the better sense of the word; he is a successful farmer, stock-raiser, citrus fruit and olive grower, and should know the problems of his associates in these activities. He is a thirty-second degree Mason.

"At the same time that he has been making business success he has endeared himself to the people of California by his devotion of a goodly share of his time, energy and resources to public work. This is evidenced by the positions which he has held, such as head of the Panama-Pacific exposition, head of the State Council of Defense during the war, and present head of the Boy Scouts of California. He also is a leader in many other civic and commercial activities.

"Mr. Moore has never held public office, neither has he sought this nomination. He only consented to become a candidate after many urgent appeals of the best representative citizens of his State, because he thought it was his duty to run."

CLEARS GLORIA IN BURNS CASE

stated: "I have absolutely left the Grahams out of my will. I have already given them more in my lifetime than could be expected under the circumstances."

"Burns was worried about the Grahams contesting his will," stated Mr. Ridgeway. "In the one I was drawing up for him I suggested he bequest something to his relatives to prevent a contest. He didn't want to. I suggested leaving $500 to each of them. Mrs. Burns, who was present with him, agreed with my suggestion, saying she thought he should bequeath $10,000 to his sister, Mrs. Margaret A. Graham."

Mr. Ridgeway then told of drawing up the last will and said he was rational at the time and free from fraud and undue influence.

SUED FOR JEWELRY

"He asked me to see to it that there would be no contest over his will," Mr. Ridgeway said.

Mr. Ridgeway stated Burns on one occasion said he was involved in a suit with his sister over some jewelry which had belonged to his former wife. Burns said he paid his sister $500 for the jewelry and received it, according to Mr. Ridgeway.

Did Gloria's mother marry an insane man?

This is the only issue left in the case, the others having been dismissed by Judge Rives.

Was Mathew P. Burns insane on the day he drew up his last will and testiment bequeathing everything to his wife with the exception of $2500?

The doctors say he was. Attorney Ridgeway, who was with Burns for several hours in his office during the drawing up of the document, says, "He was absolutely rational and understood everything I said to him."

UNSOUND, SAY DOCTORS

Drs. William R. Maloney and A. L. Jones told of examining Burns as an applicant for a $50,000 life insurance policy.

"Who are we going to examine?" Dr. Jones testified he asked his medical colleague.

"Burns, the shoe man."

"There's no use. He's a nut anyway." Dr. Jones replied.

Attorney George Beebe of the counsel for the relatives was propounding the questions. Attorney Scott objected, asking that that part of Dr. Jones's testimony be stricken from the record. Objection sustained.

"After hearing Burns talk at length concerning his immense wealth and everyone loving him, also displaying much egotism pertaining to his business, I made up my mind what was wrong with him," Dr. Maloney stated.

BRAIN AFFECTED

Drs. Maloney, Jones, Martin G. Carter, and Victor Parkin testified they had examined Burns on different occasions and found he had a disease contributory to paresis, which had softened the brain, causing a confusion of ideas, state of irritability, excessive sadness and happiness, alternating, and a loss of memory. All of the doctors declared in their opinion Burns was insane on Nov. 24, 1913, the time of Burns leaving the bulk of his estate to the film star's mother.

On cross-examination by Attorney Scott of the counsel defending Mrs. Burns's right to the shoe man's estate, Dr. Jones was asked:

"Would you have believed Burns crazy if he had told you Gloria was vamping him?"

"Yes."

Dr. Parkin, answering the same query, stated: "I don't know whether Gloria was vamping him or not." A ripple of laughter was heard in the courtroom. Order had to be called.

"I want you to answer my question."

MOTHER MAY TAKE STAND

Gloria's mother may be called to the stand to refute part of the testimony given by Mrs. Margaret A. Graham, sister of the deceased shoe man and one of the contestants to the probate of the will. On being recalled to the stand yesterday morning by her attorneys Mrs. Graham stated Burns had asked her for his dead wife's jewelry, which she had been keeping as a gift from her brother since the death of his first wife.

"What do you want with it?" Mrs. Graham said she asked her brother. "He told me Mrs. Burns wanted it and was going to sue him for a divorce if he didn't get it for her."

Testimony by Mrs. Graham which was objected to by counsel for Mrs. Burns and sustained by Judge Rives developed Burns had sued his sister for the jewelry and failed to get it. This evidence was stricken from the record. The jewelry consisted of diamond rings and other expensive jewels, Mrs. Graham said.

VANITY INDICATED

The singer gave further testimony for her reasons to believe her brother irrational. On one occasion when he was driving recklessly down a main thoroughfare, Mrs. Graham stated, she told him he was liable to be "pinched" if officers saw him. At this Burns displayed a badge from underneath his coat, saying: "I am greater than all the police. I could arrest the Chief of Police myself."

"I married Gloria. I didn't marry the old lady." This was a statement from a deposition read yesterday from Miss Ingred Johnson, nurse. "When he wasn't saying he was the Chief of Police he was saying he was President of the United States."

"Did Burns recognize any one after he was taking from the sanatorium at Eagle Rock to his home?"

"No."

"Did he say anything about women or his being crazy?"

"Yes. He said he was popular with the women. Once he said people thought he was crazy, but he wasn't."

"Did he ever talk about money?"

"Yes. He said he was going to have some trouble with the Grahams."

Today's session of court will begin at 10 o'clock.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SACRAMENTO, July 13.—No one was seriously injured during the early morning riot in Oroville between strikers and loyal workmen in the Western Pacific shops, according to reports received here by the Sheriff's office and the police. At noon today the Oroville authorities stated over the telephone that the situation was in hand and no more trouble was expected.

Here and in Roseville everything remains quiet and no violence of any kind was reported during the night or early morning. More workmen arrived in Roseville today and went to work in the Southern Pacific shops and the Pacific Fruit Express.

In Oroville, officials declare that the riot in the yards resulted when about 100 strikers rushed the yards and fought with about sixty-five strike breakers and loyal workers. Some shots were fired, but no one was injured by the bullets. Some of the workers were struck with clubs and rocks. None of them was seriously injured, although T. A. Wilkinson, yardmaster, was knocked unconscious.

Oroville authorities stated this morning that they do not need any assistance. Guards, armed with shotguns, have been placed around the yards. No trace of any of the rioters has been discovered. Police say that they all escaped in autos.

The SHEIK

By Edith M. Hull

STNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS INSTALLMENTS.

Diana, Marjo, wealthy, beautiful but headstrong English girl, ignoring the protests of her older brother and sole relative, Sir Aubrey Mayo, starts alone, except for native guides, for a trip into the Arabian desert. Arab horsemen close in on her caravan and the leader captures her and carries her to his camp. A striking figure, with the handsomest and cruellest face she has ever seen, he tells her that he is Sheik Ahmed Ben Hassan. Fire blazing in his eyes, he carries her, struggling desperately, into a luxurious room in the main tent of the camp. The next evening Diana awakes crushed in spirit and filled with a burning shame. An Arab girl, Zilah, comes to wait on her, and she is also served by Gaston, French valet of the Sheik. Wrathy past, Diana is treated like a captive queen in the barbaric splendor of the camp. The Sheik's moods vary from courtly gentleness to stormy, brutal passion. He sets out to break the girl to his will. Finally crestfallen she promises to be good. She is allowed after that to ride for a daily rite with Gaston. On one of these jaunts a plan of escape comes to her. She drops her handkerchief, and when Gaston dismounts to get it, she lashes his horse, which runs away. She then gallops off. However, she happens to go directly into the path of the Sheik, returning from an expedition on the desert. He recaptures her. Awaking from a semi-stupor in the close embrace of his arms, Diana suddenly realizes that her hate for the Arab chief has turned to overwhelming, passionate love. Back in camp she learns the circumstances of leaving Gaston alone on the desert. Sheik Ibrahim Ouair, deadly rival of Ahmed, has been lurking in the neighborhood. However Gaston returns safely and the Sheik's anger dies down. He tells Diana that Vicomte Raoul de Saint Hubert, an author and old friend of the family, is coming to see Diana. Under her position. She promises not to run away again, and he agrees to allow her to go riding again, giving her a revolver for her protection.

She looked at it blankly.

"But——" she stammered.

He knew what was in her mind, and he stooped and kissed her lightly. "I trust you," he said quietly, and went out.

She followed him to the door, the revolver dangling from her hand, and watched him mount and ride away. His horsemanship was superb and her eyes glowed as they followed him. She went back into the tent and slipped the revolver into the holster he had left lying on a stool, and, tucking it and Saint Hubert's novel, which she took from the bookcase, under her arm, went into the bedroom and, calling to Zilah to pull off her riding boots, threw herself on the bed to laze away the morning, and to try and picture the author from the book he had written.

She hated him in advance; she was jealous of him and of his coming. She hurled St. Hubert's book across the room in a fit of girlish rage and buried her head in her arms. He would be odious—a smirking, conceited egotist! His novel revealed a passionate, emotional temperament that promised to complicate the situation if he should be pleased to cast an eye of favor on her. She writhed at the very thought. And that he was to see her was evident; the Sheik had left no orders to the contrary.

The emotions of the morning and the disappointment of the intended ride, together with the dismay produced by the unexpected visitor, all combined to agitate her powerfully, and she worked herself up into a fever of self-torture and unhappiness. She ended by falling asleep and slept heavily for some hours. Zilah waked her with a shy hand on her arm and a soft announcement of lunch, and Diana sat up, rubbing her eyes, flushed and drowsy. She stared uncomprehendingly for a moment at the Arab girl, and then waved her away impetuously and buried her head in the pillows again. Lunch, when her heart was breaking!

Mindful of her lord's deputy, who was waiting in the next room, and whom she regarded with awe, Zilah held her ground with a timid insistence until Diana started up wrathfully and bade her go in tones that she had never used before to the little waiting girl. Zilah fled precipitately, and, thoroughly awakened, Diana swung her heels to the ground and with her elbows on her knees rested her hot head in her hands. She felt giddy, her head ached and her mouth was parched and dry. She got up languidly, and going to the table studied her face in the mirror intently.

"Are you going to have fever or are you merely bad tempered?" she asked out loud, and the sound of her own voice made her laugh in spite of her heavy heart. She went into the bathroom and soused her head in cold water. When she came back a frightened Zilah was putting a small tray on the brass-topped table by the bed.

"M'sieur Gaston," she stammered, almost crying.

Diana looked at the tray, arranged with all the dainty neatness dear to the valet's heart, and then at the travelling clock on the table beside it, and realized that it was an hour past her usual lunch time and that she was extremely hungry, after all. A little piece of paper on the tray caught her eye, and, picking it up, she read in Gaston's clear though minute handwriting, "At what hour does madame desire to ride?"

The servant clearly had no intention of giving up the program for the afternoon without a struggle. She smiled as she added a figure to the end of the note, and went to the curtains that divided the rooms. "Gaston!"

"Madame!"

She passed the paper silently through the curtains and went back to her lunch. When she sent Zilah away with the empty tray she rescued the Vicomte de Saint Hubert's book from the floor where she had thrown it and tried to read it dispassionately. She turned to the title page and studied the pencilled scrawl "Souvenir de Raoul" closely. It did not look like the handwriting of a small-minded man, but handwriting was nothing to go by, she argued obstinately. Aubrey, who was the essence of selfishness, wrote beautifully, and had once been told by an expert that his writing denoted a generous love of his fellow-men, which deduction had aroused no enthusiasm in the baronet, and had given his sister over to helpless mirth. She turned the pages, dipping here and there, finally forgetting the author altogether in the book. It was a wonderful story of a man's love and faithfulness, and Diana pushed it aside at last with a very bitter sigh. Things happened so in books. In real life they happened very differently. She looked round the room with pain-filled eyes, at the medley of her own and the Sheik's belongings, her ivory toilet appointments jostling indiscriminately among his brushes and his razors on the dressing-table, and then at the pillow beside her where his head rested every night. She stooped and kissed it with a little quivering breath. "Ahmed. Oh, Monseigneur!" she murmured longingly. Then, with an impatient jerk of the head, she sprang up and dragged on her boots. She pulled a soft felt hat down over her eyes and picked up the revolver the Sheik had given her. She paused a moment, looking at it with an odd smile before buckling it round her slim waist. Gaston's face lit up with genuine pleasure when she came out to

The horse that she rode always the horses, now was pure white, not so fast as Silver Star and very tricky, called The Dancer, from a nervous habit of dancing on his hind legs at starting and stopping, like a circus horse. He was difficult to mount, and edged away shyly as Diana tried to get her foot into the stirrup. But she swung up at last, and by the time The Dancer had finished his display of haute ecole Gaston was mounted. "After riding The Dancer I feel confident to enter for the Concours Hippique," she laughed over her shoulder, and touched the horse with her heel.

After a while she reined in her horse and waved to Gaston to come alongside. "Tell me of this Vicomte de Saint Hubert who is coming. You know him, I suppose, as you have been so long with Monseigneur?"

Gaston smiled. "I knew him before Monseigneur did. I was born on the estate of Monsieur le Comte de Saint Hubert, the father of Monsieur le Vicomte. I and my twin brother Henri. We both went into Monsieur le Comte's training stables, and then after our time in the Cavalry Henri became valet to Monsieur le Vicomte, and I came to Monseigneur."

Diana took off her hat and rubbed her forehead thoughtfully. Fifteen years ago Ahmed must have been about 20.

She turned to Gaston with the intention of asking further of the coming visitor, and, keeping The Dancer as still as she could, sat looking at the valet with great, questioning eyes, fanning her hot face with her hat. Gaston, whose own horse stood like a rock, was frankly mopping his forehead. Diana decided against any more questions. Gaston would naturally be hopelessly biased, having been born and brought up in the shadow of the family, and after all she would rather judge for herself. One inquiry only she permitted herself: "The family of Saint Hubert, are they of the old or the new nobblesse?"

"Of the old, madame," replied Gaston quickly.

Diana coaxed her nervous mount close beside his steadier companion, and, thrusting his bridle and her hat into Gaston's hands, slipped to the ground and walked away a little distance to the top of a small mound. She sat down on the summit with her back to the horses and her arms clasped round her knees. All that the coming of this strange man meant to her rushed suddenly over her. He was a man, obviously, who moved in the world, her world, since he apparently traveled extensively and his father was wealthy enough to run a racing stable as a hobby and was a member of the dwindling class of ancienne noblesse. It was characteristic of her that she put first what she did. How could she bear to meet one of her own order in the position in which she was? She sat very still for a while with her face hidden, until a discreet cough from Gaston warned her that time was flying. She went back to the horses slowly with white face and compressed lips. There was the usual trouble in mounting, and her strained nerves made her impatient of The Dancer's idiosyncrasies, and she checked him sharply, making him rear dangerously.

"Carefully, Madame," cried Gaston warningly.

"For whom—me or Monseigneur's horse?" she retorted bitterly, and ignoring her hat, which Gaston held out to her with reproachful eyes, she spurred the horse viciously, making him break into a headlong gallop. It had got to be gone through, so get it over as soon as possible. And behind her, Gaston, for the first time in all his long service, cursed the master he would cheerfully have died for.

The horse's nerves, like her own, were on edge, and he pulled badly, his smooth satiny neck growing dark and seamed with sweat; Diana needed all her knowledge to control him, and she began to wonder if when they came to the camp she would be able to stop him. She topped an undulation that was some little distance from the tents with misgivings, and wrapped the reins round her hands to prevent them slipping through her fingers. As they neared she saw the Sheik standing outside his tent, with a tall, thin man beside him. She had only a glimpse of dark, unruly hair and a close-cut beard as she shot past, unable to pull up The Dancer. But just beyond the tent, with the reins cutting into her hands, she managed to haul him round and bring him back. In the hands of the men he sidled and snorted, and, dropping the reins, Diana pulled off her gloves and sat for a moment rubbing her sore hands. Then the Sheik came forward and she slid down. Before looking at him she turned and, catching at The Dancer's head, struck him angrily over the nose with her thick, riding gloves and watched him led away, plunging and protesting, pulling the gloves through her fingers nervously, until Ahmed Ben Hassan's voice made her turn.

"Diana, the Vicomte de Saint Hubert waits to be presented to you."

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CALEXICO, July 13.—Erection of a brewery in Mexicali is indicated in an investigation being made here by J. Baumgardtner, formerly of the Bakersfield Brewing Company, who is understood to be working in conjunction with the ownership of the Owl resort. Under the order prohibiting shipments of liquor through United States territory, Mexicali has had the problem of bringing the beverage across the mountains from Ensenada or Labomba on the Gulf, a process so inconvenient that is believed the brewing industry for the boundary line trade will center in Mexicali.

IN-LAWS SCARE ROMANCE AWAY

'Too Many,' Says Judge When Husband Sees, Telling of Supporting.

Lee Roy Pennington received the sympathy of Judge Summerfield yesterday in divorce court when he declared that on a salary of $85 a month he had been forced by his wife, Ethel Hazel Pennington, to support his mother-in-law, sister-in-law, brother-in-law and an orphan nephew of hers.

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONG BEACH, July 13.—The loyalty of friendship was again demonstrated in Long Beach Harbor today when Spot, a pet dog owned by William Rigby, chef on the steamer Bergen, jumped overboard to rescue his old pal and shipmate, Tiger, the ship's cat.

Unlike the cat and dog of popular conception, the steamer pets have lived aboard the Bergen in perfect harmony for many months, and genuine companionship has developed between them, Rigby said. This morning, while running along the ship's rail, Tiger lost his footing and went overboard. In a flash Spot was over the side and into the water.

Seizing the frightened and clawing cat by the nape of his neck, Spot held him on the surface until Rigby and City Wharfinger A. E. Gannon could rescue both animals.

CALLS JOHNSON HEARST'S TOOL

Ralph Arnold Denounces Present Senator

Analyzes Incumbent's Career in Letter to Alumni

Swelling the tide of California Progressives' repudiation of Senator Johnson, an excoriating denunciation of Johnson as a selfish, insincere, Hearst-controlled "disciple of discontent" is contained in a letter sent to 10,000 alumni of Stanford University by Ralph Arnold, consulting geologist and petroleum engineer of Los Angeles, a former Progressive, and at one time one of Johnson's campaign leaders.

In a thoughtful analysis of the political career of Johnson, Mr. Arnold, who is supporting the candidacy of Charles C. Moore for United States Senator, explains why he and thousands of other former Progressives have completely changed their attitude toward their one-time political leader.

HEARST'S SERVANT

Mr. Arnold's letter follows, in part:

"I voted for, and was an ardent advocate of Johnson when he first ran for Governor. He made a good Governor at that particular time, because his dominant personal characteristic of destructive combativeness was essential to the accomplishment of the task before him. Johnson's record as a Senator, however, is another story, and has led me, together with thousands of others of his Progressive followers, to turn away from him. Among the things which have caused this change of sentiment among his former supporters are:

"First, he has lost his political sincerity; has discarded his high Progressive ideals for individual and personal gain, and has bent his energies to building up a personal political machine to serve

NAVAL BASE UP TO CITY

Establishment of the new $5,000,000 submarine base at Los Angeles Harbor depends on the action of local civic organizations. That was the statement made yesterday by officials of the port Submarine Base following an inspection of the proposed site by Rear Admiral Luther E. Gregory, Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks.

Admiral Gregory was taken on a trip about the Outer Harbor and Naval Base by Capt. William S. Miller, commander of the Submarine Base, the needs and possibilities of the present base also being explained to the construction chief.

"Admiral Gregory was fully aware of the local situation before he came here," said Capt. Miller. "He expressed himself as being well pleased with the proposed site for the new base. Our cramped quarters and facilities here were explained to him and recommendations will be made upon his return to Washington in September.

"The Navy Department is strongly in favor of establishing the new base at Los Angeles, where climatic and water conditions are ideal for submarine activities. But all we can do is spend the money when Congress appropriates it.

"Just how soon that will be depends on Los Angeles," he declared. "San Diego, through its Congressman, has obtained every project asked for in the past year."

Capt. Miller pointed out that although the Navy bill had been cut $483,000,000, San Diego will get by its provisions a naval hospital costing $500,000; marine base, $483,000; training school, $125,000, and several other important projects.

SAWTELLE IS ANNEXED OFFICIALLY

Sawtelle became a part of Los Angeles, legally and officially, at 9 a.m. yesterday when there was filed with Secretary of State Jordan at Sacramento the required certificate setting forth the results of the consolidation election and the ordinance subsequently adopted by the City Council validating the election. City Attorney Stephens was notified by telegraph yesterday by Mr. Jordan that the Sawtelle consolidation certificate had been received and filed. Mr. Stephens at once informed City Clerk Domingues, who in turn notified the police, fire, engineering and other city departments, as well as the county registrar of voters and the Board of Education. Capt. W. L. Spellman at once took charge of the police in the Sawtelle division, which includes the Palms and Westgate district, and other city officers took possession of their offices in Sawtelle.

The official consolidation celebration will be held in Sawtelle on Monday evening and Mayor Cryer and members of the City Council will be present to welcome Sawtelle back into the fold.

[Why not share your chuckle with others? When you see something unusual, drop a note about it to the Smile Editor of The Times. Then we can all smile.]

I. C. sends the following clip from the Inglewood News society page: "She is now making her future home in Fillmore, Cal., where she has large ranching interests." Surely this is the psychic age.

E. H. G. finds strange interest in this phrase from the "Times" Sunday magazine: "Diana saw Gaston sitting firmly in the empty saddle." Diana sure was Seein' Things, but, at that, the saddle is empty most of the time we are horseback riding.

E. F. H. makes the grade again with this head line from the Herald: "Eastern Star in 5th No-Hit Game." That's news for sure! We didn't even know the association had a ball team.

L. A. T. is interested in noting that, according to the great home daily, S. M. Vauclain will be the luncheon guest of the C. of C. tomorrow at the Alexandria and, "That same evening he will give a talk on business conditions in the hotel ball room." If a crowd means anything, business conditions are generally good there.

E. G. S. dug a smile out of this headline: "Declares Turkey Doomed To Die." Never mind, the old gobbler needn't worry. Thanksgiving Day is months away.

Wails of City Guardians Resound as Make-believe Snowstorm Strikes Make-believe Terror

There was a snowstorm last night at the corner of New High and Court streets. The white flakes slithered down the neck of Sheriff Traeger and whirled about the stern person of Chief Oaks.

"Dear me, Oaks, this is too bad," he cried. "Los Angeles is ruined. Here we go and spend thousands of dollars advertising California sunshine, and then she up and snows little hells right plumb in the middle of July. When this gets out in the eastern press we won't get no more Madalynne Obenchains or other tourists—and then we'll have to shut down the jail and junk the rubberneck autos and send the real estate cutthroats to the poor farm. Catalina and the tuna fish'll be forced outta business, and—"

ADJECTI ES TO RESCUE

A frenzied shriek from Chief Oaks interrupted him.

"The worst ain't yet told, Sheriff," he blubbered. "We'll have to buy woolen union suits for all my coppers, and by the time the City Council takes action they'll all be friz to death."

In the midst of this threnody a hurry call was sent out for Frank Wiggins, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce. He took one look at the situation and began dictating orders.

"Cancel all sunkist-climate advertisements," he spat, "and draw up a descriptive circular called 'Los Angeles—the Switzerland of the World.' Show beautiful exbathing girls skiing down Olive street and write a bunch of drool

CLEARS GLORIA IN BURNS CASE

Court Rules Film Star and Mother Not Guilty

Screen Beauty to Testify on Merchant's Sanity

Gloria Swanson, film star and beauty, and her mother, Mrs. Adeline Burns won a decided victory in Judge Rives's probate court yesterday when Judge Rives granted nonsuits on the charges that Gloria and her mother had conspired to marry Burns and that he had been unduly influenced in the making of his will.

With the dismissal of these charges by the judge of the probate court, counsel for the relatives, who are contesting the probate of the will, which left the bulk of a $100,000 estate to Gloria's mother, will have to prove Burns was insane on Nov. 26, 1919, the date of making the will.

If they fail to convince the ten women and two men who are sitting as jurors in the case that Burns was insane on this day, Mrs. Burns will become the sole beneficiary of the entire estate with the exception of $3500 which goes to a sister, Mrs. Margaret A. Graham, two brothers, Thomas and John, and a nephew, John Burns Graham.

STAR FIRST WITNESS

Although Gloria is free from the charges of having sat on Burns's lap—"hugged him and then asked for a check"—wired him on two occasions for money, given parties and sent the bills to the late shoe man, receiving $2000 worth of clothes from him, and having called Mr. Burns "daddy," she will be the first witness called by the defense for her mother some time this morning, according to Attorney James Pope. Gloria was scheduled to have been a witness yesterday.

Gloria will be a witness to help her mamma in her battle for her husband's estate. That's all, the lawyers say. She won't be called upon to tell if she did all the naughty things she were accused of by her recently-acquired kinfolk. So those who will help crowd the courtroom this morning will probably go away disappointed when sweet morsels of gossip fail to creep out.

The defense counsel called T. C. Ridgeway, attorney, who drew up the last will of Mr. Burns, as their first witness yesterday afternood.

DECLARED RATIONAL

Mr. Ridgeway declared Burns was "absolutely rational" on the day he made his will, Nov. 26, 1919. He told of Burns bringing another will to him which had been previously drawn up by him which bequeathed everything to his wife, with the exception of $2000 which was to go to his private secretary. The peroration of the original will

DEMANDS PRIVATE PHONE

Fair Long Beach Auditor Doesn't Intend That Her Conversation Shall be Overheard

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONG BEACH, July 13.—Miss Myrtelle D. Gunsul, City Auditor of Long Beach, who in controversies with other city officials regarding municipal affairs, has proved herself a worthy opponent, has taken on another fight.

This time it is with City Manager C. E. Hewes and although the latter has the backing of the city fathers in his stand against the city auditor, there are few takers of bets that Hewes will win the controversy.

It all hinges on whether, in the face of orders issued by Hewes and the City Council, Miss Gunsul will succeed in having a private telephone line installed in her offices in the new City Hall when that building is completed. It has been directed by the city fathers that the new structure will be equipped with a private branch exchange, through which all telephone calls in and out of the building shall be handled.

Miss Gunsul has declared emphatically that she does not want any "listening-in" in her conversations, be they about business affairs or private affairs, and that she will insist that her office be equipped with a direct telephone line to the outside world.

City Manager Hewes has delivered a most brutal and manlike "No," but Miss Gunsul refuses to be frightened. She has gone serenely about the task of ordering the telephone company to transfer her present telephone equipment into the new building when the office of City Auditor is established there.

The betting is all in favor of Miss Gunsul.

ASK DANCE PRIVILEGES ON SUNDAY

Asking for the repeal of an ordinance which prohibits the holding of public dances in Los Angeles on Sunday, the National Anti-Blue Law Association yesterday filed a petition with the City Council declaring that the law was unjust and discriminatory. This is the only Sunday closing law in the city, the petition points out, and states further that the association is of the opinion that the majority of people in Los Angeles are opposed to Sunday closing, as shown by the fact that several years ago the people, under a referendum, voted down an ordinance which had been enacted by the Council closing barber shops and retail grocery stores on Sundays.

Mrs. M. H. Marks is president of the National Anti-Blue Law Association, and on the advisory board of the organization are Rabbi D. S. Hecht, Councilman Mushet, Police Judge Richardson, and Dr. L. C. Mace, Past Exalted Ruler of the local lodge of Elks.

The petition was referred to the Council's Public Welfare Committee which meets next Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock.

Says Husband Planned Career as Bootlegger

When Mrs. Clara Diskin called the police after her husband announced that he was to join the bootleggers' union, Max Diskin threw a glass jar at her, according to the statement of the wife in Judge McLucas's court yesterday. The police arrived, but Mr. Diskin had fled, she stated.

According to the story of the wife, who is seeking a divorce, Mr. Diskin brought home a demijohn of booze and announced that he was going to deal in liquor in the future. The wife called the officers, who confiscated the drink. Judge McLucas continued the case to hear the husband's side of the affair.

JACKIE COOGAN WIELDS SHOVEL

Breaks Ground for Fine Home in "Times" Contest

Will be Ready When Winner is Announced

Orphan Children Greet Great Boy Film Star

Jackie Coogan proved himself a good friend of The Times yesterday when after having worked like a Trojan for many hours at the United Studios, he appeared at Wilshire Crest at 3 p.m. to turn the first shovelful of earth in the ground-breaking ceremonies for the $16,500 prize home offered by this newspaper to the chief winner in the subscription contest.

JACKIE WIELDS PICK

After an address by Burton E. Smith, State editor of The Times, thanking the many attendants for their presence and interest, Mr. Smith, in the name of The Times, presented Jackie with a bright new, beribboned shovel and bade him start to work on the foundation in his own sweet way.

"Thanks for the shovel, but what we need first is a good pick," replied the little film star. A "regular" pick was brought to Jackie, who, after breaking the hard crust of ground, grabbed his shovel and proceeded to work like a good son of toil. Having finished his arduous task, which lasted for five minutes, Jackie breathed a sigh of relief, wiped the perspiration from his brow and remarked:

"Now, if I had a good drink of water, a shower bath and a soft bed, everything would be all hunkie."

THROWS KISSES TO CROWD

"Good-by, Jackie!" rang out scores of his friends, young and old, as the 7-year-old star was carried off on the shoulders of his manager, Arthur Bernstein, and the little actor threw kisses at the crowd as he departed.

More than 100 boys and girls from the Los Angeles Orphans' Asylum attended the ceremonies as guests of The Times. They were taken to Wilshire Crest in the twenty prize automobiles which are included in The Times $70,000 campaign gifts. The youngsters had their picture taken with Jackie

COUNCIL SCANS TAX PROPOSALS

Amendment Raising Limit Being Considered

Plan to Make Clerk Civil Service is Offered

District Representation Also Suggested

The City Council's committee on charter amendments yesterday afternoon agreed to recommend that a proposition be placed before the voters at the State election next November, placing the office of City Clerk, now held by Robert Dominguez, under civil service. The committee disapproved a proposal that an amendment be submitted placing the Chief of Police and the position of secretary to the Chief under civil service.

Proposed amendments increasing the tax limit of the city for governmental purposes from $1 for each $100 of assessed property valuation in the city to $1.25 or $1.50 and an amendment providing for proportional representation for the City Council were taken under advisement by the committee.

The placing of the office of City Clerk under civil service, has been recommended by the Municipal League and Mayor Cryer concurred in the league's recommendation.

FIND REVENUE SCANTY

The Council has agreed that in the near future an amendment should be submitted increasing the tax limit from $1 for each $100 valuation, but the time that this should be presented and the amount of the increase has not been agreed upon. The councilmen are convinced that under the $1 tax limit, which was established years ago, when Los Angeles was a small city, the revenues are wholly insufficient to conduct the government of the present-day Los Angeles, and because of the deficit resulting, the Council was forced to burden the business men of the city with the admittedly unjust occupational tax.

If the District Court of Appeal upholds the contention of the firemen and policemen, then the Council will submit at the August 29 State-county primaries a charter amendment changing the firemen's and policemen's pension provisions, and will submit at the same time an enabling act under which the Council can establish a modern, scientific pension system for all city employes.

AWAIT COURT RULING

If the city's position is sustained by the Court of Appeal, then both the policemen's and firemen's pension provisions will be submitted at the November election. This also applies to the district representation charter amendment, which has been petitioned for. If the courts rule that it be placed before the voters at the August election, this will be done. If the courts sustain the city, the charter amendment providing for the election of one councilman from each of fifteen districts of the city, instead of the present plan of electing nine councilmen at large, will be submitted at the November election.

Under the Council's present plans, which will go through unless a court decision adverse to the city is rendered, the only municipal proposition on the August 29 ballot will be a proposed bond issue of $12,500,000 for additional sewers and treatment plants.

Councilmen Mushet and Wheeler attended yesterday's meeting of the committee on charter amendments. Councilman Mallard, the third member of the committee, is on vacation.

WOMEN ACTIVE AGAINST HIRAM

Supporters Flocking to the Moore Standard

Feminine Leaders Take Field to Beat Johnson

Former Congressman Indorses Candidate

"The women of Southern California are almost solidly opposed to Hiram Johnson, and their leaders have taken the field and are actively campaigning for Charles C. Moore for the Republican nomination for United States Senator."

This was the statement issued by Maj. G. C. Wyman, campaign manager for Charles C. Moore in the South, at the Moore-for-Senator headquarters.

"It is generally acknowledged that the women of California will be the deciding factor in the coming election and for this reason I feel no hesitancy in predicting that Hiram will be handed the surprise of his life when the votes are counted at the August primaries."

"The women will hold him answerable for his stand against the Four Power Pact and for his failure to stand up like a man and vote in the Newberry case, a fight against corruption in Washington. These and many other acts of a similar nature, one of them being his failure to register on the Esch-Cummins Bill, his alliance with William Randolph Hearst and his private law practice as a Hearst hireling while representing California in Washington, are things he will have to answer for when he faces the voters of this State at the coming election.

HIRAM REPUDIATED

"And not only is it the women, but men from all walks of life, men who at one time were Johnson's ardent supporters, men who backed him with their voice and money when they looked upon him as the champion of the people, who have turned on Hiram and are working tirelessly for the election of Charles C. Moore.

"Among these men is William Kent, who served the people of California for eight years continuously in Washington, six years as Congressman and two years as a member of the Federal Tariff Commission. Always a leader in progressive, forward-looking issues, a man of national repute as a conservationist and welfare worker, a man who once was a staunch backer of Hiram, has repudiated this false leader of the people and is urging the election of Mr. Moore."

In a warm endorsement of Moore's candidacy Kent says:

"I have known Mr. C. C. Moore ever since his splendid administration of the Panama-Pacific Exposition. He is a man of fine capacity, cool and careful judgment, and is respected and honored by all who know him. He possesses the supreme quality of unselfishness. He believes and practises the ideals that go with the policy of living and letting live. He is independent of all entanglements, and will do nothing to forfeit that independence. He can be relied upon to work for the real interest of California, as he has done in the past, as well as for the particular welfare of all our people.

"We Californians have the opportunity to select a real public servant, who will devote his fine efficiency to their service with steady loyalty. He will not involve himself in discreditable alliances for the purposes of self-advertising. He can be relied upon to apply himself to the heavy but unostentatious committee work of the Senate, and will not cast his shadow upon the screen occupied by whoever happens to be President.

MOORE, IDEAL SENATOR

"He will help and not hinder great plans for a more peaceful and better world. His nature precludes him from stirring international hatred and distrust. Out of knowledge of the men and the duties of the Senate, I feel free to assure those who will attend the Republican primaries that in choosing a man of his character and ability they will contribute worthy service to the nation and honor and benefit to our State."

MILO TELLS OF COOLED AFFECTION

Cross-examination of George Milo, motion-picture actor who Wednesday admitted having registered with Mrs. Meryl Wilson several times at a beach hotel, was opened yesterday by George Greer, attorney for Mrs. Wilson, whose suit for divorce has been contested by her husband on grounds of infidelity.

Milo declared he "fell out of love" with Mrs. Wilson when he saw her going out with another man. Despite this, he said he took the young wife out for several automobile rides afterward during which they always stopped under a certain pepper tree on Crestmont Drive.

The telephone operator in the apartment-house in which Mrs. Wilson resided after her separation from her husband testified concerning instances when Milo came and inquired if Mrs. Wilson was in. On being told that she was he always went upstairs, presumably to Mrs. Wilson's room, the witness asserted.

Comedy entered the trial when Mr. Wilson told Judge McLucas of a quarrel with his wife in a Vancouver cafe.

"My wife started by sneering at the evening's program, a picture show and dinner, and then declared that my ideas were too close together, showing I was of low intelligence," he said.

"I retaliated and told her that her eyes were crossed," he replied.

Mr. Wilson testified that his wife was cold to him after her meeting with Milo, and stated that he met her in Vancouver on his vacation, she turned her face from him when he attempted to kiss her.

Mrs. Wilson told the court that Milo had offered to go to France and not appear in her divorce suit and if she would pay his traveling expenses.

She also testified that the actor threatened to come out to her house and "clean up" the place after she had given the police information during the Taylor investigation that led to his arrest.

The case was continued until today.

his will and ambitions rather than the people of California. He has proven himself to be the 'rule or ruin' type of leader. Nothing more fittingly describes his object in life than the slogan on his campaign buttons, 'I'm for Hiram.'

"Second, he has been the paid attorney of, and is the willing servant of, William Randolph Hearst. Are you one who believes Hiram Johnson can represent the people of California and Hearst at the same time, or do you believe that a vote for Johnson is a vote for Hearst?

FALSE CLAIM TO CREDIT

"Third, he was the paid advocate of the notorious Mylan-Tammany-Democratic machine in its fight against Gov. Miller, one of the best Republican governors New York ever had. In this fight he spent much of the time for which he was being paid by the people of California as their representative in opposing exactly the same measures of State transportation corporation control as he espoused in his former days of political sincerity.

"Fourth, he opposed the Four-Power Pact, the one great outstanding influence for world peace. In this Johnson is consistent, for he has always been the disciple of discontent, has inflamed passions, appealed to prejudice and aroused class hatred. President Harding, in his Fourth of July speech, this year, said: 'My one outstanding conviction, after sixteen months in the Presidency, is that the greatest traitor to his country is he who appeals to prejudice and inflames passion, when sober judgment and honest speech are so necessary to firmly establish tranquillity and serenity.'

"Fifth, he claims all of the credit for the schedules in the present tariff law, protecting lemons, citrus biproducts, walnuts, almonds and other California produce, when in reality, such credit belongs largely to the late G. Harold Powell, former head of the orange growers' association, to Senator Shortridge, Representative Kahn, and our eight other Representatives in Congress. Do you believe that a man like Johnson, who has persistently fought the administration, whose party loyalty is always in question, and who is at outs with most of his Congressional associates, can really accomplish much in an atmosphere where cooperation and conciliation are the prime essentials of success.

FLOCKING TO MOORE

"Sixth, he failed to vote on the Esch-Cumming's bill, and the Newberry matter in the face of his avowed abhorrence of sidestepping and political cowards.

"The people of California are flocking to the standard of Charles C. Moore, because they are tired of destructive talk and want constructive action. Moore, being an engineer, is, above all things, constructive, both in thought and action. He is a thorough Californian, having been educated in its public schools and the Episcopal College of St. Augustine; he is self-made in the better sense of the word; he is a successful farmer, stock-raiser, citrus fruit and olive grower, and should know the problems of his associates in these activities. He is a thirty-second degree Mason.

"At the same time that he has been making business success he has endeared himself to the people of California by his devotion of a goodly share of his time, energy and resources to public work. This is evidenced by the positions which he has held, such as head of the Panama-Pacific exposition, head of the State Council of Defense during the war, and present head of the Boy Scouts of California. He also is a leader in many other civic and commercial activities.

"Mr. Moore has never held public office, neither has he sought this nomination. He only consented to become a candidate after many urgent appeals of the best representative citizens of his State, because he thought it was his duty to run."

CLEARS GLORIA IN BURNS CASE

stated: "I have absolutely left the Grahams out of my will. have already given them more in my lifetime than could be expected under the circumstances."

"Burns was worried about the Grahams contesting his will," stated Mr. Ridgeway. "In the one I was drawing up for him I suggested he bequest something to his relatives to prevent a contest. He didn't want to. I suggested leaving $500 to each of them. Mrs. Burns, who was present with him, agreed with my suggestion, saying she thought he should bequeath $10,000 to his sister, Mrs. Margaret A. Graham."

Mr. Ridgeway then told of drawing up the last will and said he was rational at the time and free from fraud and undue influence.

SUED FOR JEWELRY

"He asked me to see to it that there would be no contest over his will," Mr. Ridgeway said.

Mr. Ridgeway stated Burns on one occasion said he was involved in a suit with his sister over some jewelry which had belonged to his former wife. Burns said he paid his sister $500 for the jewelry and received it, according to Mr. Ridgeway.

Did Gloria's mother marry an insane man?

This is the only issue left in the case, the others having been dismissed by Judge Rives.

Was Mathew P. Burns insane on the day he drew up his last will and testament bequeathing everything to his wife with the exception of $5000?

The doctors say he was. Attorney Ridgeway, who was with Burns for several hours in his office during the drawing up of the document, says, "He was absolutely rational and understood everything I said to him."

UNSOUND, SAY DOCTORS

Drs. William R. Maloney and A. L. Jones told of examining Burns as an applicant for a $50,000 life insurance policy.

"Who are we going to examine?" Dr. Jones testified he asked his medical colleague.

"Burns, the shoe man."

"There's no use. He's a nut anyway," Dr. Jones replied.

Attorney George Beebe of the counsel for the relatives was propounding the questions. Attorney Scott objected, asking that that part of Dr. Jones's testimony be stricken from the record. Objection sustained.

"After hearing Burns talk at length concerning his immense wealth and everyone loving him, also displaying much egotism pertaining to his business, I made up my mind what was wrong with him," Dr. Maloney stated.

BRAIN AFFECTED

Drs. Maloney, Jones, Martin G. Carter, and Victor Parkin testified they had examined Burns on different occasions and found he had a disease contributory to paresis, which had softened the brain, causing a confusion of ideas, state of irritability, excessive rudeness and happiness, alternating, and a loss of memory. All of the doctors declared in their opinion Burns was insane on Nov. 24, 1913, the time of Burns leaving the bulk of his estate to the film star's mother.

On cross-examination by Attorney Scott of the counsel defending Mrs. Burns's right to the shoe man's estate, Dr. Jones was asked:

"Would you have believed Burns crazy if he had told you Gloria was vamping him?"

"Yes."

Dr. Parkin, answering the same query, stated: "I don't know whether Gloria was vamping him or not." A ripple of laughter was heard in the courtroom. Order had to be called.

"I want you to answer my question."

MOTHER MAY TAKE STAND

Gloria's mother may be called to the stand to refute part of the testimony given by Mrs. Margaret A. Graham, sister of the deceased shoe man and one of the contestants to the probate of the will. On being recalled to the stand yesterday morning by her attorneys Mrs. Graham stated Burns had asked her for his dead wife's jewelry, which she had been keeping as a gift from her brother since the death of his first wife.

"What do you want with it?" Mrs. Graham said she asked her brother. "He told me Mrs. Burns wanted it and was going to sue him for a divorce if he didn't get it for her."

Testimony by Mrs. Graham which was objected to by counsel for Mrs. Burns and sustained by Judge Rives developed Burns had sued his sister for the jewelry and failed to get it. This evidence was stricken from the record. The jewelry consisted of diamond rings and other expensive jewels, Mrs. Graham said.

VANITY INDICATED

The singer gave further testimony for her reasons to believe her brother irrational. On one occasion when he was driving recklessly down a main thoroughfare, Mrs. Graham stated, she told him he was liable to be "pinched" if officers saw him. At this Burns displayed a badge from underneath his coat, saying: "I am greater than all the police. I could arrest the Chief of Police myself."

"I married Gloria. I didn't marry the old lady." This was a statement from a deposition read yesterday from Miss Ingred Johnson, nurse. "When he wasn't saying he was the Chief of Police he was saying he was President of the United States."

"Did Burns recognize any one after he was taking from the sanatorium at Eagle Rock to his home?"

"No."

"Did he say anything about women or his being crazy?"

"Yes. He said he was popular with the women. Once he said people thought he was crazy, but he wasn't."

"Did he ever talk about money?"

"Yes. He said he was going to have some trouble with the Grahams."

Today's session of court will begin at 10 o'clock.

about the one resort city where the perspiring easterner can enjoy a sweatless vacation—the only town in the nation where there is snow in July—the one, etc., etc."

JUST A FILM BLIZZARD

And then a brusque cinema director went and queered the works.

"Shut off that snow," he bellowed, "and move in for a close-up of the Sheriff blowing on his fingers. Remember, this is Christmas Eve in New York and you birds gotta look cold."

WILL HONOR DEAN HEALY AND SPOUSE

Informal Reception Will Mark Golden Anniversary of Couple's Wedding

Instead of the quiet reception for a few of their intimate friends which they had planned, Dr. Ezra A. Healy, dean emeritus of the College of Theology, University of Southern California, and Mrs. Healy will be tendered a public reception in honor of their golden wedding anniversary tomorrow afternoon in the Bovard administration building of the university. The hours will be from 3 to 5 o'clock and all friends are invited to attend.

The affair will be more or less informal and no cards will be issued.

Dr. Healy is one of the prominent clergymen of the State, having resided in Los Angeles for thirty-five years. For twenty-five years of that time he has served as a member of the board of trustees of the university and for fourteen years he acted as dean of the College of Theology. He resigned that position last year to become dean emeritus.

Dr. J. W. Oakley is in charge of arrangements for the reception and the Ladies Aid society of the University Methodist Church will serve refreshments.

Hotel Owner Cruel, Wife's Suit Charges

Charging that her husband, William Francis Scott, Los Angeles hotel owner, was extremely brutal in actions toward her at a time when she was suffering from a nervous breakdown, Mrs. Charlotte Irene Scott yesterday filed suit for divorce, asking for $1000 a month alimony.

The complaint filed states that the defendent owns property valued at more than $100,000, which brings him an income of $35,000 a year.

Mrs. Scott asserts that while in the Pleasanton Hotel her husband threatened her with a revolver, threw her from her bed and forced her to leave the room at a late hour in the night. She spent the remainder of the night, according to her complaint, with a friend in Beverly Hills.

She further asserts that Mr. Scott's immoral practices caused her intense mental and physical suffering.

City Employees Change Date of Great Barbecue

Announcement was made yesterday that the 30th inst. has been named as the date when city employees will stage their barbecue, instead of the 23rd inst. as originally planned. The barbecue will be for the benefit of the United Spanish War veterans according to announcement made by Mayor Cryer, who is honorary chairman of the national convention committee, and will be held at Selig Zoo. Negotiations for the affair were completed yesterday with Col. W. N. Selig by Capt. C. S. Jenkins of the fire department, who has been designated by the Mayor to handle the details of the festivities.

Preparations are being made for entertaining 10,000 persons with all manner of sports, games, and amusements on that date. Contests of all sorts between various branches of the city government, including a special tug of war between the police and firemen, will be held.

A beauty contest, baby show, athletic events for the fair sex, motion-picture exhibitions by the Selig trained animals and scores of other novelties are also planned. The barbecue will start at 10 a.m. and last until midnight.

Col. Selig has arranged for a special animal comedy to be staged by Mary, the chimpanzee with a human brain, who with Joe Martin of Universal shares the honor of being the most educated simian in captivity.

Court Orders Flyer to Pay Back Alimony

B. H. De Lay, Venice aviator, appeared before Judge Hahn yesterday in answer to a citation demanding that he pay up his back alimony to Mrs. Jaunita De Lay. De Lay paid $70. It then became known that an answer had been filed by De Lay's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles De Lay, to the $70,000 lost-love suit of young Mrs. De Lay.

The young wife charged the parents with destroying the affection of Mr. De Lay by introducing him to Miss Ann M. Satterlee of Venice. The parents deny this and also deny that they furnished their son with two automobiles in which he took Miss Satterlee driving.

ROMAN IS ASKED OF PAST LIFE

Purported Convict Lover of Madalynne is Grilled on Witness Stand

A new turn was given the trial of Mrs. Madalynne C. Obenchain, charged with the murder of J. Belton Kennedy, yesterday, when Madalynne's counsel asked Paul Roman whether a mysterious "Freddie" had not threatened the life of Kennedy if he ever married.

"Freddie," according to the affidavits on which Mr. Rush based his examination, was once accused of beating Kennedy because he saw him out with a woman. It was also charged that Roman accompanied Kennedy to different costumers, where they rented costumes to wear at parties.

On the witness stand Roman's past was delved into and an attempt was made to impeach him on every statement he had previously made. When he left the stand Arthur C. Burch, Madalynne's co-defendant, was called.

Richard Kittrells, who is representing the young man, objected to Burch testifying unless the indictment against him was dismissed. This Deputy Dist.-Atty. Keyes refused to do, and Burch returned to the jail.

Mrs. J. D. Kennedy, mother of the slain man, was the last witness of the day. She testified that two people had followed her from her home on the afternoon of the murder. She also related circumstances of the association of Madalynne with Belton and of her warnnings to the young woman. She was briefly cross-examined by Mr. Rush.

MULHOLLAND HEADS NEW MOORE CLUB

Engineers Form Booster Organization to Campaign for Candidate

Prominent members of the engineering profession in Southern California have formed a Moore-for-Senator Engineers' Club and pledged themselves to do all their power to secure the nomination and election of their fellow engineer, Charles C. Moore, who is a Republican candidate for United States Senator.

Feeling that there is real need of a seasoned engineer in the upper House at Washington from California, because of the Boulder Creek and other vast water and power projects, and feeling that Charles C. Moore is just the man to represent this State to the best of advantage along these lines, they have organized and are waging an active campaign in his behalf.

The first meeting of the Moore-for-Senator Engineers' Club will be held at the Clark Hotel at noon today, when the members will meet at luncheon, and the president, William Mulholland, father and builder of the great Los Angeles agueduct, will speak on Moore's qualifications.

Officers of the Moore-for-Senator Engineers' Club follow: President, William Mulholland; vice-presidents, Arthur S. Bent, member Associated General Contractors; Walter A. Schmidt, member American Chemical Society; Franklin D. Howell, member American Society Civil Engineers; Carl C. Thomas, member American Society Mechanical Engineers; D. B. Meyers, member American Institute Mining and Metallurgical Engineers; George D. Hall, member American Society Landscape Architects; T. D. Allin, member Pasadena Engineers' Society; secretary-treasurer, F. G. Dessery.

A partial list of the executive committee, of which Ralph Arnold is chairman, includes F. C. Miller, gas engineer; Charles P. Grimwood, chemical engineer; Mr. Warren, petroleum engineer; R. L. Daugherty, professor of mechanical engineering at California Institute of Technology; J. Hunter Clark, member American Association of Engineers.

He Refused to Economize, She Gets Divorced

When the couple wanted to economize the husband refused to cut down on tobacco, but suggested instead that they go without so much food, according to testimony of Mrs. Ella A. Bennett yesterday before Judge McLucas, who granted her a divorce. She stated that Daniel J. Bennett told her he did not see why he should cut down on anything.

The couple also had trouble over the cooking. He demanded that his wife cook "New Orleans style," and she was unaccustomed to Southern kitchen methods, she says.

TO PROMOTE COMMANDER

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONG BEACH, July 13.—Word was received in this city today that Capt. Henry J. Zeigemeier, captain in command of the Pacific Fleet Flagship California, and one of the most popular navy officers on this coast, is slated for promotion to rear admiral. The Naval Selection Board at Washington has named Capt. Zeigemeier with several other officers for promotion.

Capt. Zeigemeier was appointed to the naval academy May 21, 1886, from Ohio. He was named a captain August 29, 1916, and his appointment to the command of the California, the nation's newest and greatest fighting craft, indicated the regard in which he is held by the authorities at Washington.

Another well known Pacific Fleet officer, slated for promotion to the rank of rear admiral is Capt. George R. Marvell, now commanding the Dreadnaught Arizona, flagship of the Seventh Battle Division. Capt. Marvell was appointed to the command of the Arizona Dec. 17, last year, relieving Capt. Johu V. Chase, who was promoted to the rank of rear admiral January 1 and given command of the Pacific Fleet base force.

Capt. Marvell was appointed to the naval academy Sept. 1, 1885. He was made a captain of the Navy Dec. 8, 1915.

WOMAN IS BEATEN UP BY BRUTE

Passer-by Saves Wife from Probable Death; Husband Makes Escape

Mrs. James S. Daley of Huntington Park, badly beaten by her husband, was taken to a hospital in that city last night after R. F. Tibbets, a citizen of Huntington Park, had interrupted what the Sheriff's office believes to have been an attempt to murder the woman.

Tibbets was walking with his son near Mountain View avenue when he saw a man jumping up and down upon the prostrate body of a woman. He rushed forward to stop him.

"I'm going home and get my razor," snarled the man, according to Tibbets. "Then I'm going to cut your heart out for butting in."

Tibbets immediately notified Sheriff Traeger. Then he returned to his house, armed himself and started out to find Daley.

Deputy-Sheriffs Conly and Harrington rushed the injured woman to the Huntington Park Hospital. Yesterday was her birthday, she told them, and she had received a bottle of grape juice as a gift from friends in San Bernardino. While she was drinking it in her home over Jensen's store, she said, her husband attacked her. She fled to the street and he followed.

A search of the couple's rooms revealed a floor strewn with clothing. Among the garments were a pair of pants and a shirt, both stained with blood. Deputy sheriffs believe that Daley had returned home, changed clothes and made his escape. A boy in the neighborhood told them that the man jumped aboard a Los Angeles-bound car.

Family Resists Federal Agents is Their Charge

Frank M. Sturgis, agent in charge of the local Department of Justice offices, and two of his assistants reported yesterday that they were resisted late Wednesday night when they arrested Jack Talamantes in a house in a lonely woods near Palma. He was indicted in March for violation of the Mann Act, being charged with having transported a woman from Los Angeles to Tijuana, Mex., opposite San Diego.

When the Federal agents reached the house, where Talamantes's relations live, they were told the fugitive was not there. They insisted on entering and began the search with a smoky oil lamp, the only light in the place. When they found Talamantes in an adjoining room, members of the family declared they would not let him go and stepped in front of the government men, but they forced their way out of the place dragging the prisoner with them.

Mormon Bishop Says Temple is Being Planned

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SANTA MONICA, July 13.—Plans for a Mormon temple and possibly a colony are being considered by the Mormon Church, Bishop C. W. Nibley, financial head of the sect, declared here today. He stopped off for a few hours on his way to San Francisco.

Bishop Nibley declared that his visit had no special significance but admitted that his church was considering the erection of a temple in the bay district. He said that plans were tentative.

Bishop Nibley is motoring to San Francisco, where he will depart for his home in Salt Lake City.

Wife Held for Bigamy Seeks Support Money

They were married in Crown Point, Ind., in the fall of 1921, she stated, and lived together until their separation following his charging her with bigamy last week. Her complaint, filed by her attorneys, McDonald and Thompson, denies his accusations of bigamy.

SAVE THE MOTOR

President Harding urges his department heads to use the pruning knife on making up their demands for the budget. He might go further and insist on using the ax on some of them.

SPEED IN THE AIR

An Englishman has made an airplane which drives an engine that the inventor claims will give him a speed capacity of 400 miles an hour. Up or down? Usually the greatest speed of these marvels is made when they drop.

THE SHORT LIFE

With a matter of twenty-four burglaries reported in one night it is evident that Los Angeles does not shrink in the proudness of their criminals from the metropolises of New York and Chicago. We doubt if Philadelphia can hold any greater industry on the part of her skilled crooks.

SOME LOBSTER

Millionaire Stotesbury paid $125,000 for lobsters' feet in his divorce suit and the astonished solicitor billed the item of payment as a luxury. The lawyer admitted that it was a necessity, all right enough, and the satisfaction was complete. It seems that a divorce is a beautiful necessity.

SYMPATHIZING STRIKERS

Workers in China are threatening to sympathetic strikes in order to manifest their attitude toward the particular revolution with which they happen to be chronically disturbed. The patriot may not think so much, but he can at least lay down his shabby wrench. The Chinese have imported a lot of things through their contact with the Occident.

TRYING IT OUT

They are going to have a test case in the court over the sale of hops and other head-brew ingredients. It is claimed that the stuff is outlawed and may not be sold in bottles hereafter. Consequently several of the supposedly hard boiled of the proprietary band. A ring case will be made by the Blue Ribbon Brewing Company. If blue-ribbon beverages cannot be made without brewing, the hops industry around about is our hardest hickory?

ON THE JOB

The coal operators have accepted the standard of governmental assistance in the period of the coal strike. The President should go into the mines and shovel coal, but he doesn't think personally will do it. The Secretary of Labor, who was once a miner himself, says that the people need coal and, by heaven, they shall have it. He is quite capable of taking a pick to prove it. It remains now to be seen whether the Secretary will admit the mine owners of any harm at all.

KNOCKED THE TURKEY

The British papers are chattering ridiculousness against American films that insult the Anglo-Saxon people. They say that they have used us up with brutish villains and are deserving of peace in which the Hun is driven a thousand miles by a Britisher. They should worry. The films have no influence at all in Virginia and Kentucky. They play and sell. They get more of them out of Wall street or the Bowery than they do out of all the country south of the Mid Ocean. We have even had a lot of pictures with English heroes and heroines. We aim to please and we feel that there is no just kick coming. Our villains may not be faithful but they are too dangerous to excite facile animosities.

THEN AND NOW

When Harding was in the Senate and the measure creating the Railway Labor Board was being considered Senator Harding moved before a Senate which would never move before its people a speech plainly. The senator who set himself and the present day is seen in that he does not storm about penalty for violation of rules laid down by the board. The country, however, will know exactly where the administration stands. President Harding will have the latest facts at hand as he would in Senator Harding. The strikers need have no qualms about that. A strike against the business of the United States Railway Labor Board is a strike against the United States government and will be so construed.

ONE EVERY MINUTE

Advices from Scotland Yard say to the effect that America furnishes the world's greatest visible supply of suckers. Most of these come to Europe in the guise of tourists, but they furnish point for all the shafts everyone. It appears Scotland Yard is that this is where to be lodged. We have a lot of things that even a moronized mind must gasp at, but the average citizen of Gotham feels that the system of the world is found to "Broadway and not to run that it will like. That he goes over to London and says he listened to Westminster Abbey to accept the fruit of distributing most strangers wealth with the wide daisy kindness of a lonesome by the side of the prune tree. America is looking forward alive and smiling without fairly knowing it.

TELL-TALE OCEAN LANE

A scattering line of surveyors steamer, weather-beaten and almost lost to view. Two or three toy ships, armed with saluting guns, which rarely leave their anchorages on the Great Lakes except to give the Naval Reserve men a joyful cruise. A river that rushes in tumultuous strength to help lift a falling, sullied spectacle to gladden the eyes of man—and then down peacefully to the sea. These things, and virtually these things alone, make and preserve the boundary line between the United States and the Dominion of Canada—a line between three and four thousand miles in length which denotes the two most powerful political entities of the Western Hemisphere.

The situation which permits the existence of both a 3,000-mile boundary between the great and powerful sister is without parallel in the history of nations and national boundaries. It is the greatest living object lesson in the virtue of disarmament that could be furnished an war-weary world. And it has cost about 50¢ as the result of the diplomatic skill of far-visioned statesmen, but in the continuing friendship of two fine neighbors, each striving to work out his own problems and his own prosperity on his own side of the line.

It took a constitutional amendment and a Volstead Act to rediscover, after a fashion fashion, the existence of the boundary between Canada and the United States. It took a Hohenzollern statesman to unfold to the world the story of an unarmed and strifeless border, a border without a fort or garrison along a rich and far-flung line of almost four thousand miles! And it was a shock to the sensitive souls of the European diplomats, who inquired into the situation, to learn that it had just happened.

Discussion of the situation brought recognition of the Rush-Bagot agreement, a mere exchange of diplomatic notes between the governments of Canada and the United States in 1817 by which each government agreed to restrict armament on the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence River to four vessels of not more than 100 tons' burden each and each carrying not more than one eighteen-pound gun.

This last agreement, terminable on six months' notice, has not been disturbed in 104 years. There is no reason to believe that it could not endure in its present state for a thousand years or more to come.

But now appears in Washington a proposal from Premier McKenzie King of Canada that it accompany and make permanent the Rush-Bagot agreement. It is presented to Secretary of State Hughes by the Canadian Minister of Defense, George P. Graham, and is thoroughly reasoned.

There is no reason why the Rush-Bagot agreement should not take permanent treaty form. A treaty represents a state of mind of a nation, and the state of mind which makes the United States and Canada friends and neighbors is one that will endure, with or without treaty form. The suggestion of a permanent treaty would serve the purpose of an example to the world. And that alone is good and sufficient reason for the step.

Let the United States and Canada continue to give proof that a boundary line should not be a barrier, but a friendly and commercial space where the neighbors may meet, and sit on the top rail, with their legs hanging on either side, and swap the news and gossip of the day in neighborly manner—in the generosity of men.

THE CALL OF THE WILD

There is something in the subconsciousness of the individual that turns at the end of every fifty weeks. Mental faculties are forgotten of days-to-get business, and the psychic watch is insistent over the aromatic odor of pine. In other words, it is the vacation season, and brisker the rich not sympathies for the toiling patriots who are spending the summer months in a highland hunt for vocal are indicated to drive away the insistent urge to be somewhere other than that place where we are "at."

It is the season of the year wherein the industrial parasite who toil laboriously of wealth and futures and pelf and other nuts and nuts and call and bargain and all the rest of the jargon of business are diverted rather than sought. The tired executive man with a five-weeks' vacation staring him in the face is like interested in foreign exchange than he is in a road map to a railroad scheduled.

Perfectly sensible and consistent is his job and his home for half a hundred weeks is suddenly talks stale and flat as vacation time approaches. After all, the urge is primal. It is the call of the wild to the children of nature and, even if the "wild" resolves itself into a fifty-dollar vacation hotel, it is at least a change. There are many spots to see; unfamiliar scenery to be considered at and strange people to shoot and convince.

California is wonderfully diverse in its vacation cities. The rock-bottom has shrunk over whatever mountains with visits of scenic land, the story book of the universe may be opened from impressive heights or anyone else to adapt to a pleasing object. Then the majority of the state are to be seeking in more cheap money a thousand-mile short line of perpetual beauty. Those mountains are said to lend themselves to recuperation under elevation upon those it might take at other times.

Once there was a Los Angeles man who went to San Francisco to spend his vacation, but that history has now been made and is not likely to be repeated. The call of the wild does not come from the busy marts of trade, by the cool water in city hall. Seventh and Broadway or Market and Kearney offer little to the stirrer after the true joys of vacation. The sweet notes of the whippoor-will echoing through the woods and lulling to sleep the wooer of nature is he rolls from rock to rock; or the soft roar of the breakers at their boom their ancient story to the listening sands; the sight of kids placid or the roll of the sea; the kick of the fish hook as it hits a gambling at kelpy depths; the smell of fish, of camp fire, of the open; the sense of relief from all the cares and tribulations of the other 351 days of the year. These are the things which appeal to the vacationist.

A vacation is a good thing. It is a good thing even if the youngest tries to unpack away in the upper berth of a plush-covered Pullman with a child, dressed in dark red, if it is good thing, even though reduced to an idiotic plaything box in an outside room. Man is a creature of change. Away back yonder, and even after talk went out, he started with the seasons and his home at other seasons, the deserted village of tomorrow. Now, of course, he stays put more or less, but the annual vacation is a wonderful safety valve. Employers have found that it is a good investment from a strictly economic standpoint to break the year's routine and, though the wanderer returns to the cold brute and subdued; and though the master minds in all occupations have found him idle, and even though the old tired hand drops and dies on a narrow road half-seven miles from a garage, still do say that vacations are wonderful rejuvenators and that the "wise" knows what it is talking about when it calls.

HANDS OFF

With the full force of a Presidential proclamation behind the declaration that idle who choose to accept employment have the same indisputable right to work that others have to abstain from work. Like him they must be protected and protected in this right.

Arbitration has been provided for to make possible the settlement of virtually every dispute that may arise between employer and employed. It may not always be effective, but it is there. Where it is not effective there only remains the fact of the relation between the worker and the employer and this must be accomplished without violence. Touching this matter President Harding proclaims as follows: "The peaceful settlement of controversies is nevertheless with love and due respect for the established agencies for such settlement are essential to the security and well-being of our people."

The government will sustain this contention to the uttermost, for the President expressly stipulates that it maintain the supremacy of the law is the first obligation of the government as well as of the citizenship of the country.

So far as the administration is concerned there can be no interference by strikers with the mails or with interstate commerce. The strikers themselves are left to be at fabulous expense establishing anarchy. The United States Labor Board is held to be a responsible division of the National government and organized labor appeals its decisions to a tribunal of administrative authority. Any man may desert his job as an individual, but he cannot endanger the rights of the public or of the individual who takes his place. The administration intends to make this fact plain to all the people. To begin with there shall be no obstruction of the United States mails.

THE FEATHERED FLOCKS

It is averred that we think about a quarter among the birds. Birds of a feather are not flocking together in their stereotyped multitude of number and over the dirty bird comes out forth after his worm. There are even educated daughter of our civilized friends in some parts of the world and changed conditions have made life difficult for them in others. First thing we know there will not be enough carrion for our flocks or raven enough to rave over. The National Association of Audubon Societies is seriously disturbed over the situation and is striving to found a world agreement for the protection of certain feathered favorites. The head of the organization has just returned from a conference with kindred minds in England and France and it is proposed to form an international commission or world's bodyguard for birds. For one thing it would stimulate national consideration for those birds of recognized value. There might be better protection for certain game birds and safety zones for songsters. Over in Holland they are complaining about roaming out of storks. If there should be a dearth of storks the world would be in horrible shape. Here is something to worry about already. The point is to demonstrate that the birds are not without their friends. They are not to be butchered to adorn a siren's bonnet nor given to indiscriminate massacre in the name of sport. Ocean steamers which turn oil frequently over the waters for miles with their waste. This is said to cause the death of thousands of the fowl. Most of these feathery tragedies are unnecessary. With an international conference some humane regulations might be made possible and the whole universe be made more restful and genial for our feathered friends.

The Friendliest Fence in the World

TWO MINUTES OF OPTIMISM

BY BRUNAM J. STICE

Happy Dicks

It was said of a famous man who died recently that, though he might be forgotten, his work would always live, and the reason for it was that he put into his efforts his heart's blood.

This sounded a dream I read years ago: a dream beautiful, yet thought-provoking; fanciful, yet true to the multiplicities of life. I made a note of it at the time and am reproducing it faithfully.

There was an artist who painted pictures. Other artists had waters richer and rarer and painted more notable pictures. He painted his with odd color. There was a wholesome red glow on it, and the people used to look up and down, shrink and say: "We like the glow."

The other artists heard and said, "Where does he get his color from?" They asked him, and he replied and said, "I blend all red." And he worked on with his head down to his canvas.

One artist went to the Far East and secured costly pigments with which to make a rare color and painted; but after a time the pigments faded. Another used old masterpieces and undermined another; burnished with which he made a paler red and rare; but when he had put it on the picture it was black.

But the artist painted on. Always the work got redder and redder. And as time passed the artist became quite old and poor. At last, God said they loved him and called his pictures and they took him up to bury him. The other artists gathered in all his pots and brushes; but they found nothing they had won.

And when they undressed him to shroud him in his best robes reading clothes they discovered there his left breast the dart of a woman—it was all old, old wound. That night have been there all his life, for the edges were red and hardened. But death, the acids all thirst, had drawn the edges together and closed it up.

So they buried him. And still the people went about saying, "Where did he find his color?"

And it came to pass that after a while the artist was forgotten—but his work lived.

CHANGE OF CARE

I had a child, oh, lately was I until fate after fate, that with an engine sort of child it teetered in its way. There was no child it wouldn't climb, no mischief despise its gait; it always got me there on time when I would keep a date. But auto salesmen said for me that spurred my ambient vim: "It is a grievous sight to see you drive that shoe-fly! Let's sell you then. Better cost, with pretty slender curves and drive on highway, you will find, is fleet as the chariot. Be wild," they said, "and buy a car." I used a stale one then, my friends, with pep like seltersport, who drove me great a rate." I have a stale one now, my friends, worth going miles to see, but every page and time it needs some kind of fixin' or other. Oh, fidelities and fads and fickle ways of men! Oh, my friends and foes, and what is to-day or speed, I'd change! I always drive the plant. Whatever rinktum I may touch, it's always a mistake, and when I try to push the clutch I jam down on the brake. I ask my old but bolted by cost said: "Alas! Alack! I'd give a million if the day to have that tumbril back!" So my friends' auto daily jeers, I like, and sometimes two; old cars, old shoes, old pals and friends are better than the new.

WOMEN IN POLITICS

BY ALMA WHITAKER

Well, we are up to our necks in politics just now, very timeless home politics, the kind we specially handed to "clean up" when we were on the upside looking at.

We don't seem to have done much cleaning up as yet—in fact, all the best brushes seemed to have adopted it to help a few pictures in the hall and stairs a few baby draperies—a house that is crying out for washes of water, soap and scrubbing brushes.

Of course, we could fall in objected to brushing the white satin shirts of parties into waterwhite lines over night, but we have had a little experience now. We might at least begin to get results, even though of women's suffrage in Baltimore—but what constitutes an election we have hitherto?

There is one very pronounced achievement that can be claimed by the registering electorate feel about. They have come to be in the campaigns and politics, conscientious. SAVE THE DOUGH

President Harding urges his department heads to use the pruning knife on making up their estimates for the budget. He might go further and inhibit it using the ax on some of them.

SPEED IN THE AIR

An Englishman has made an airplane which carries an engine that the inventor insists will give him a speed capacity of 600 miles an hour. Up or down? Usually the greatest speed of these marvels is made when they drop.

THE NIGHT LIFE

With a mattar of twenty-four burglaries reported in one night it is evident that Los Angeles does not shrink in the presence of such cities as New York and Chicago. We doubt if Philadelphia can indict any greater industry on the part of her skilled crooks.

GOOD LUCKY

Millionaire Stokes paid $100,000 for attorneys' fees in his divorce case and the income-tax collector listed the item of payment as a luxury. The lawyer testified that it was a necessity, all right enough, and the classification was removed. It seems that a divorce is a luxurious necessity.

SYMPATHETIC STRIKES

Workers in China are inaugurating sympathetic strikes in order to indicate their attitude toward the particular revolution with which they happen to be momentarily concerned. The patriot may not take up arms, but he can at least lay down his monkey wrench. The Chinese have inherited a lot of things through their contact with the Occident.

TRYING IT OUT

They are going to have a test case in the court over the sale of hops and other home-brew ingredients. It is claimed that the stuff is outlawed and may not be sold to honest burghers. Consequently several of the dispensaries have been closed at the proprietors' hands. A test case will be made by the Blue Ribbon Beverage Company. If blue-ribbon beverages cannot be made without having the cops snooping around, there is our bosom friend?

ON THE JOB

The coal operators have accepted the tenders of governmental assistance in disposing of the coal strike. The President cannot go into the mines and shovel coal, but he expects that somebody will do it. The Secretary of Labor, who was once a union miner himself, says that the people need coal and, by heaven, they shall have it. He is quite capable of using a pick to prove it. It remains now to be seen whether the workers will meet the mine owners on any terms at all.

KNOCKING THE VILLAIN

The Spanish papers are registering remonstrance against American films that insult the Latin-American peoples. They say that they have been fed up with Mexican villains and are wearying of plays in which the Spaniard is either a desperado or a debauchee. They should worry. The films have no favorites so far as villains are concerned. They play 'em all. They put more of them out of Wall street or the Bowery than they do out of all the country south of the Rio Grande. We have even had a lot of pictures with Spanish heroes and heroines. We aim to please and we feel that there is no just kick coming. Our villains may not be natural, but they are not designed to excite racial animosities.

THEN AND NOW

When Harding was in the Senate and the measure creating the Railway Labor Board was being considered Senator Harding favored a section which would make strikes unlawful and provided a proper penalty. The section was not incorporated and the present law is weak in that it does not provide ample penalty for violation of rules laid down by the board. The country, however, will know exactly where the administration stands. President Harding will back the Labor Board as readily as he would as Senator Harding. The strikers need make no mistake about that. A strike against the findings of the United States Railway Labor Board is a strike against the United States government and will be so considered.

ONE EVERY MINUTE

Advices from Scotland Yard are to the effect that America furnishes the world's greatest visible supply of suckers. Most of these come to Europe in the guise of tourists, but they furnish good fun all the same overseas. It must be embarrassing for a traveling New Yorker to be pushed into the sucker class, but the judgment of Scotland Yard is that that is where he belongs. He falls for a lot of things that even a Nebraska would pass by. The average citizen of Gotham feels that the wisdom of the world is found on Broadway and that he can take it with him. Then he goes over to London and pays an interest in Westminster Abbey or accepts the trust of distributing some stranger's wealth with the same balmy innocence as is indicated by the child of the prune belt. America is keeping Europe alive and smiling without really knowing it.

THE NEIGHBORLY LINE

A scattering line of surveyor's stones, weather-beaten and almost lost to view. Two or three toy ships, armed with saluting guns, which rarely leave their anchor-buoys on the Great Lakes except to give the naval reserve men a joyful cruise. A river that rushes in tumultuous strength to leap into a falls—a sublime spectacle to gladden the eyes of man—and then flows peacefully to the sea. These things, and virtually these things alone, make and preserve the boundary line between the United States and the Dominion of Canada—a line between three and four thousand miles in length which demarks the two most powerful political entities of the Western Hemisphere.

The situation which permits the existence of such a phantom boundary between two great and powerful states is without parallel in the history of nations and national boundaries. It is the greatest living object lesson in the virtue of disarmament that could be furnished to a war-weary world. And it has come about, not as the result of the diplomatic skill of far-visioned statesmen, but in the continuing friendship of two fine neighbors, each content to work out his own problems and his own prosperity on his own side of the line.

It took a constitutional amendment and a Volstead Act to rediscover, after a fumshoe fashion, the existence of the boundary between Canada and the United States. It took a disarmament conference to unfold to the world the story of an unarmed and strifeless border, a border without a fort or garrison along a rich and far-flung line of almost four thousand miles! And it was a shock to the sensitive souls of the European diplomats, who inquired into the situation, to learn that it had just happened.

Discussion of the situation brought reference to the half-forgotten so-called Rush-Bagot agreement, a mere exchange of diplomatic notes between the governments of Canada and the United States in 1817 by which each government agreed to restrict armament on the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence River to four vessels of not more than 100 tons' burden each and each carrying not more than one eighteen-pound gun.

This tacit agreement, terminable on six months' notice, has not been disturbed in 105 years. There is no reason to believe that it could not endure in its present state for a thousand years or more to come.

But now appears in Washington a proposal from Premier McKenzie King of Canada to modernize and make permanent the Rush-Bagot agreement. It is presented to Secretary of State Hughes by the Canadian Minister of Defense, George P. Graham, and is hospitably received.

There is no reason why the Rush-Bagot agreement should not take permanent treaty form. A treaty represents a state of mind of a nation, and the state of mind which makes the United States and Canada friends and neighbors is one that will endure, with or without treaty form. The negotiation of a permanent treaty would serve the purpose of an example to the world. And that alone is good and sufficient reason for the step.

Let the United States and Canada continue to give proof that a boundary line should not be a barrier, but a friendly and comfortable fence where the neighbors may meet and sit on the top rail, with their legs hanging on either side, and swap the news and gossip of the day in neighborly fashion—in the fellowship of man.

THE CALL OF THE WILD

There is something in the subconsciousness of the individual that balks at the end of every fifty weeks. Mental pictures are formed of wave-swept beaches, and the psychic nostril is assailed with the dramatic odor of pine. In other words, it is the vacation season, and strikes nor riots nor sympathies for the toiling patriots who are spending the summer months in a big-game hunt for votes are sufficient to drive away the insistent urge to be somewhere other than that place where we are "at."

It is the season of the year wherein the theatrical persons who talk learnedly of trends and futures and bids and offers and puts and calls and margins and all the rest of the jargon of business are shattered rather than taught. The tired business man with a two weeks' vacation staring him in the face is less interested in foreign exchange than he is in a road map or a railroad schedule.

Perfectly satisfied and contented in his job and his home for half a hundred weeks he suddenly falls stark mad flat as vacation time approaches. After all, the urge is primal. It is the call of the wild to the children of nature and, even if the "wild" resolves itself into a summer-resort hotel, it is at least a change. There are new sights to see; unfamiliar scenery to be wondered at and strange people to meet and convince.

California is wonderfully favored in its vacation sites. The road-builder has stared our mighty mountains with trails of concrete and the story book of the universe may be conned from impressive heights by anyone able to cling to a steering wheel, while the mystery of the tides are to be studied at close range along a thousand-mile coast line of perpetual beauty. These mysteries are said to lead themselves to consideration more definitely upon moonlit nights than at other times.

Once there was a Los Angeles man who went to San Francisco to spend his vacation, but that history has now been made and is not likely to be repeated. The call of the wild does not come from the busy marts of trade, be the call never so strident. Seventh and Broadway or Market and Kearney offer little to the seeker after the true joys of vacation. The sweet notes of the whip-poor-will echoing through the woods and lulling to sleep the wooer of nature as he rolls from rock to rock; or the dull roar of the breakers as they boom their endless story to the shifting sands; the feel of high places or the roll of the sea; the honk of the auto horn as it barks a greeting at hardy wayfarers in some far-off corner of the State; the sense of freedom and liberation from all the cares and tribulations of the other 351 days of the year. These are the things which appeal to the vacationist.

A vacation is a good thing. It is a good thing even if the restless takes it there's away in the upper berth of a plush-covered Pullman with a cinder parked in each eye. It is a good thing, even though reduced to an inside sleeping box in an outside resort. Man is a creature of change. Away back yonder, and soon after tails went out, he moved with the seasons and his home of today became the deserted village of tomorrow. Now, of course, he stays put more or less, but the annual vacation is a wonderful safety valve. Employers have found that it is a good investment from a strictly economic standpoint to break the year's routine and, though the wanderer returns to the fold broke and sunburned; and though the master minds in all mosquitodom have found him tonic, and even though the old tires laid down and died on a narrow road forty-seven miles from a garage, still we say that vacations are wonderful rejuvenators and that the "wild" knows what it is talking about when it calls.

HANDS OFF

With the full force of a Presidential proclamation comes the declaration that men who choose to accept employment have the same indisputable right to work that others have to decline work. Like wise they must be preserved and protected in that right.

Arbitration has been provided or is made possible for the settlement of virtually every dispute that may arise between employer and employee. It may not always be effective, but it is there. Where it is not effective there only remains the dissolution of the relation between the worker and the employer and this must be accomplished without violence. Touching this matter President Harding proclaims as follows: "The peaceful settlement of controversies in accordance with law and due respect for the established agencies for such settlement are essential to the security and well-being of our people."

The government will sustain this contention to the uttermost, for the President expressly stipulates that it maintain the supremacy of the law is the first obligation of the government as well as of the citizenship of the country.

So far as the administration is concerned there can be no interference by strikers with the mails or with interstate commerce. The strikers themselves are held to be at rebellion against established authority. The United States Labor Board is held to be a responsible division of the national government and organized revolt against its decisions is a defiance of administrative authority. Any man may desert his job as an individual, but he cannot endanger the rights of the public or of the individual who takes his place. The administration intends to make this fact plain to all the people. To begin with, there shall be no obstruction of the United States mails.

THE FEATHERED FLOCKS

It is averred that we touch upon a possible famine in birds. Birds of a feather are not flocking together in their afore-time amplitude of number and even the early bird comes not forth after his worm. There has been wholesale slaughter of our winged friends in some parts of the world and changed conditions have made life difficult for them in others. First thing we know there will not be enough cuckoos for our clocks or ravens enough to rave over. The National Association of Audubon Societies is seriously disturbed over the situation and is striving to reach a world agreement for the protection of certain feathered favorites. The head of the organization has just returned from a conference with kindred minds in England and France and it is proposed to form an international commission or world's bodyguard for birds. For one thing it would stimulate national consideration for some birds of recognized value. There might be better protection for certain game birds and safety zones for songsters. Over in Holland they are complaining about running out of storks. If there should be a dearth of storks the world would be in horrible shape. Here is something to worry about already. The point is to demonstrate that the birds are not without their friends. They are not to be butchered to adorn a siren's bonnet nor given to miscellaneous massacre in the name of sport. Ocean steamers which burn oil frequently cover the waters for miles with their waste. This is said to cause the death of thousands of sea fowl. Most of these feathery tragedies are unnecessary. With an international conference some humane regulations might be made possible and the whole universe be made more restful and festful for our feathered friends.

The Friendliest Fence in the World

BY BELMAN J. STICK

Heart's Blood

It was said of a famous man who died recently that, though he might be forgotten, his work would always live; and the reason for it was that he put into his efforts his heart's blood.

This recalled a dream I read years ago: a dream beautiful, yet thought-provoking; fanciful, yet true as the multiplication table. I made a note of it at the time and am reproducing it faithfully.

There was an artist who painted pictures. Other artists had colors richer and rarer and painted more notable pictures. He painted his with one color, there was a wonderful red glow on it; and the people went up and down, saying, "We like the picture, we like the glow."

The other artists came and said, "Where does he get his color from?" They asked him; and he smiled and said, "I cannot tell you." And he worked on with his head bent to his canvas.

One artist went to the Far East and bought costly pigments with which he made a rare color and painted; but after a time the picture faded. Another read old manuscripts and unearthed ancient formulas with which he made a color rich and rare; but when he had put it on the picture it was dead.

But the artist painted on. Always the work got redder and redder. And as time passed the artist became paler and paler. Till, at last, one day they found him dead before his pictures and they took him up to bury him. The other artists snapshot in all his pots and crucibles; but they found nothing they had not.

And when they undressed him to decently dress him in his final resting clothes they discovered above his left breast the mark of a wound—it was an old, old wound, that must have been there all his life, for the edges were old and hardened but death, who seals all things, had drawn the edges together and closed it up.

So they buried him. And still the people went about saying, "Where did he find his color?"

And it came to pass that after a while the artist was forgotten—but his work lived.

CHANGE OF CARS

I had a good, old, honest bus I used day after day, and with no foolish sort of fuss it teetered on its way. There was no hill it wouldn't climb, no mudhole clogged its gait; it always got me there on time when I would keep a date. But auto salesmen laid for me and jeered my ancient van; "It is a grievous sight to see you drive this also-ran! Let's sell you, then, a better boat, with every modern curve, and down the highway you will float in state, as you deserve. Be wise," they said, "this bus reject. A modern one obtain; no man can keep his self-respect who drives so punk a vain." I have a new one now, my friends, worth going miles to see, but every passing hour it lends some kind of grief to me. Oh, rickety old bus and doddard strange to cite my dreads and fears, and when to low- or speed I'd change I always strip the gears. Whatever rinkium I may touch it's always a mistake, and when I try to push the clutch I jam down on the brake. I see my old bus going by and wail, "Alas! Alack! I'd give a mansion in the sky to have that tumbril back!" So my brand auto daily lends a pang, and sometimes two; old cars, old shoes, old books and friends are better than the new.

WOMEN IN POLITICS

BY ALMA WHITAKER

Well, we are up to our necks in politics just now, very close to home politics, the kind we specifically intended to "clean up" when we were on the outside looking in.

We don't seem to have done much cleaning up as yet—in fact, all the best idealists among us have achieved is to hang a few pictures on the wall and arrange a few fancy draperies—it's a house that is crying out for buckets of water, mops and scrubbing brushes.

Of course, we could not be expected to transform the whole soiled fabric of politics into snow-white linen over night, but we have had a little experience now. We might at least begin to get results. Seven years of woman's suffrage in California—and what specifically do we consider we have achieved?

There is one very pronounced achievement that can be claimed by the traditional discarded politicians. They have won a good many of us over to their way of thinking. They have roped us in on the campaigns and slightly, occasionally, in on the spoils. George Horace Lorimer of the Saturday Evening Post says that the women voters have fooled the politicians, that we vote honestly upon our convictions—in short, that we are living up to those ideals which we express so valiantly and so beautifully from club platforms.

A good many of us are. We do hold those ideals, we do believe in them, but when it comes to practical application, getting down and working in the campaigns, applying them to definite candidates, definite measures and making the thing through like a holy crusade—well, it generally resolves itself into our single vote, conscientiously registered. The idealists among us don't like the dirty and turmoil of the campaigns, and, if we do get into them, are soon disgusted with the politicians, the job, the politicians of the whole game—the things we were out to cure.

So many of the idealistic women have tried the campaigns and retired from the struggle in disgust. Some few of them remained hoodwinked for quite a time, worked like Trojans for love and principles, let the professionals shove most of the work upon them, spent themselves, their money, their time, their devotion in causes they afterward found were just the same old humbug—which they had escaped so successfully to put over. Some of them never did find out.

And a good many of us fell right into the arms of the politicians. Those little confidential chats of the spoils did it. Why be in ardent amateur when it is so much more profitable to be an enthusiastic professional? Oh, they, too, work for their convictions—of course—but convictions can be so pleasantly modified under suitable temptations.

The arguments are so utterly plausible. Any amount of money being spent. Why shouldn't we be in on it? God can serve one's honest loyalty, even if one is paid for short time and labor. Why not?

Of course, there are some fanatical idealists out in the campaigns, too—but many of those are the guileless tools of the politicians, innocent warfarers in the paths of machine-made politics. Or do I imply that every woman who accepts a paid job in the campaigns is not sincere in the cause she espouses—the notable exceptions to this sincerity are known to all women. But the acceptance of pay does blunt independent opinion, does in some serious way belittle the value of the service rendered. Frankly, I hate to see nice women accepting paid jobs in campaign work, even while I recognize that of males of the sort it is worthy of pay. I feel that should be paid for and women earn the money as well as men.

But that isn't the kind of politics the women voters were going to reform. Many of those idealistic women, when they first got the vote, were going to reform politics. They have discovered that they are so wounded at the discovery, so hurt in their pride, so chagrined at their rude destruction of him that they are now distinctly holding aloof from all politics. They say they will vote against him—just register one individual vote—but when they were for him they worked to win votes by the thousand for him. There was a tremendous responsibility. But they are shirking it now—standing on the outside looking in.

So you see, the professional politicians are really winning all along the line. Women may register their individual vote for their convictions, but the best of them are not getting out and working for them. The professionals are working, working all the time. One individual vote is not enough for them, they roll them up by the thousand—and everyone nicely trained in the conventions he should subscribe to. In fact, it is the politicians who are fooling the women, not the women voters who are fooling the politicians. They have either cleverly roped us in on the old game—or they haven't. And when they haven't, it is but one vote. What they have it in hundreds and, alas, not necessarily the ideal vote for honest conviction, but rather for the most efficient machine. We have fallen for it, just as they thought we would—while fattening us into thinking we have been a real, elevating influence. Now we are too discouraged at the painful discovery to right the wrong we helped so lavishly to create.

HIDDEN POWERS; ITS CRITICS

BY JAMES OPPENHEIM

My Dear Mr. Oppenheim:

Do give us credit for some intelligence. While we haven't been much interested in Jung, we've all read Freud and Tridon and we were looking to you for something bigger and more advanced. In place of that you take us back to the psychoanalytic kindergarten and give us the ABC again. You seem to feel that we can't comprehend the terminology of psychoanalysis and you always give me the feeling that you are translating this into words of one syllable and reducing it into sugar pills for the unlettered mind. Dear Mr. Oppenheim, some of us have grown up, at least we have learned to walk. I've been disappointed that you haven't dealt more fully with the sex problem. My understanding is that that has been the heart and soul of psychoanalysis. You seem to pass it over.

A CLUBWOMAN.

This letter deserves an answer, by the way. "A Clubwoman" happens to be many club women. One friend told me: "Our club is divided into two camps: those who attack your articles, those who defend them." "Well," I said, "my articles aren't above criticism. Perhaps I have failed to make some of the points plain." She laughed. "That's just it. Too plain. They say the stuff is ABC both in style and in meaning."

Is this important? In a way, it isn't. A club that isn't divided into two camps is hardly a club. An enterprise which does not arouse an opposition lacks the vital spark. A democracy which does not contain snobs isn't a democracy.

An Englishwoman, a fine author, said to me: "You Americans say the upper-class English are snobbish; but for real snobs give me a certain class of Americans. I didn't know what the word snob meant until I came to America."

What is our snobbishness? William Dean Howells had none of it. He said: "Nothing in America is really worth while until it is for all the people." William James had none of it. He had the American passion, which is really the passion to share great things among all. It is no wonder that in this land we have seen the origin and development of the telephone, phonograph, kinetoscope, wireless telegraph, public school, Carnegie libraries, automobile, the typewriter, the department store and radio. What do these things mean? Bring all to the people.

The brother of William James was a snob. Henry James went to England and, while William James took those keys of hotel, philosophy and psychology, and gave them a lordly liberation and simplicity, Henry James wrote novels for American brows. His readers can say: "Genius, perhaps, but—there's more in it than meets the eye." Is there not something of this in our browning clubs?

I do not mean that simple writing is always possible. Many great writers simply cannot do it. We must take them as we find them. But there is an American snobbishness which misses the true greatness of our experiment in democracy. That greatness is this: Whatever is great and good in life must come at last to all the people. That is why the true American artist puts away his dear traditions at last, the love of special and kingly things, and creates for all. The people must have great art, great science, great philosophy, which they understand. Not the ABC statement—but the great meanings—put in the simplest of styles.

Luckily, in this case, the point is proved. Our clubwomen of the opposition say that the articles are "deep in style and meaning." Is it not logical that the greatest truths in America, the first public proclamation in America of the theory of the four types, is this ABC? It relates to one of the most profound discoveries of the twentieth century and something which is today understood by a mere handful. And will our clubwomen of the opposition kindly make clear to their clubs what is meant by the "teleological function"? You see, I use the technical term, so that they may think they are getting something. But the members on the other side of the house may guess some of my articles which deal with that discovery of equal importance with that of the types.

As I see it, we cannot have too simple a statement of psychoanalysis. Why is it that some of our best minds, trained in science and analysis, and even our analysts themselves, feel it necessary to go to Zurich to consult and study with Jung and his colleagues? Simply for the reason that the books on the subject are either obscure or misleading. Freud? A Zurich man has said: "Yes, Freud has the gold brick." He is a materialist, and the sexual theory makes a sensation. When he passes, then Jung." And where, pray, is there an explanation of Jung's theories, except in Jung's books? Those are dense, truly. Jung writes:

"What exists really is individual: that which is universal is existing psychologically, but being caused by the real existing similarities of individual things."

Is that plain? Well, it is great. A year's study by a trained mind would yield something profound.

As for Tridon? Well, that brings us to the sex problem. Tridon has a wide sale. So has Ford, for similar reasons. Unfortunately, a certain number of books labeled "psychoanalysis" indulge what might be called a moral scoundrelism. The moral snob says: "I am pure; I hold aloof from filth; but this, you see, is science, and I must keep up with the times." Is this, is there not a certain wallowing in respectable pornography?

ASSERT BRIBER HAS CONFESSED

Admits Attempted Bribery, Officials State

Government to Prosecute Bootleggers

Orsatti is Released Under Bond of $25,000

All bootleggers who have arranged for protection in the asserted bribery plot charged against Morris Orsatti, steamship agent, and J. R. Johnson, one-time Burns detective, are expected to be prosecuted, according to an announcement last night by Harold H. Dolley, prohibition agent in charge here.

Mr. Dolley said he was in possession of papers that were almost contracts between Orsatti and bootleggers who have no yet appeared in the bribery case. Also, the seven defendants, whose cases were dropped or modified by Mr. Dolley and the District Attorney's office so as to carry out the conspiracy far enough to get evidence, can be prosecuted for conspiracy, it is said. Officials yesterday announced that Johnson has confessed.

U. S. Commissioner Long yesterday issued new complaints for the seven men and one woman involved, who will be retried on the full charges against them or prosecuted for the first time in those cases where there was a dismissal or lack of prosecution. Mr. Dolley has announced that he holds a list of eighteen others that, he charges, sought aid from Orsatti. The prosecution charges that Dolley received $1700 from Johnson's and Orsatti's hands to fix cases of Italians charged with violating the dry law.

ORSATTI OUT ON BOND

While Orsatti promptly was released on the required $25,000 bond, the detective still was in jail last night, failing to raise that sum.

Johnson made his confession before Dep. Dist. U. S. Atty. Herron, and Mr. Dolley, it is said. It is materially the same as the narrative in Mr. Dolley's statement, although the detective said he had no notes of the transactions and his memory in some instances was hazy. Only on one point did his and the prohibition agent's narratives differ. Dolley had said Johnson promised an average of $2000 a month, while Johnson in his statement, said it was from $2000 to $3000 monthly, the Federal officer says.

The detective said he had been approached by Orsatti in the matter two or three weeks before he approached Dolley, according to the purported confession. Orsatti asked him if he knew Dolley and Johnson said he did, having worked with him when the prohibition agent was in the service of the Burns agency. He then proceeded to tell of his interviews and of passing money to Dolley. Johnson said his "cut" had been half of the amounts he gave Dolley; for example in the Weeks case which was dismissed, he gave Dolley $200 and got $100 in addition from Orsatti. He said that in some cases Orsatti had told him no money would be forthcoming until the bonds had been exonerated.

Johnson said he never had any dealings with the defendants, but always directly with Orsatti in the arrangements for dismissing—"springing" he called it—the cases or modifying the charges.

Johnson said he was making the confession voluntarily.

"I haven't anything to hold back in this matter at all," he said. "I have no object in so doing, and the best I can expect is personal consideration. I have got a wife and two babies, and my family is well. I have had many opportunities since I have been in the detective and police work to accept much larger sums of money than this, time and time again, and if there is any consideration that can be shown me in my behalf or my family's is all I would ask."

Veteran Wants Wife Declared Legally Dead

Emil C. Steffen yesterday filed suit in the Superior Court asking to have his wife, Tilly Steffen, declared legally dead. They were married, he sets forth, in Chicago in 1913, and two years later she left him. During the war, while in France, he had allotments made from his pay for her, but she could never be found, he further states, and he has never since been able to locate her.

COUNCIL INVITED TO NEW PHONE HOME

WORLD'S LARGEST SWITCHBOARD FORCES OFFICES TO NEW QUARTERS

The City Council yesterday accepted the invitation of the Southern California Telephone Company to attend the formal opening next Monday of its business office in the company's new ten-story building at 740 South Olive street. The space which has been used by the business office of the company in the telephone company's building at 714 South Olive street will be occupied by the largest single unit switchboard ever manufactured, having a capacity of 40,000 telephones, the letter to the council stated. The switchboard is a part of the company's $5,000,000 construction program for this year to increase its equipment and facilities to meet the needs of the growing city.

The telephone company's letter, which was signed by Manager B. S. Wright, pointed out that the company is now installing 290 new telephones each day, giving a net gain to the total list of subscribers, after deductions have been made for discontinuances, transfers, etc., of 142 new telephones each day. The net gain, the letter stated, was 2052 new telephones installed during April, 2214 during May and 3690 during June, and officials of the company said that these figures represented actual new telephones installed and did not include, as has been charged on the floor of the council, changes made of subscribers' telephones from manual to automatic instruments.

CITY OFFICIAL IS ARRESTED

Long Beach Authorities Scrutinize Past

Planning Board Secretary Says He Was Drunk

Enmeshed in Net Spread for Burglar

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

LONG BEACH, July 13.—The arrest shortly before daylight today of a prominent city official in connection with the attempted burglary of a fashionable east side home has furnished the people of Long Beach with a brand new sensation. The prisoner is Thomas J. Gibboney, reputed World War veteran and secretary of the Long Beach City Planning Commission.

Arraigned in police court this afternoon on a technical charge of intoxication, Gibboney was remanded until tomorrow to enter a plea to the charge. In the meantime local police will bend every effort to learn something of Gibboney's past before his advent in Long Beach three years ago. Although he has been connected with municipal affairs here for more than five years, police said today that little is known so far of his record before coming to this city. He will be dismissed from the city service, it was said today by Chief of Police McLennan.

CLAIMS WAR RECORD

Gibboney asserts he is a university graduate and engineer, and declares he saw service with the United States Army Air Service during the late war.

The City Planning Commission secretary was arrested by a squad of police headed by Chief McLennan, who responded to a burglary call from H. W. Dorsett, 1760 East Second street. Dorsett, discovering a man endeavoring to force an entrance into his home at an early hour this morning, raised his pistol and, aiming at the intruder outside a window which he was endeavoring to force open, pulled the trigger twice. The weapon failed to function and Dorsett called the police.

SPORTING CONTEST

Surrounding the entire block in which the Dorsett home is located, the police closed in on a man they saw running through a yard. The capture, the police say, proved to be Gibboney. In his flight, he had thrown away a bundle which later proved to contain a pair of gloves, a heavy spoke from an automobile wheel, and a white rag.

Gibboney told several conflicting stories to account for his presence in that neighborhood, police say. One was to the effect that he had been out with a married woman from Anaheim, and that when a man crossed the street, walking in their direction, the woman told him she feared it was her husband on her trail. Gibboney said he took to his heels to avoid an encounter with the enraged husband.

This afternoon he told the police that he had attended a party last night, and that he had several drinks, which made him unaccountable for his actions, police say.

EXAMINE MRS. McCLUNG

Woman Who Killed Neighbor to Be Given Sanity Test

Mrs. Helen McClung, who is charged with killing Margaret Hogan on June 13 in Boyle Heights because she believed Mrs. Hogan was putting a "black powder" in her mail box, was held to answer in Judge Avery's court yesterday on charges of murder.

Her bail was set at $50,000, and Angelo Kaufman immediately offered to put it up for her, but Deputy Dist.-Atty. Ritt objected to releasing the woman, declaring her to be permanently insane. Mrs. McClung's attorney, S. S. Hahn, held that she was only temporarily insane.

CHARGE TICKET FRAUD

Fugitive's Plea to Bring Brother to American Fails

How the hopes of Dr. and Mrs. A. M. Rosenbaum to see the physician's brother from Poland were blasted when they learned that the $400 they had paid out for a ticket to this country for him was misleading, was told yesterday in Justice Pelletier's court at the hearing of Max Wasmer. The case against the defendant was dismissed when it was shown that he was acting merely as the agent of Theodore Repay, head of the Foreign Service Company, and now in the County Jail on other charges.

After the case was dismissed, Deputy Dist.-Atty. McDaniel stated that he would cause a new complaint to be filed against both Wasmer and Repay.

Benjamin H. Hancock, aged 2, who was run down and killed by an automobile at Huntington Park on the 10th inst., came to her death because of the inexperience as a driver of Mrs. J. P. Diet and Health

I, I, I: I, MYSELF; I
THE HISTORY OF ME BY ME

CHAPTER XVII
My Prison

Last Friday I told you of a very painful experience I was undergoing and I know you are interested in my story so I shall continue and tell you more about it.

Don't you find the history of my life very exciting and intriguing? I know you do and I am glad for I think, myself, that there has never been a more enthralling or eventful life than mine. My story has one of the chief factors necessary for a best-seller—that is, lots of love interest.

It is love, for instance, that puts me in my predicament right now! If my family did not love me, they would not care whether or not my mouth grew out of shape, its tender roof getting pushed up and causing my nose less room, my breathing space thereby becoming narrowed; they wouldn't care if they didn't love me whether my teeth came in crooked, my adenoids and tonsils hyperthrophied (that means enlarge) so that I might not be able to get enough air through my nose passage and would become a mouth breather, and even my physical development might be retarded.

I told you about my being the most lovely and the most precious baby in the universe last week—I know it because my family tell me so—and how I began to suck my thumb and how even my precious Grammie, who usually thinks that everything I do is just right, how she did not even take my part in this matter.

Now, of course, I know why it was. It was because she loves me and wanted to save me from all of those dreadful things I have enumerated.

For all of those things can happen and do happen frequently if a baby is allowed to suck its fingers, or thumbs, or a pacifier. My doctor says so.

Oh yes, and I forgot to state that the fingers or thumbs may also become deformed from prolonged sucking, and that the habit of thumb or finger sucking may extend into childhood and make a child terribly nervous and retarded, not to say conspicuous!

So you see, I don't mind being imprisoned any more—I mean having my arms imprisoned so I can not get my thumb to my mouth.

I want to tell you that I really did not intend to suck my thumb. I really tried very hard not to do it when I found that it was bad for me, but I could not seem to remember, especially when I was tired and sleepy. My thumb would just naturally seek my mouth and slip in. How thankful I am that my beloved ones loved me enough to make me suffer a little now, in order to prevent me from suffering a great deal later.

That is what is nice about relative, dear relatives.

Well, I must tell you what is being done for me to make my thumb behave! Doctor told my Cherie how to make a little splint for my elbows so that I could move my arms freely about and have full use of my hands except the use of getting them to my beautiful mouth. You can get aluminum mittens shaped like a globe to put little hands in, but we think this method is the best.

Arm Splint

Mother made four splints like this: She took a piece of white cloth, 10 inches by 16 inches, folded it over so that it was 10 by 8, then stitched it crosswise and on the ends so that two inch-wide compartments were made. She left the long side open so that two or three flat little pieces of wood could be slipped in. Doctor gave her some of the wooden tongue depressers that you can get in any drug store. These can be taken out when the cases are washed. If you cannot get the tongue depressers, you could use a wide piece of cardboard by not stitching except on the edges.

On one of the short ends she sewed two sets of double tapes. The long open side is folded back to keep the sticks from coming out. These splints are wrapped around my elbows and tied, and two stout safety pins hold them to my sleeves so that they will not slip.

It is terribly embarrassing for me, for they are kept on night and day and it looks as though I had no will power, but I know you will realize that I could not have much at this stage of my life.

Au revoir, my Friends. Hope when I meet you again I will be a free man.

Household Suggestions

For the Midnight Lunch

Slightly Different

A pleasant change may be made by adding three tablespoonfuls of cracker crumbs when making an omelet.

Uneven Pudding

If the chocolate flakes in a cornstarch pudding beat the mixture thoroughly with an egg-beater while it is still in the double-boiler. It will then cream together.

Oilcloth Doilies

Cut a piece of oilcloth the size of a small doily and place it under the centerpiece on which your house plant stands. Then your table is protected from the moisture.

Clean Spinach

Always have clean boiling water on hand at the time the spinach is served. Place the spinach in a colander and pour over it the boiling water. Then put it back on the stove and add a lump of butter and seasoning and let it heat through. This method will loosen any obstinate sand that may have lodged in the leaves.

To Clean Mica Shades

When the mica lining of your candle shades becomes smoked, rub it with a cloth wet with a solution of vinegar and water.

The Garden Hose.

If you find tiny leaks in the garden hose, paint it on the outside with pliable roofing paint and it will last for another season.

Fresh Bread

Bread will stay fresh for a long time if it is sliced through the middle first, placing the cut ends together when returning to the breadbox.

A Shiny Tub

To obtain cleanliness along with a luster, wipe the bathtub out with a rag saturated with kerosene upon which has been spread a layer of salt. Then rinse the tub with warm soapy water.

The Housewife's Scrapbook

Prick the skin of apples before baking them and they will not burst.

One cup of sugar will sweeten one quart of any mixture to be served cold or frozen.

"A place for everything and everything in its place" is a good slogan for any housekeeper.

If you want your fudge especially rich and light, beat whipped cream into it after you take it from the stove.

BROKER EXONERATED

Court Finds McDaniel Did Not Embezzle Money

Completely exonerating C. C. McDaniel, head of the C. C. McDaniel organization, a firm dealing in stocks, Justice Follette yesterday dismissed the charge of embezzlement against him.

Dep. Dist.-Atty. McDaniel presented testimony regarding a transaction relating to the sale of stock of the Seeley Pacific Glass Manufacturing Company, regarding an asserted embezzlement of $400, but the court held that there was no embezzlement.

"MUSTS" AND "MUST NOTS" OF FORMAL MEALS

I have received a letter from a reader of this column asking me to write about those laws governing formal luncheons, dinners and buffet meals, which, if disregarded, stamp the hostess as unfamiliar with table etiquette. The following laws, are, I believe, those most frequently broken:

The Formal Luncheon: Bisques and bouillons are the correct soups for luncheons and should be served in two-handed cups (the newest form is the two-handed cup which is very shallow and broad—known as a "cream soup cup.") The use of bouillon cups at dinner or of soup-plates at luncheon stamps the hostess as ill-informed. Roast beef or mutton may not be offered as the hearty course at luncheon; chops, croquettes, patties, birds or broiled chicken are correct. A formal luncheon may be started with a fruit course of berries, grapefruit or melon; or with a cocktail of mixed fruits; or with clams, crab-meat or oysters.

The Formal Dinner: A formal dinner of very great ceremony may consist of hors d'oeuvres, oysters on the half-shell, soup, fish, first entree, roast, second entree, sorbet, game with salad, sweets, ices, fruits and coffee. A slightly less ceremonious dinner may be served by changing this menu so that the second entree, sorbet, and game (one or all of these) are omitted and the salad served as an extra course without game. Or the fish and first entree may be combined in the form of a fish pate, croquette, or timbale with thick, white sauce. Similarly, the roast and game courses may be combined by serving roast guinea hen, capon, or turkey instead of mutton or beef. A simple formal dinner may consist of soup, roast with vegetables, a crisp salad, and a sweet dessert followed by coffee.

The Buffet Luncheon: This form of formal luncheon offers the hostess a solution of the problem of serving a larger number of guests than can be seated comfortably about a table. A buffet luncheon may include bouillon, one hot dish, one substantial cold dish (such as chicken or lobster salad) and sandwiches (or small, buttered rolls) a fancy dessert, (or mousse or ice in individual molds) and fancy cakes, hot coffee, and, if desired, a fruit punch. It will be noted that only foods which can be eaten with a fork or a spoon are included in the menu; for it is practically impossible to use a knife when balancing a plate precariously on one's lap.

A buffet meal on this order, but with fewer dishes, is also suitable for the collation at an afternoon or evening reception or dance. The dishes included in menu should all appear at one time on the table and buffet, the guests helping themselves or the gentlemen serving the ladies. A maid, or other helper, should be present to remove soiled plates, cups and silver, and to replenish the supplies.

Mrs. Gibson to Give Up Duties on Commission

Announcement was made yesterday of the resignation, as a member of the State Housing and Immigration Commission, of Mrs. Frank A. Gibson of 2201 Scarff street. Mrs. Gibson, who has been for many years a conspicuous figure in the civic and club activities of the city and State, gave as a reason for her retirement from the State office her inability to cope with the arduous duties of the position at this time. She is known to be deeply interested in the successful establishment of the Woman's Athletic Club of Los Angeles, of which she is first vice-president.

Mrs. Gibson was responsible for the establishment of an educational department which reached immigrants of factories, canneries and similar industrial lines. This department has since been taken over by the State Board of Education.

In accepting the resignation of Mrs. Gibson, Gov. Stephens, in a letter made public yesterday, expressed deep regret over her relinquishment of the office and paid high tribute to her efforts along lines of welfare work while a member of the commission.

Mrs. Gibson is the mother of Hugh Gibson, diplomat and author.

FAKE RAIDS CHARGED

Man Accused of Impersonating Dry Agent Gives Self Up

W. S. Jeffreys, charged with impersonating a Federal officer in connection with his dry raids in the beach cities last winter, gave himself up yesterday. The new indictment against him was returned Friday by the Federal grand jury. He was released under a bond he produced in March when he was held by U. S. Commissioner Long on a similar charge. Jeffreys was known as C. C. Nevins, Arthur Simpson, Henry Seay and other names. At the time of the previous arrest he denied the charge. A man arrested with him was not held.

June Rose Dancing Game

When the music starts, the players join hands and dance to the right until Rose-Heart claps hands, when they reverse, and dance to the left. Then at a second signal from the center player they stand still, holding arms high while Left Thorn dances in and out all around in pursuit of Right Thorn. If Right Thorn gets around once without being caught, he is safe, and goes to center with Rose-Heart, but if he is caught he becomes Left Thorn and the former Left Thorn goes to center.

That successful Thorn then dances to music with Rose-Heart all around the circle, and then Rose-Heart chooses a partner from the circle, and calls "Swing your partners." This is the signal for all in the circle to select partners, the victorious Thorn becoming Rose-Heart, and the unsuccessful one (now Left Thorn) remaining outside the circle until all but one odd player have found partners. The odd player then goes outside of the circle, as Right Thorn, directly opposite Left Thorn, and the dancing game begins again, this time with all the Petals as regular partners, until the next pursuit of Right Thorn by Left Thorn.

How Mary Became Popular

Mary Bowman (not her real name, but we will call her that) was a shy, sweet girl, but she was never very popular. It was not that she did not have a few real friends—she had those as every kind, gentle person has. But, Mary was seldom invited out. She had very few men friends, and when she went to a party she was more than apt to be a "wall flower." She was never the center of attention anywhere.

Now, the real reason why Mary was not a favorite was not really her fault, except indirectly. Mary was not pretty. She had a poor complexion. Her skin was oily and shiny and she made no effort to make herself attractive.

One evening, Mary went to a big party with her girl friends, and although she did not expect much attention, she was heartbroken when the boys danced with everyone of them, and not one danced with her the whole evening. That night she wept bitter tears. The next day she told her story to an older woman. Her friend said to her; "Mary, you, yourself, are to blame for not having a better time. Why don't you take care of yourself? Why don't you improve your complexion!" So she gave Mary simple instructions, which enabled her to improve her personal appearance.

Mary followed these instructions carefully, and the unexpected happened. People who never thought Mary homely could not help but notice the change. Mary blossomed forth into the prettiest and most attractive girl in her set, and, needless to say, one of the most popular. And what wouldn't, with the clear, white skin Mary now possessed! This is an unusual story, but what Mary can do, every girl or woman can also accomplish.

How You Can Improve Your Personal Appearance

It doesn't matter whether you possess the fair skin of a blonde, or whether yours be the olive skin of a brunette, for a complexion to be truly beautiful must be smooth and fine in texture and firm. Let a few pimples develop, or the pores become enlarged, and your skin is no longer pretty. Allow it to become shiny and oily, and its beauty is gone. The skin is like any other valuable possession, it must be cared for. It must be kept alive and awake.

How To Have A Pretty Skin

Too much cannot be said in favor of the nightly facial bath. The skin must be clean during sleep, for it is then that nature can best do its work. By day protect it, and at the same time make it lovely to look at. You will find Mrs. McCormick's Beauty Cream an instant beautifier, and a protection from the ravages of wind and the sun.

Mrs. McCormick's Beauty Cream should be applied when you would appear at your best. It is not a powder but a cream which will make even the worst skin pearly white. Apply it with a soft cloth first in cold water and smooth it on with a chamois before allowing the skin to dry. You will be surprised at the change it will make in your complexion.

If you like color use Mrs. McCormick's Beauty Rouge and Lip Stick. You will like the way they both blend with your own complexion.

Mrs. McCormick's Beauty Cream in flesh comes in two convenient sizes. 50c and $1.00. The Rouge 50c, the Soap 25c.

URGE SPEED ON PENSION AMENDMENT

Fireman and Policemen Await Court Decision on Time of Balloting

The Supreme Court of Appeal is scheduled to give a hearing this morning on the appeal of the firemen and policemen for a court order compelling the City Council to place their proposed pension charter amendments on the ballot at the state-county primaries on August 22. City Attorney Stephens will oppose the application of the firemen and policemen for the writ, and a favorable decision is contradictory to the provisions of the constitutional provision which forces the city to call special elections from time to time, at great expense, instead of submitting charter amendments for adoption at the next general elections at hand.

The City Council yesterday voted unanimously to support the action of Councilman Wheeler in asking the Council to petition the Supreme Court to issue a writ of mandate compelling the Council to submit the proposed amendments at the next primaries, instead of at a special election. Councilman Wheeler, in addressing the Council, declared that the expenditure of money during his remarks in connection with the proposed charter amendments would be unnecessary, and that the Council should not be influenced by "mere politics in Germany," and sponsored by Dr. John R. Haynes of Good Government Mayor Cryer called the attitude of Socialist—ga-dilliard "ridiculous."

Downey People Urge Connecting of Boulevards

Property interests met with the Downey Public Service Club last night at the home of the president, W. Meyerhoff, on West Fourth street, to discuss the advisability of a bond election to provide funds for the completion of Downey avenue, Lakewood boulevard and Paramount boulevard, all of which are in the vicinity of Downey. Several speakers addressed the meeting, all stressing the importance of the proposed improvements. It was announced that a petition would be circulated among property owners in the vicinity of Mr. Meyerhoff's home, and that a preliminary meeting would be held at the Downey Theater tonight to discuss the matter.

For canning fruits and vegetables, there are two very modern devices by which foods are never scorched or burned in cooking. One is the Pressure Cooker, of which it is truly said that it commences to pay for itself ten minutes after one begins to use it. Fruits and vegetables may be bought when the market is overstocked and prices are low, and canned quickly and inexpensively for future use. A demonstration of the Pressure Cooker will be given all next week at Robinson's.

The other method is the Lorraine Oven Heat Regulator which is part of the equipment of the New Process Gas Range. By means of the regulator an even temperature which neither gets lower or higher is maintained, while the foods, already placed in the jars, are being cooked in the oven.

All of these requisites for the canning season are available in the Basement.

People and Their Troubles

Elizabeth Jordan's Column:

AT THE CIRCUS

Yes, darlings, Aunt Mary will take you first to the tent where the animals are. No, Betty, of course the lions are not loose. They're in great, big, strong cages. They couldn't get out if they wanted to. They like to stay just where they are and have good little boys and girls look at them. Yes, darling, the tigers are in cages, too, just like the lions. Yes, the bears are in cages, just like the tigers. Betty, be quiet! Auntie has just told you that all the wild animals are in great, big, strong cages. Well, no, Georgie, that's so, the elephants aren't. Yes, the elephants are wild animals. But they have big chains on their legs so its the same thing. Georgie, be quiet. Of course, I don't mean the chains are the same as cages. I mean——

Betty, what is the matter with you? Stop howling this minute! Why the nice, kind, gentle elephant wouldn't hurt you for the world! He was just holding out his trunk hoping you would give him a peanut. See the little boy giving him a peanut! Betty, if you don't stop crying, I'll take you home.

THOSE THREE RINGS

Very well, then, we'll go right into the performance. No, Georgie, we can't stay with the animals. Little sister doesn't like them. She's freightened, and you know we never do anything that frightens little sister. No, Georgie, of course you can't stay here alone. If you don't stop snivveling Auntie will have to take you home. If we don't hurry we won't get good seats and you know we want to see the seal bouncing the ball on the tip of his nose, don't you? Yes, he's going to do it right away, and if you don't hurry and wipe your eyes you won't see him.

Here are three very nice seats. Georgie, they're splendid seats! No, Georgie, of course you aren't in front of all three rings—you can't be. But you are right in front of the biggest one. Yes, I think the seals will be in that one—George Parmenter, get into that seat this instant. Now, Betty, climb up. Of course you can. Auntie can't lift you, you're too heavy.

"M-y-y, Betty, just see the man balancing himself away up on the top of the pole. Yes, Georgie, he is up side down. No, Betty, Auntie couldn't do that. Yes, Georgie, the seals will come soon. Yes, Auntie sees the lady away up in the flying ring. See how fast she's going. Did you know she was holding on with her teeth. Georgie? Yes, they're very strong. No, they're not the kind you buy, they're her very own teeth. No, Betty, Auntie couldn't do that. No, Georgie, Auntie's teeth are—Hush! Yes, the seals will be here soon.

Why, there they come now! Yes, Georgie, Auntie's sorry they're going to be in the other ring, but she couldn't help it. See the big seal balance the ball on his nose! See him stand right up, on his tail while he does it! No, Betty, Auntie couldn't do that. Georgie, you can see perfectly. Sit right down and don't let me hear another word from you.

AUNTIE'S BUSY DAY

Yes, Auntie sees the elephant shaking the shimmy. No, Betty, Auntie couldn't do that. Georgie, Auntie doesn't know whether the elephant likes to do it. No, Betty darling, the elephant isn't looking at you at all. Yes, Georgie, I guess it's you he's looking at. No, dear, you can't go down into the ring and give him a peanut now. Yes, Betty, Auntie sees the man sliding all the way down from the roof on a tight-rope. No, darling, Auntie couldn't do that. Georgie, you can't have any of the lemonade! it might make you sick. Now don't argue, dear. Look at the trained pigs sliding down the long chute. No, Betty, Auntie couldn't do that. No, Betty, Auntie can't try it now.

Why, Mrs. Jones, is that you? And sitting just behind us? Are all those nice children yours? How splendid and how proud you must be! Yes, Betty, Auntie sees the lady jumping through the burning hoops. No, darling, Auntie couldn't do that. Georgie, of course you can't have any of that dirty-looking popcorn. Stop cabool,

LETTERS TO THE TIMES.

Vote By Mail

CHICAGO, June 30.—[To the Editor of The Times:] A few hundred votes are miscounted at an election and there is an outcry. A half million registered voters fail to record their preferences and there is scarcely a groan. Which evil defeats more the ends of good government?

In large cities, as a rule, only half the eligible citizens are ever registered. Therefore in important municipal elections sometimes only one-tenth the eligibles vote. The average citizen likes to vote, is proud to vote. Then why don't the total eligibles register and vote in each election? The polling place is the trouble—"too much trouble." Voting should be a pleasure, not a task.

The success in some States of "absent voting" by mail, in spite of its obstructive formula, may have helped inspire the recent spurt of interest in "entire elections by mail." But its real impetus will be found in two very divergent sources: (1) Enfranchised women's dislike of the polling place; (2) exasperated "vote" casting about for a referendum medium.

There is much in favor of a scientific mail method. It would make voting a pleasant, home affair, with no loss of work or time, weather of no account, and election costs cut in half. More effectively than compulsory voting it would bring into action the total eligibles and thus "bury" evil candidates and all likely frauds.

Highway Suggestions

LOS ANGELES, July 12.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I note in today's Times, plans for new highways and it has often occurred to me that we should place more roads to keep traffic out of our business district in Los Angeles, not bring more into it.

"I suggest a "Belt Route" or Circle Highway around Los Angeles instead of through it, starting at Van Nuys through the mountains to Sawtelle, then to Inglewood, Huntington Park, Belvedere, Alhambra, Pasadena, Glendale and oak to Van Nuys via Burbank. Most of the way is already paved, but this should be replaced with a grand boulevard, 200 feet wide, with trees, grass and shrubbery. In fact a circle trip of wonder and beauty.

People in San Fernando Valley could reach beaches without coming through Los Angeles proper, while the people in Pomona Valley and east of Alhambra could do the same.

This road will be built, must be built before many years. Why not do it now, when any land needed can be bought for less money, as very little of the plan crosses highly improved property.

Chicago is spending 200 millions for roads now. Let us do it now before we have two or three million population, and land values are much higher.

Denver has a wonderful system of boulevards encircling the city, and will be a great asset to its visitors. The values of a "circle or belt highway" for tourist travel would be immense.

I would also suggest a pavement or bridge over Los Angeles River from Broadway Bridge to Ninth street, to relieve traffic in wholesale district.

JOSEPH E. CALLAWAY.

Likes the Rides

LOS ANGELES, July 10.—[To the Editor of The Times:] In reply to the author of "Free Ride Salesmen," published in Sunday Times, would like to say what many tourists and newcomers think of this method of advertising. I have talked with many and the majority were much pleased with it, and wrote glowing accounts to their friends back home.

Many that came for the winter only decided after seeing so much of this beautiful country, to buy homes and stay.

We have so decided and I am sure the free rides the lady so deplores have been a great help in deciding where we wished to buy.

Not only have these trips been pleasant, but very instructive. We have been told of the wonderful growth, bits of history and many traditions of Los Angeles and vicinity.

The lady speaks of fleecing the simple-minded, how about friends? I am very sure that the majority of us are quite capable of taking care of ourselves.

These free excursions have done a great deal of advertising for Los Angeles. Let the good work go on.

MRS. CHARLOTTE KENNE.

Are Trouble-Makers

LOS ANGELES, July 11.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I have just read the letter from the "defeated mother-in-law" from Glendale and I would like to say a few things in reply. I am the mother of grown sons and I count among my friends, young girls who are wives of some of their men friends and I know to be a fact that mothers-in-law can make more hell in a home than any other one thing. I would not live with a daughter or son who was married unless I was helpless and penniless nor could they live with me.

I have had my husband's parents spend months in my home and they have upset everything, not intentionally but naturally, anyone outside of the immediate family would do the same for there is not freedom when some one is around listening to and seeing everything. It takes us days to smooth over a misunderstanding such as all couples have, that would be forgotten in a few minutes if we were alone to "kiss and make up." I know a dear woman who is a nervous wreck because her mother has lived with her for years and tries to run the whole family. "Freedom from the mother-in-law" is my motto.

TIMES READER.

Says Its Trickery

LOS ANGELES, July 9.—[To the Editor of The Times:] In regards to prohibition I believe I can tell you, and I think you know, why so many have no respect for the Volstead Act. You know how it was passed, etc., so I won't waste your time explaining, but the impression among many is that they used unfair methods to accomplish their ends. The fact is that we feel towards those who passed it as we do towards the gambler who deals from the bottom of the deck. They cheated.

I don't approve of the saloon and wish they could stop the use of whiskey, except for medicine, but even whisky is not so bad as a lot of stuff they are drinking.

You printed a letter today, written by a man named Darby, which ridiculed in a way, those advocating personal liberty, and which made it appear that they approved of the stuff that young Canfield was pulling off. This is supposed to be and should be—a government for all the people and ruled by majorities, but I was taught that a man's religion, or no religion, was a matter of choice, and that we had freedom of speech or belief so long as we don't interfere with the rights of others. No sane person would claim the right to endanger another's life or impose upon the honest belief or peace of other people.

I have read The Times, when I was where I could buy it, for a good many years and while I couldn't always agree with H. G. Otis I respect a man of his type because he was no hypocrite. He dealt his cards from the top of the deck. But with regard to your editorial of the 4th inst. don't you think The Times has preached class conscience?

LIKES ENGLAND

STAR SAYS ONLY TROUBLE IS NO JAZZ

By Grace Kingsley

If you have any spare roles which you want played in London, you might just hand them out to Mae Busch. Miss Busch is simply bubbling enthusiasm over the old town, which she has just visited. She went over with the Tourneur company to make scenes for "The Christian."

"The Isle of Man," was one of the interesting places visited, with Hall Caine's home the center of attraction. Then there were all the old historic places of London, which Miss Busch claims to have visited conscientiously. And, of course, in order to see everything there was to see she simply had ti visit a London ladies' bar and barmaid.

"'It is a new dance?' she inquired suspiciously, seeming to think she might be required to do a Highland fling. When he explained, she said, 'Oh, you mean a whisky and soda!'

"And just while we are on the subject of things wet, we were served with champagne going over on the boat, and without thinking I grabbed the bottle and put it under the table!"

The Englishmen are awfully nice, declares Miss Busch, but doesn't admit that any particular specimen ran away with her heart, although there was a particularly nice exception of artillery—

And speaking of the soldiers, she says one see the crippled ones about on the streets as peddlers, and that the populace are very generous with them.

But one thing she doesn't like about the English. There is no jazz.

"In fact there are no end of subscription and soldier aid fund things going on all the while," explained Miss Busch. "We got a big collection on board ship for the sailors' wives and children. In London, we managed a collection of 100£ for the hospitals.

"Mme. Anna Pavlowa went over with us on the same ship. She has twenty little Russian children in Paris who managed to escape from Bolshevism, whom she is caring for and educating. They are from all classes, these little ones, from royalty itself to peasants.

"We met Carlyle Blackwell, who is going over to Holland to make some pictures. He complained the Londoners are too slow, but I liked them.

"Everybody was always stopping for tea. Even at the Derby, everybody was having tea but the horses.

"But I don't like the English dancing. They have no spirit of jazz at all—are crazy about it, but just can't get it. So I'm glad to come home to do my dancing."

Miss Greenwood In Play

However you may feel about it, there isn't to be any addition to the "Letty" series which Charlotte Greenwood has been doing. Like the Pansy books, there's an end to them. The run of "Letty Pepper" completes the set.

Following Miss Greenwood's appearance in the Music Box Revue in New York, which is likely to last all summer and perhaps longer, she is to appear in a brand new play, under the management of Sam Harris.

"No, I don't know what it is to be, but I know one thing. It is to have some serious moments. I like people to know I have some soul beside the sole of my foot," explained Miss Greenwood. "Throughout the one-night stands I find that I'm considered funny in my most serious moments, and it gave me pause. I don't want to play 'Peg o' My Heart' or anything like that, but I should like to emote just a bit and give my arms and legs a few moments of well-earned rest."

Florence Roberts's Playlet

Following the run of Channing Pollock's new play, "The Fool," starring Richard Bennett at the Majestic, Frederick Vogeding, who has an important role, is to co-star with his wife, Florence Roberts, in a playlet to be produced on the Orpheum circuit and known as "A True Story."

Tully Tells It

You can believe it or not, but anyhow it makes a good story, and Richard Walton Tully claims he can show you the place where it happened, out on the "Omar the Tent Maker" set at United Studios.

The set was that being used as the dwelling of Omar's sweetheart, and thither came, the other day, a strange looking, swarthy individual, who loitered around with the manner of a man beset with a consuming but silent emotion. Mr. Tully asked him the purpose of his visit.

"There are," responded the man, "but six Mohammedans I know of in Los Angeles, and I have been here but little more than a year. Yet I am sad and homesick. If you will permit me to remain here I shall be happy. It seems like home to me."

And when the set was deserted, he knelt toward Mecca and prayed.

Violet Mersereau Home

Violet Mersereau and the company that has been making "The Shepherd King," abroad for William Fox, has returned to New York. With the exception of Miss Mersereau, who made a flying trip home last Christmas, the company has been in Europe more than a year. J. Gordon Edwards, the director, did not return, but has gone to Paris to confer with Mr. Fox.

COHAN FARCE AT PAS

Will King has arranged musical settings for the famous Cohan farce comedy, "Stop Thief," and will make that the musical comedy event of the coming week at Pantages. The vaudeville section will be exclusively comedy, with Clinton and Cappel, singing comedians; LaFrance and Byron in blackface; the Four Byron Girls in various shades of tan, and Will Morris, the nut bicyclist. In contrast to this program will be the cinema attraction, a serious photo-drama, "The Bigamist," from the novel of the same name, with Ivy Duke the featured player.

Writes Comedy for Dalton's Leading Woman

A brand new play is being written for Katharyn Hammond, leading woman at Dalton's Broadway, by Waldo Twitchell, who is at present assisting Allan Dwan in the direction of the Douglas Fairbanks production of "Robin Hood."

Mr. Twitchell is the author of "Up in the Air," a play which had a successful run on this coast not long ago, and is also known as a short-story writer.

When questioned about the nature of this play, Miss Hammond replied that it is to be called "Daisy O'Dea," and that it will be comedy. Also that Mr. Twitchell hopes to have his first draught completed in two or three weeks.

Beyond this Miss Hammond refused to commit herself, except to say emphatically that her role in the new comedy will not be of the "sweet" variety.

"I've played a lot of these patient, long-suffering parts," said she, "and now I'm looking for something a little more human. Being a heroine is a serious business at best, but if you have to be spreading sunshine continually, the job becomes ghastly. This 'Daisy O'Dea' part will have both light and shade, and from what I've seen of it I think it's also going to be clever."

Miss Hammond also expressed a hope that it will be possible to try out "Daisy O'Dea" in Los Angeles in the near future.

FRENCH PROGRAM AT THE BOWL TONIGHT

The French program of the Hollywood Bowl midsummer music series will be given this evening. Olga Steeb is the soloist, and the program will include Auber's overture from "Fra Diavolo;" the L'Arlesienne suite No. 1, of Bizet, and the ballet "Coppelia" of Delibes.

Olga Steeb is too well known in Los Angeles to need more than an announcement of her appearance to draw an audience. She is an artist to her finger tips, has the sound technique necessary to the performance of such a work as the Saint Saens G Minor Concerto, which she will play tonight.

This is the first time any artist has attempted the performance of a piano concerto out of doors, and only after an exhaustive test had been made of the acoustics of the bowl would she consent to do it.

"LIFE'S DARN FUNNY"

Life's darn funny, as anyone will admit who has tried life in the strange land of dreams and disappointments known as Bohemia. "Life's Darn Funny" has been chosen for the title of Viola Dana's latest Loew-Metro comedy, which is about a girl and boy artist. It comes to Loew's State Theater Sunday. William Farnum in "Shackles of Gold" is proving a strong drawing card this week at Loew's. The story is that of a dock laborer who rises to be a financial power but fails to gain the love of his wife.

CHINESE SLAUGHTER STYLED "WORST YET"

[BY A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

SHANGHAI (China) June 21.—Missionaries and others in touch with the recent uprising of mutinous troops in Kiangsi Province declare that the full extent of this horror never may be known.

A score of community centers were laid waste and thousands of innocent inhabitants were slaughtered ruthlessly. No foreigners, however, were killed.

The words "bandit" and "soldier" virtually are synonymous in many parts of China and the people of the country, long ago became accustomed to risings of a similar nature, but the Kiangsi outbreak in the unrestrained loosing of evil forces and the wanton slaughter and destruction is said to surpass anything of a like nature in the past decade's history of China.

The mutiny started among troops sent by Gen. Wu Pei-Fu to block Sun Yat Sen's advance into Kiangsi. These troops under Tsai Chen-Hsun met defeat at the hands of Sun's southerners and in their retreat a few got out of hand. The fever of revolt spread quickly until between 10,000 and 15,000 men were involved. Some of the detachments shot down their leaders who tried to keep them in check.

The mutineers swept over the country, looting, burning and killing, devastating towns and rural communities alike. The city of Kiangfu was almost entirely wiped out and many hundreds of its inhabitants slain. The lives of upward of 100 foreign missionaries were in peril, but all escaped.

NEW POLLOCK PLAY PREMIERE AT MAJESTIC

BY EDWIN SCHALLERT

The unrelenting determination of an idealist may sometimes become a thrilling thing, but the question is, does it make a good play? This problem, among others, was presented to a brilliant first-night audience by Channing Pollock with the production of "The Fool" last night at the Majestic Theater. There has seldom been as much agitation in the gilded circle of celebrity as there was over the double debut, in which the party of the second part, and perhaps of the first part, was Richard Bennett, who portrayed the star role. Stars upon stars came to attend this premiere. They appeared in clusters and constellations. The atmosphere was as professional on one side of the footlights as it was on the other, and the reception accorded the new Pollock brain child was typical of the good will of the profession toward any event of national dramatic importance. Such an event, of course, the first giving of "The Fool" may be considered.

The pleasant thoughts which Mr. Pollock's play arouses are those concerned with his situations and with his dialogue. These have their pungent moments. I recall a number of lines that were unusually bright and characteristic of personality. I recall several situations which prove the skill of the craftsman. And the climax of the play comes with a force and emphasis that are sensational and moving. Here Mr. Pollock seemed to write with his heart and with his eye on the object.

The unpleasant recollections that Mr. Pollock's play brings are the long harangues and recitatives on the subject of labor and capital, and their conflict. These are needlessly long and needlessly insistent. The characters lose themselves in argument, and become stuffed dummies taking sides at a sort of round-table discussion.

The big point of the Christ ideal, which Mr. Pollock would, I believe, symbolize in his play, is submerged beneath the sea of discussion and, except for a very obvious stage trick in the first act, and the general misunderstanding of the leading character, fails to come to the surface, except at the climax, where it stirs the emotion with its dynamism.

Briefly we have the plot of the man who sacrifices all for the sake of his ideal of living according to the true Christ standard. We have the woman who dreads the poverty that may ensue from her marriage to this man and who consequently forsakes him. We have the lay figures of the capitalist, the laboring man, the agitator, the rounder, the tyrant and the demi-moderne.

Not unfamiliar are these on the stage. In fact, they are far more in evidence there than they are in life. Yet they have possibilities, and after finishing the unnecessarily long planting of their types, Mr. Pollock really does use them with a facile and potent technique and feeling.

That "The Fool" will have a successful run I do not doubt. The circumstances of its premiere are such that they will carry it along. The splendid naturalness of Mr. Bennett in an entirely artificial role will also prove a great allure. At the same time, I feel that there is considerable to be mended and eliminated before one can fairly promise lasting life for Mr. Pollock's latest play. I believe, however, that these changes may be accomplished. As it is now, we are talked to death by too many characters and are given altogether too little of action and of life until the latter part of the play, which contains the gist of its fine message and where a really powerful sweep is felt.

Mr. Bennett's performance will be a living memory. So subtle, so facile is he in the rendering of every line and gesture that even with the first-night faults there was little or nothing to his discredit in the interpretation. He is one of the few on the American stage who cultivate and preserve the illusion of doing and not acting. His repression and his fire were in vivid contrast several times, and they filled the air with their contending vibrations.

Nana Bryant presents an even and studied performance as Cara Jewett, who forsakes life for the golden cage. She works sincerely, and with faith in the role's possibilities. Cliff Thompson gave the impression of being and not acting the rounder, which is the best tribute to this excellence. Frederick Vogeding thundered his way to applause through a long but man-interest diatribe, accompanied by the "Barcarolle," but gave a portrayal that grew rapidly in conviction and strength. Gus P. Thomas was a delight in cheering character role. Frankling Pangborn, Sara Sothern, Fred Cummings, E. Forrest Taylor, Henry Hall, Norma Feusier and Fred Manley also deserve more than the brief mention which space and time now permit.

Both Mr. Bennett and Mr. Pollock made clever speeches at the end of the climaxing act, which thrilled the audiences into an ovation.

COLLINS EXPECTS WAR TO END SOON

NO REPORT OF DE VALERA RECEIVED SINCE HE MADE ESCAPE

BY PAUL WILLIAMS

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DUBLIN, July 13.—That the Irish war will soon be over is the expectation of the government. Michael Collins is now in supreme command of the army with Richard Mulcahy as Minister of Defense, and Gen. O'Duffy, his chief assistant. Gen. O'Duffy will be sent to command the south-western division. Joseph McGrath, the Minister of Labor, becomes director of intelligence. Dalrmid O'Hegarty is director of organization, and Kevin O'Higgins assistant adjutant-general.

Another important step is the suspension of the courts operating under the Dail Eireann. These have duplicated the work of the regular courts, causing confusion.

COUNCIL OF CASA GRANDE PASSES RESOLUTION OF CONDEMNATION

CASA GRANDE (Ariz.) July 13. The anonymous letter writer has reached such a rare degree of standing in Casa Grande as to receive official condemnation. At a late meeting of the Common Council of Casa Grande, the following resolution was passed:

"Whereas certain local citizens have been receiving anonymous letters reflecting upon their characters and,

"Whereas, in the judgment of the council and in the judgment of every rightminded citizen, the sending of such letters is in the greatest degree cowardly and un-American, therefore be it,

"Resolved that unqualified disapproval be expressed over the sending of the letters and request made that all recipients of such communications hand them over to the city authorities that proper action may be taken against the writers."

WOUNDS WIFE, KILLS HIMSELF

Husband Fires Three Shots Into Woman's Body

Fourth Through Own Brain; Victim Still Living

Jealousy Ascribed as Motive for Tragedy

While police detectives were making every effort to identify the girl slain Wednesday on Montecito Drive, another tragedy was enacted in an apartment at 317 South Flower street yesterday morning. Frank A. Weber, an employee of a local rubber stamp establishment, fired three bullets into his wife's body and then killed himself with a fourth.

The wife, Mrs. Myrtle Weber, 33 years of age, though suffering from bullet wounds in the neck, chest and side, was still living at the Receiving Hospital at a late hour yesterday. Weber, shot through the head, died instantly.

Jealousy was the cause given by Mrs. Weber for her husband's actions. While her wounds were being treated by Police Surgeon Dunsmore at the Receiving Hospital, Mrs. Weber painfully made a statement to Police Detectives Lloyd and Roberds, in which she declared that her husband, because she refused to live with him, became insanely jealous of her.

"He came to my rooms this morning," she said, "in a mad rage. Wednesday we had conversed with each other and had come to a property settlement agreement. I thought at the time that the disputes between us were at an end. We had been separated for some time, and so he said he would go one way while I went mine. When he visited me this morning I tried for a little while to calm him, but he was so angry he would not listen to me. Suddenly, telling me that he would not live without me and would not let me live without him, he drew the revolver from his pocket and fired."

When Detectives Lloyd and Roberds, in response to a telephone call from W. S. Wilbur, proprietor of the hotel at 317 South Flower street, arrived on the scene they stated they found Weber's body lying in the bathroom, and Mrs. Weber unconscious in a corner of the room. They immediately took the wounded woman to the Receiving Hospital.

APPEARED RECONCILED

According to Attorney Edwin Earhart, with offices in the Fay Building, Mrs. Weber came to him on business last Friday. She said she had had trouble with her husband six or eight weeks before, had taken a trip East to visit relatives and had received several threatening letters from Weber in which he said he did not want her to return. When the two met in Mr. Earhart's office Friday, Mr. Weber seemed very penitent. He deeded all the furnishings of their Boyle Heights home to his wife and the two agreed to live separately.

The Webers visited the attorney again on the following Saturday, apparently very much reconciled, Mr. Earhart said. On Monday morning Mr. Weber came alone and wanted to know why Mrs. Weber had not sent for the furniture. He telephoned the office several times during the afternoon for the same reason.

Mr. Weber evinced a great love for his wife on all these visits, Mr. Earhart declared. He talked of killing himself a number of times, but said that he would not harm her and asked her to return to him.

PREMEDITATION SHOWN

That Weber had premeditated on his actions was disclosed in a note which the detectives found in his pockets. A postscript to the message written on a loose sheet of note paper which the detectives say Weber wrote after his arrival at his wife's rooms yesterday morning read: "Going to her room this morning, I found her out of her room. Suspecting her to be in some one else's room, I wanted. This is the result."

The main body of the note which Weber had apparently written Wednesday evening read:

"To whom it may concern: The full details of this tragedy can be obtained of Mrs. Alvin Easterberry, 418 Sloat street. Since our marriage, eleven years ago, my wife has led a dual life. I have forgiven and tried to forget. I have nothing to live for as I love her. Why not take her with me instead of leaving her for the goat of other men? Three hundred dollars in Hellman Day and Night Bank, a little money at 3111½ East Side Boulevard, and all our personal belongings can be sold, which will defray all our expenses for burial. My wife's body can be sent to Crystal Lake, Ill., and mine to 131 Evans avenue, Aurora, Ill. Losing one of my fingers at the L. A. Rubber Stamp Company, I will also be benefited by insurance, which will help on expenses for burial. I think my wife is now at 317 South Flower street, and has rented a flat at 1434 Shatto street, where mail has been forwarded to both of us.

[Signed]

"FRANK A. WEBER."

Mrs. Weber's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Seth Carpenter, live at Crystal Lake, Ill., according to the detectives.

Husband Broke Jail, Wife Says, Seeks Divorce

After being arrested on a charge of failing to provide for his two children, Lester D. Ingram escaped in a jail break, according to the statement of Mrs. Marie Ingram, who yesterday was granted a divorce by Judge Summerfield. The husband failed to hold a job longer than two weeks, the wife stated. Since the jail break the husband has remained in town, the wife asserted, but has not been rearrested.
